Unusual Value-In Tires for the Smaller Cars

30x3 1/2 Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread $23.50
30x3 1/2 Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are thick, strong tubes that reinforce casings properly. Why risk a good casing with a cheap tube? Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost little more than tubes of less merit. 30x3 1/2 size in water-proof bag $4.50

Not only is characteristic Goodyear merit conspicuous in Goodyear Tires for the smaller cars, but ordinarily the first cost is found to be not greater than that of other tires; often it is actually less.

The combination of unusual value in first cost and very low final cost, of course, is a result of Goodyear experience, expertness and care employed as insistently in the making of 30x3-, 30x3 1/2- and 31x4-inch tires as it is in the construction of the famous Goodyear Cord Tires used on the highest-priced automobiles.

For this reason more cars using these sizes were factory-equipped last year with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

Get this unusual tire value to enjoy on your Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell, or other car using one of these sizes, at the nearest Goodyear Service Station. Get these tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes at this station.

GOODYEAR

Is Our Prosperity Sound?

As a nation we are prosperous. We are proud of the fact. We exult. The wheels in our mills and factories are humming; the picks are ringing in the mines; exports and imports maintain a gratifying relation and proportion; business is good, we say; wages are phenomenal in the eyes of Europe; starting to ourselves; people are buying, buying, buying in tremendous volume, and recklessly.

But is this prosperity fixed upon a firm base? Can it last? Are there not historical precedents which should bid us question, fear take precautions against a day of collapse? Many thoughtful students are crying a warning here. The cheaper cost of labor in Europe must have its effect here. If other nations can sell to us with advantage under existing exchange rates, is it not reasonable to expect a flood of foreign business to invade our shores? We do not desire that essential tariff measures be nullified. We do not desire that argosies of cheap factories be dumped here in competition with our own, and wedo not wish to contemplate competition with these cheap factories in the marts of the world. It is not difficult to foresee the possibility, perhaps the probability, of a bursting of our iridescent bubble of rosy prosperity. Other nations have experienced that. It would go hard with us to awaken from this purple dream of splendid business impulse and activity to the vision of industrial wrecks. We do not wish to see labor called upon to suffer a mighty reversion. The shock of falling wages would rock the nation, and armies of unemployed would become such a menace as before has not threatened the firm foundations of the Government. The prosperity which follows war, especially such a war as we recently experienced, seldom is permanent in character. Now, more than ever, must we bend our energies to increased production, to more rigid economy, to individual and national co-operation to meet and deal with the present exchange rate. Prices of labor and commodities must come down. Enquire.

THE FINE BELGIAN DRAFT STALLION

Season

1920

Season

Don DeGozee

The Belgian Draft Stallion, foaled in 1908, will make the present season at my stable one-half mile from Big Bone Baptist church, Boone county, Ky., at $10 to insure a colt, money due when the fact is known, the mare is parted with or leaves the county.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE:

DON DEGOZEE, despite his great size and weight, is well balanced throughout, perfectly proportioned and symmetrically built. He has as light action as a stallion of much smaller type, and his disposition is much better than is usually found in horses of blood strains. He is a beautiful dark brown, 17 hands high, weighs 1800 pounds, has a broad foot, heavy bone, fine style and action. This great breed of draft horses is especially known for better action than any other draft horse, heavy, good bone, good hoofs and as kind, gentle workers.

DON DEGOZEE'S dam, Della Wire, Brown mare, the great draft show mare of Campbell county, Kentucky, sired by Bayard DeGozee 2188, whose Belgium Stud Book number is 21670, bred by Mr. Bailleux E. of Gozee, sired by Morton (312), by Brilliant (709), out of Coatte (703), dam of Catharine DeGozee (21085), she by Lion (766) out of Marie (2421).

Great care will be taken to prevent accidents but I will not be responsible should any occur.

THE LARGE BONE SURE-BREDING JACK,

MIKE

Will make the season at the same time and place and on the same terms.

MIKE is 15 1/2 hands high, 7 years old next August, is black with white points, is from the famous Bodie Jack, and is the best Mule getter in Kentucky, his colts having sold as high as $120.00 at weaning time.

Local Happenings.

Ernest Ryle, who has a good clerkship in the Covington branch postoffice at Latonia, passed thru Burlington last Friday afternoon enroute to Bellevue to attend the High School commencement that night. Mr. Ryle has a good position in the postal business and his efficiency in the work has secured several promotions for him in the past few years. He has many friends in this county who are glad to know that he continues to grow more and more popular with his employees.

The Recorder has sent out quite a number of subscription expiration notices the past few weeks, and very little attention has been given them. Under present conditions a paper can not exist unless its subscribers keep paid up closely, and those to whom notices have been sent and those whom notices will be sent, are asked to give them prompt attention. Better still—don't wait to be notified by postal card that your subscription has expired.

The Recorder is in receipt of a box of "Richard P. Ernst" cigars presented to it by Mr. P. Wilson, of Covington, who is boasting Mr. Ernst for U. S. Senator. Mr. Ernst is the Republican nominee for U. S. Senator, and a Republican is to have the office there is not one in the State the Recorder would prefer to Mr. Ernst. The cigars will be delivered by postal card and Mr. Wilson will accept thanks for them.

An excellent idea has been suggested by the Director of Public Health at Philadelphia, Dr. Furbush, to get rid of the mosquito pest and the pest of other flying insects as well. Dr. Furbush plans to set up in various parts of the city huge suction pipes to work like vacuum cleaners, with electric lights on the interior to lure the mosquitoes into the range of the suction.

John Scott, an old citizen of this county died last Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jas. Botts, in Indiana. He had been in poor health for several years. The remains were buried at Bellevue last Sunday. He had a large number of relatives in East Bend neighborhood, this county. He was the father of Mrs. Chas. Maurer.

Henry Clow and Pepper Smith, of Bellevue, spent a day last week over on Woolper creek, and caught about all the fine suckers they could carry home. They were days spent for them, and they say they never saw as many large suckers on a string as they took home with them.

Last Monday morning found a very large percent of the intended corn land in this county unbroken while very little corn had been planted, the planting having been confined to the river bottom land which is sandy.

Charles Moore is putting the material on his ground out on the Bellevue pike preparatory to building his residence. He has had it stored for some time on account of not being able to secure carpenters.

Irvin Rouse, residing on west High street, has sold his property to Albert Beck. He and Mrs. Rouse will leave this for San Antonio, Texas, for the benefit of the latter's health.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Remember the entertainment at Library Hall next Saturday night by the High School pupils. It will be interesting from start to finish and worth the price of admission. Come and bring all the family.

Wallace Green, of the Bellevue neighborhood, was in Burlington last Saturday and said he had planted his watermelon. He expected to have them to plant them again in about ten days.

Stanley Eddins, who has been in the city several weeks undergoing medical treatment, was at home a short time last Sunday. He expects to come home this week to stay.

Judging from the number of automobiles the southern dealers are taking over the Dixie Highway, southerners are liberal buyers of the motor car.

Chas. Watson, of Verona neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Monday and while in town made the Recorder a short call.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer and Miss Boss Hall, of Newport, were Saturday night guests at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall.

Shelby Cowen, of Covington, was a Sunday guest of his uncle, Mrs. Laura Martin and Miss Pinkie Cowen and his cousin, Miss Nell Martin.

The brag that Owenton is a modern Garden of Eden is perfectly correct and justified—there are plenty of snakes here!—Democrat.

Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick and children, spent last Sunday guests of her parents, Mrs. Albert Brown and family, near Hospital church.

BELLEVUE COMMENCEMENTSplendid Program Delighted the Large Audience.

The Baptist church at Bellevue was crowded to the friends of Bellevue High school who assembled to witness the graduating exercises. There were two Hi School graduates, Richard and Alpha Rogers, and three Common School graduates, Julius Smith, Soborn Brady and Garnett Dolph. The class address was delivered by Rev. Crume, of Latonia. In a very pleasing and entertaining manner and was instructive through. Splendid music for the occasion came from the city. Everything for the exercises had been well arranged and the program was gone through in the most perfect manner. Bellevue is justly proud of its school. It has been doing most excellent work for several years, and its good effects in that neighborhood are very noticeable.

Big Contract Moving Remains of Distillery.

George Markberry, of Florence, has several large trucks employed, moving the remains of the old Petersburg distillery material to Erlanger, from where it is being shipped to the purchaser, Clarence LeBus, at Paris, this State. When Mr. Markberry has completed his work, what was once one of the largest booze factories in Kentucky will be disappeared entirely from its original site, the material having been scattered to the four winds, most of it having been used in the construction of the large Odd-Fellows building in Petersburg, while Petersburg Baptist church building and that town's commodious High School building owe their existence largely to the cheap material secured for their construction from the remains of the distillery after it was dismantled. At one period in its history the distillery at Petersburg handled a great deal of the wheat, rye and corn of the farmers in this county, and for many years a large quantity of flour was made there. This was while the late William Snyder owned and operated the place. Mr. Markberry will receive $10,000 for removing the material to Erlanger.

BASE BALL.

Petersburg and Bellevue engaged in a game of ball at Bellevue on last Saturday afternoon which resulted in the one-sided score of 10 to 3 in favor of the Petersburg aggregation. Petersburg. Each side scored in the first inning which gave promise of a close game even if the score was ultimately large. The contest progressed Petersburg rapidly secured run after run due in a measure to their hitting of the ball. After a gallery of erratic playing of the Bellevue team, this being their first venture into the arena this season. Snelling, who twirled the game, to 3 by the Petersburg team. Several long smashes on the part of the lower river town boys but wild base running on their part in several instances proved costly to them.

Hebron base ball team visited Walton last Saturday and defeated the team there 11 to 6. At the beginning of the night the score was 6 to 5 in favor of Walton, but the Hebron boys went wild with their bats and made six runs, given out by the Hebron team. The game was a very exciting game and was enjoyed by the large crowd that witnessed it.

The Verona base ball team has been organized for the season and secured good grounds thru the determined efforts of the clubs best friend and most industrious promoter, Geo. W. Roberson. He believed the team will prove stronger than that of last year, and the management is anxious to see a county league organized for this season and will do all it can to bring about such an organization. Let the several teams in the county take up the league matter.

Of the approximately 1,400 students at the University of Kentucky, 174 have been selected from the graduates of the High School for exceptionally high standing. Among these is Miss Maude Asbury, of Petersburg. Professor and students alike know that Miss Asbury could always answer the hardest questions and do well any task assigned her, but none quite realized how admirably had been her work until one of the best students were selected and her name was among them. This number was divided into three classes, "High Distinction," "Distinction," and "Honorable Mention." Miss Asbury's standing of 24 entitled her to a place among the chosen few of "High Distinction."

The Willys light man struck the town last Friday and planted an advertisement in the Recorder that he would give money to handle the light in this county.

High School Graduating Class.

The following pupils compose this year's graduating class of the Boone County High School: Harvey Baker, Robert Vonnell, Clarence Herbstreit, Chester Goodridge, Joseph Hogan, Clifton Roberts, Arthur Eggleston, Edward Eggleston, Florence Eggleston, Mae Eggleston, Alice Walton, Elmer Walton, Ruby Walton, Helen Stephenson, Ida Mae Stephens, Bessie Aylor, Lydia Aylor, Mary Connor, Kathryn Kelly, Lee Nora Graves, Madeline Husy.

Markberry Sentenced for Life

Thomas Markberry was convicted of the murder of Jesse Glenn by the Bracken county circuit court at Brooksville last week. It will be remembered that the torso of Glenn was found buried on the farm of Markberry about a month after the murder was committed. Several articles belonging to Glenn was found hidden in the cellar of Markberry, while Markberry sold other articles known to have been the property of Glenn. He was arrested on suspicion and his final trial held at Brooksville last week, resulting in his being given a life sentence in the penitentiary.

A SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION.

The results of the convention held last night at Phoenix Hill should be, on the whole, highly gratifying to the Democratic party.

It was, in its results, a harmony convention. That is, each element of the party won something which it held to be highly important, and no disagreement developed in involving bitterness which will prevent united front in this State thru the coming campaign.

Senator Camden secured what most wished, the post of National chairman in the district. He secured the re-election of his candidate, Judge Hardin, as chairman of the State Executive and Central Committee; the personnel of those committees was somewhat improved; and the instructions for Cox, reported unanimously by the Resolutions Committee, were successful. All of this, led in the coming fight against J. Carroll, of the Fifth district, directed only the delegates-at-large to vote for Cox, and did not land them as to how long their support should be continued.

During the days preceding the convention the fight against one-man control of the party was waged in two instances, first to prevent the continuance of the control of Senator Stanley, and, later, to prevent the attempt made to elect Stanley. Senator Camden to take all the offices in sight. In both cases those standing for an uncontrollable party were successful. The fight had to be carried on all day yesterday. But the result of the convention, as outlined above, shows that the convention was controlled by no one man, which is as it should be. No one group got everything it wanted, and no faction was unopposed—the best possible proof of a free convention.

A fighting convention is an uncontrollable convention. Points were contested through the day and night—argued, debated, before committees on the floor of the convention itself. The results show the value of the fight. Had the effort not been made, it is probable that the convention would have fallen by default into the hands of some one man. Those who carried on the fight, ready to put the matter successfully, for a Democratic party, uncontrolled by any one group, deserve and have the gratitude of the rank and file of the party. No consideration of the convention would be complete without reference to Major Scott Bullitt as a presiding officer. In all particulars every element agreed that he was fair, just, courteous, clear and decisive, giving each side an opportunity for an equitable hearing before the convention.

The convention is over. The contested points are decided. All Democrats are ready to be in accord with the generous spirit shown by Colonel Taylor. In his address to the delegates, he made the choice of Mr. Camden be made unanimous. Everyone today has forgotten any ill-feeling that may have been engendered during the campaign next fall for the success of the Democratic ticket, State and national.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GOT THE BANNER.Burlington Won the County Banner From Union and Verona.

Burlington, Union and Verona High Schools engaged in the annual spelling contest for the county banner at Verona last Friday afternoon, Burlington bringing home the banner, which had been in possession of the Verona school since the last contest. Burlington missed five words, Verona seven and Union ten. This contest is looked forward to each school year with considerable interest on the part of the several High Schools in the county, and accepting the contest in such exercises is the most important event of the year. Burlington had won the banner on two previous occasions.

EYE NEEDS REGULAR BATHS.

For the daily care of the eyes there should be two baths. The body must have its bath. The face must have its cleansing. Why not the eyes? Especially as the eye with its thick lid and the fringe of eyelashes is a dust trap, and the slightest speck of dust allows the remains of the fringe of the lid may cause irritation of the lid and inflammation of the eye.

For the eyes daily bath I offer you the choice of several lotions. My favorite is, Ten ounces of purest rosewater. Apply with an eye cup, turning the eye cup upside down so that the half-ounce of water is completely washed by the contents of the cup. Hold it thus for 30 seconds, or if not uncomfortable, for a full minute. Throw away this rosewater. Rinse the glass and give the eye a second bath.

If the eyes are unduly irritated the bath can be repeated several times. Ordinarily a bath in the morning and one at night will keep the eyes in good health.

Some of my friends who have beautiful eyes prefer elderflower water to rosewater. It is equally good and should be applied in the same way.

Another excellent eye bath is one-half ounce of witch hazel; one-half ounce of distilled water. Shake well in bottle and apply with an eye glass. Another one I must tell you about that is most excellent for strengthening the eyes. Six drops of boracic acid one ounce of water.

A bath in borax water is highly beneficial and has the advantage of being always convenient. Even while traveling one may always carry a box of borax. More over, it is safe, because the borax will only form a 4 per cent solution, it is, only 4 per cent of it will be absorbed by water.

Borax bath is very strengthening. If the eyes be delicate or the person so prejudiced against experiments that she is not willing to introduce this substance directly into the eyes, a small handkerchief or a soft cloth dipped into borax water and pressed upon the eyelids is both effective and soothing.

The old-fashioned remedy of cold tea leaves pressed upon the lids has value, not from the tea leaves intrinsically, but from the cool, moist contact. Cloths dipped in water are quite as good.—New York American.

Plenty of Fruit—Sugar Scarce.

An all around good fruit crop this year will be somewhat of a relief in the matter of the high cost of living. It is true, but to look for sugar with which to preserve large quantities of fruit is not at all encouraging, but the experienced housewife will be able to introduce sugar into her diet, otherwise most successfully the sugar shortage, and as the canning and preserving season approaches the sugar shortage will be a real problem for the handling of fruit notwithstanding the scarcity of sugar. But it is hoped that the sugar famine will be over and that the sugar shortage will be a thing of the past.

Has Quit the Chicken Business.

After 20 years experience they would bring back practically nothing. The man who has been in the chicken business for 20 years and has a good range and mash stuff with my labor was a dead loss for 20 months up to the first of this year. I have been in the chicken business with all I have ever had. I have cost me $137.50. Sold all at market price and received all told $137.50, leaving a wonderful profit of $43.75 on 20 months' investment. I had on an average of about 50 chickens for the twenty months. If you want the business you are welcome to it.

County Stone Quarry.

A road has been opened to the county stone quarry on Gunpowder creek a short distance below Lexington, and very large lots of stone to be used on the Burlington and Florence pike will be taken out and put on the road this summer. Some repairs were being made on the road in the Burlington end of the road in the way of leveling and rolling. The road needs renovating the full length.

BETTER HOGS AND BETTER FEEDING.Better Feeding.

There are two factors in connection with the hog business which are always of extreme importance—(1) quality of hogs fed, and (2) quality of feeding done. However, under the unfortunate conditions of high priced feed and low priced hogs which have existed during the past six months, the two factors mentioned have become even more important than before. Another word, the man who has fed good hogs and has done good feeding has been able to pull through the hog market slump, so far, in fairly good shape; but the farmer who has been feeding an inferior grade of hogs in a common, inefficient way has lost money, and the more hogs he has fed the more money he has lost.

There never has been a stronger argument for better hogs and better feeding than the experience of the past six months. It is impossible to say too much in favor of better hogs. In fact, quality in all classes of livestock is of extreme importance, good quality being responsible for the difference between profit and loss in the feed-lot. Good hogs are more efficient users of food than poor hogs. In any certain amount of feed put into good hogs will make more pork than if fed to poor hogs. In some ways, which is difficult to explain, the good hog does not feed, but assimilates and stores in the form of flesh in its own body, a greater proportion of the materials from the feed than the inferior animal.

In this connection, mention should be made of the boar as a pig, and as a sire. The boar is a pig, and as a sire, a pig should be a good pig. This should be changed slightly. The slogan should be, "Give a GOOD pure-bred boar." Eastern pure-bred sows will feed their pigs to all classes of animals, as well as other kinds of scrub. The fact that a boar is pure-bred, even though he may be registered, does not mean that he is necessarily a good animal or a good sire. A good, pure bred boar is the kind to seek and the kind to sow with. A common boar should be given no consideration as a breeder. The quicker he is sent to the shambles the better.

The above discussion relative to better hogs is very true and highly important, and yet it will benefit a man but little to get better hogs if he does not feed them properly. The two, better hogs and better feeding—must go hand in hand for best results. On the whole, hogs are fed as well as they could be with but little extra effort and actually less expense. This is quite true in some sections of Kentucky, especially in the Eastern part of the State, so that much pork produced on Eastern Kentucky farms is produced at an actual loss, costing farmers more than it would to buy it.

Corn, meat, kitchen waste and grass are the feeds commonly depended upon in Eastern Kentucky for the raising of hogs. None of these contain much protein and mineral matter—these materials in feeds which produce proper proportions of protein and mineral matter are absolutely necessary in rations for hogs to produce satisfactory results. The development. The younger the animal, the greater are the proportions of these two materials necessary. Hogs need but small amounts.

To supply sufficient amounts of protein and mineral matter is undoubtedly one of the outstanding problems in feeding hogs in Eastern Kentucky. Probably the very best answer to that problem is TANKAGE. Tankage is a highly concentrated feed, containing large proportions of protein and mineral matter. It combines to excellent advantage with feeds which are deficient in these two materials. For example, excellent results are obtained from feeding corn and tankage when properly mixed.

About four per cent of the live weight of a hog in grain feed per day is considered a full feed; that is, for example, a 50 pound pig should get about 2 pounds of the corn and tankage mixture, mixed properly, for each day. For a pig of that weight, as shown above, per day. A 100-pound sow should get about 4 pounds of the mixture per day, etc. The hogs are running on good pasture and the amount of grain fed per day can be reduced to 2-3 per cent of their weight.

Year in and year out, as a permanent business, raising hogs is a good business. It is the man who gets in and stays in, who makes the business a study, paying attention to details, feeding good hogs and feeding them properly, who prospers. The man who does not appreciate the necessity of doing these things will have to leave the business to some other business.—By O. G. Hankins, Swine Specialist, University of Kentucky.

Memorial Services to be Held.

The members of the Boone County of the American Legion will hold memorial services Sunday afternoon, May 30th, at Florence, Spaworth, a program will be announced in next week's paper. This service will be for the public as well as members of the Legion, and it is hoped that the public will attend.

SPLENDID RECITALMiss Mattie Kreylich and Pupils Assisted by Mrs. Fred Morris, Entertain a Large Audience.

The Boone County High School Class of Expression, whose instructor is Miss Mattie Kreylich, gave a recital at Library Hall on Saturday night, May 8th. The program was one which was replete with meritorious and enjoyable presentations which is characteristic of any effort of this nature whose participants are those who have received instruction under Miss Kreylich.

The first number on the program was an excellent recitation by Miss Madeline Huey after which Mrs. Fred Morris delighted the audience with a vocal solo. Following Mrs. Morris were several more recitations by the pupils of Miss Kreylich, namely, Misses Ruth Walton, Isabel Duncan and Lee Nora Graves, all of whom admirably succeeded in pleasing the large audience. Again those present were entertained with the singing of which Mrs. Morris next sang "That Old Familiar Song," "The Last Rose of Summer." Continued applause caused Mrs. Morris to respond with "Anna Laurie," the singing of which seemed to strike a responsive chord in the breast of most of the listeners. Three more recitations by Mr. Clayton Brown, Miss Helen Stephenson and Alice Walton respectively, concluded the opening part of the program.

The next number on the bill was a dialogue in which Mr. Sylvanus Johns, an old bachelor is in somewhat of a dilemma because of having to receive under his care the child of a deceased friend. When the daughter arrives she proves to be somewhat different from what Johns was led to believe of her and eventually "Emily" turns out to be the ward of another friend of Johns who has been sent to him to escape the efforts of her scheming and "Johns" father who is trying to locate her. Being of a lightsome disposition she soon awakens our friend Sylvanus from his lethargy and is actually teaching him the steps of the "fox-trot" as the curtain descends. Miss Helen Stephenson as "Emily" and Mr. Brown as "Johns" presented their roles in a splendid manner as concerns both actions and intonation.

The concluding playlet was one whose theme was laid in the kitchen of Miss Abel and the action is furnished by a group of neighbors who have gathered for the purpose of arranging some way to get rid of their neighbor who has just received word of the sending to her of her dead sisters little boy. It would be difficult to try and analyze any particular one in the cast and delineate their good points there fore it can only be said that the whole thing in its entirety was most effective. Each one so perfectly acting his or her part that it was hard to believe that one was witnessing a performance given by anyone other than the actors who follow the stage for a livelihood. Miss Alice Walton as Miss Abel, Ruth Walton as the old Grandma who is so tired of being with the carping rags, Robt. Youell as Ezra, the cordwood man, Clayton Brown as Peter the extremely bashful lover of Inez, the daughter of Mrs. Abel, and played by Gwendolyn Goodridge, Isabel Duncan as Miss Moran, the possessor of at least six incurable diseases, Lee Nora Graves as Mrs. Trot, whose worries are divided between the arrival of the boy and the discovery of a buffalo-bug in her parlor carpet and lastly by Mrs. Morris as the neighbor whose plight has aroused so much sympathy in the breasts of her friends—all were good and each did their part nobly in presenting a playlet which was hugely enjoyed.

Without meaning any disparagement to the others who did so nobly to make the whole effort a successful one it must be said that the best was saved until the last as the final number was a recitation by Miss Kreylich given in the negro dialect and make-up. It must be confessed that the critic himself lacks sufficient knowledge of the art to adequately convey to anyone other than the actors attempting to praise the efforts of Miss Kreylich. He can only say that as yet he has never seen any actor who could make her characters so skillfully live, breathe and speak their parts. As usual her presentation was received with much applause and she was rewarded with another short selection in the same vein.

Sold $400 Team of Horses.

Charles Westaby sold his $400 team of horses to Fred Lewin, the road contractor, on a day last week, which is the first time in his recollection that he has been teaming ever since he was a small boy, and to be without a team of good horses gives Mr. Westaby very much of the "fish out of water" feeling.

New York—There are 611,900 veterans of the World War dependent on the bounty of the United States for future existence, at annual cost of $225,000,000 according to Dr. W. C. Rucker, Chief Medical Adviser of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, who reports this number has been discharged from the army and navy with disabilities.

These figures, said to represent the first authentic tabulation, were made public here by the committee for aid to disabled veterans and referendum on the bonus.

Getting Ready for Business.

The parties who have the contract for constructing the concrete road from Erlanger to the fair grounds at Florence is making arrangements to begin the work, having put some of their machinery on the ground last week. It is hoped that there will be no delay in the construction work and that it will be completed at the earliest possible moment.

Basket Ball at Walton.

The Independence basket ball team defeated the Walton team at Walton last Saturday 11 to 0. It was the first time Walton had been defeated on its own ground, and the first time Walton ever failed to score in a game. The younger boys, owing to a lack of team work, were defeated 33 to 5, while the Walton girls won their game 11 to 2. The Independence team expects to make a good showing at the school tournament soon to be held at Dry Ridge.

THE CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Hupmobile

When you stop to ask yourself if the Hupmobile literally is the best car of its class in the world, you must not overlook the real wonderful character of service it gives. By service, we mean more than long life and Hupmobile economy—which are proverbial. We mean the faithfulness and the dependability of The Comfort Car—a willingness of response and steadiness of performance which warm a driver's heart. It is the positively unusual thing which the Hupmobile does—not now and then, but habitually—which make people believe it is the best car of its class in the world.

WORLD'S TOBACCO PROSPECT

The following article is taken from the Courier-Journal, and is timely and important to tobacco growers. It was written by John R. Humphreys, formerly of the Marketing Division of the United States Department of Agriculture, and now Chief of Bureau of Markets of Kentucky Experiment Station.

After a careful investigation into the condition of tobacco markets of the United States and such foreign countries as information can be secured from, and based entirely upon a normal production per acre for the tobacco acreage now in sight, the following report for the information of tobacco growers and buyers is submitted:

The acreage to be devoted to tobacco in the United States will probably increase in 1920 by about 10 per cent over 1919. Kentucky will change the least in acreage of any of the great tobacco-producing States.

Indications are that crop acreage will be increased from 10 per cent to 11 per cent in the Carolinas and Virginia, and about 500 per cent in Georgia. The explanation of the great increase in the latter lies in the fact that farmers in Georgia are taking to tobacco as a means of utilizing areas attacked by the boll weevil and now unsuitable for cotton.

Foreign acreage seems to have increased very little, but the condition of the India crop is greatly improved over that of the same period last year. With a normal production therefore, there should be a considerable increase in tonnage over that produced in 1919.

At the same time I made my report in 1919 there were vast quantities held in the hands of buyers and in storage in warehouses in the United States, but as cited in my report, Europe constituted a hungry market. This year about equal, if not greater stocks are held in the U. S. and England, Holland and Scandinavia find themselves with markets glutted with tobacco shipped by the United States, and other agencies, from August to December, 1919, at which time the overplus of tobacco in the United States was lifted and moved across the Atlantic, either for cash or on credit, in order to free this country's markets for the coming selling season.

Nothing like three times as much tobacco was exported during 1919 as normally sent out by the country, and the demand for this tobacco in Europe, although great, was not sufficient with the available outlets, to consume it in any great measure as fast as it was being shipped. As a result the glut above mentioned now exists in some European countries.

We have therefore, this year a full market in America, as was the case last year, with the difference that Europe is not demanding tobacco in as great a quantity as before. In fact, some English firms are willing to export tobacco from England in order to lessen their stock.

With the acreage now planned, if normal yield per acre is produced, the price of a Burley, except the highest type of cigarette leaf, should show a marked falling off during the market season of 1920, and even the highest quality leaf may suffer from competition of the Virginia type, if this is produced in anywhere near the quality indicated by the acreage planned.

Since 1917 there has been a constant trend toward an overproduction of tobacco, but this was not felt because of the sudden economic changes which came about at the close of the war, and the high prices of last year's Burley market were a direct result of the lifting of surplus stocks in this country, and a partial failure of the Easter American crops, together with a reflected advantage from a short crop in India which caused Burley tobacco to be exported in far greater quantities than ever before.

With these advantages nullified, it seems reasonable to expect Burley tobacco to recede in price in the market of 1920. Land suitable for the production of high type Burley should, however, produce a good revenue.

The situation in dark tobacco is entirely different from that affecting Burley for while Burley is chiefly used in domestic consumption, in a country which can afford to pay high prices for manufactured tobacco, the Dark Tobacco of Kentucky finds a ready market chiefly in European countries, and, more especially in France and Italy. The present deplorable situation in dark tobacco is a direct result of two factors.

The present situation in foreign exchange, and the fact that growers were unwilling or unable to market their tobacco early in the season.

The first factor acts more as a blockage of trade than as a depressor of prices, as the rate of foreign exchange in Italy and France is such that tobacco at any fair prices to American growers represents an exorbitant expenditure when translated into French or Italian currency. This situation makes trading, in any large quantity, almost impossible, as the power of the consuming public to purchase tobacco at such prices is limited.

The buyer in purchasing tobacco for these countries must also take into consideration the speculative feature involved in varying tobacco prices and shifting exchange rates which make any dealing in this connection more than ordinarily hazardous.

The second factor is accounted for by the fact that Italy in sending tobacco to France and Italy has allowed other countries to supply partially the demand which existed at the time of the armistice and which exists today.

to a great extent. France is likely to become a heavier buyer of dark tobacco within the near future, provided the English exchange rectifies itself, because any improvement in English is quite likely to be reflected in an improvement in French exchange rates.

This statement does not apply as strongly if at all, to Italian exchange, and hence the situation as to an Italian market for American tobacco is not encouraging. It does not seem reasonable, therefore, to expect a recovery in dark tobacco prices until these abnormal conditions are relieved.

Miss Irene and Wilma Scott spent Saturday night and Sunday with their grandparents on Tanglefoot ridge.

The boys here speak in the highest terms of the treatment they received at Burlington visiting the K. of P. Lodge.

Farmers are very backward with their spring work. There was less acreage of wheat sown in East Bend last fall than ever known before and it is in very poor condition.

Ed. Hankinson has a car that is almost human in action. His father tells us no matter how much of a hurry Ed. is when he gets to a certain house it invariably has engine trouble and delays him about two hours.

We were amused by two of our young ladies talking about the girls of Rabbit Hash, whereupon one said, "Oh, Ethel! I just couldn't live in that place. They tell me the girls up there buy their shoes by the pound and wear cotton hose with a transparency of a gunny sack. So many old bachelors, too."

Surely East Bend is getting to be a big farming community. Any fair day standing on the hill overlooking the fertile bottoms you can see several tractors drawing from two to three plows plowing from 10 to 15 acres apiece a day, and in an adjoining field you can see five or six teams plowing on one land. Surely the people in East Bend are hustlers.

Since having so much improved machinery, farming has become a pleasure instead of a drudgery.

Lexington — Enterprise, a thoroughbred brood mare, valued at $800, belonging to Chas. S. Persymann, was killed by an interurban car on the Paris pike. The horse was frightened at a speeding automobile and eluded into the interurban car.

HON. RICHARD P. ERNST.

ERNST ENTERS SENATE RACE

CANDIDATE NOTED FOR EXTENSIVE CHARITY WORK

EDUCATOR AND "Y" LEADER

Ardent Supporter of Movement
To Wipe Out Illiteracy

It is hardly necessary to introduce Richard P. Ernst, whose candidacy for the United States Senate has just been announced, to the average Kentuckian.

His name has appeared throughout the state in connection with charitable movements, war campaigns, church and missionary work and drives to aid the schools and school teachers, especially in the mountain districts.

His charitable work, aggressiveness and progressiveness in civic movements and personal popularity have made him one of the most generally admired men in Northern Kentucky.

His extensive work in the interests of his state and its people began immediately upon Mr. Ernst's graduation from the famous Old Centre College, Danville, where he was valedictorian of his class.

Admitted to Bar.
He was admitted to the bar in Kenton county after examination by Senator John W. Stevenson and Judge William R. Arthur and since has practiced law in Covington and Cincinnati with the same aggressiveness and success that have featured every movement worth while into which he has directed his efforts.

Gleaning over the long list of his activities one can see that he continually has enlisted himself in movements in which he could accomplish best results for the people.
As trustee and a member of the Executive Committee of Old Centre College, Kentucky State University at Lexington, and of Pikeville College, his excellent advice and assistance in matters of importance have been extremely beneficial to the students.

Wars On Illiteracy.

Recently he has taken a deep interest in the campaign teachers are waging for increased salaries and has been taking active steps to secure higher pay both for the teachers of the state and for the professors in our colleges and universities. The mountain schools especially appeal to him and he has been an ardent supporter of the movement to wipe out illiteracy and to offer residents of the mountain districts better facilities for education. Mr. Ernst's continuous help has been received by the churches of the state, regardless of denomination. He is an elder and succeeded his father as superintendent of the Sunday-school, their terms of service covering a period of nearly 30 years. He has been looking after educational and missionary work in the mountains, as chairman of the State Committee of his church, and has succeeded in more than doubling the amount heretofore given for this purpose.

And his work does not end there. He is president in the Covington Y. M. C. A. and a member of the National War Council. As head of the Y. M. C. A. he has been mainly instrumental in erecting one of the most complete and modern buildings to be found.

Son in Active Service.

He was active in every form of war work and gave continuously of his time, labor and money, whenever called upon. His only son was serving at the front in France, as a captain in the regular army, when the armistice was signed. He had entered the army as a private during the Mexican trouble and later passed his examinations at Washington, winning a second lieutenantcy. Mr. Ernst's son-in-law, John P. Darnall, of Flemingsburg, volunteered as a private and also was in active service at the front.

His wide and extensive business and professional experiences, as counselor and adviser to many large financial and manufacturing concerns, has been of unlimited value to his state and community, as he has been called upon many times to give advice when matters of his moment were being considered.

Good Republican Record.

Beginning as a Congressman in Covington, he was kept in office by members of both parties until he insisted on resigning. For many years he was on the State Central Committee and for four years served as its chairman. He has represented his district a number of times at National Conventions and also has been one of the "Big Four" from his state. It was he, while state chairman, established state headquarters at Louisville, since continuously maintained by the party. He also has been a liberal financial supporter of the party during all three years and one of its wise counselors.

Mr. Ernst's father was William Ernst, a banker at Lexington, subsequently Covington. His mother was Sarah A. Butler, a Jessamine county girl.

It was through Mr. Ernst's instrumentality that the Covington Industrial Club was developed and through his efforts that the campaign to erect a magnificent headquarters for this remarkable civic organization was successful.

Goodyear Leadership— and Tires for the Smaller Cars

Enormous resources and scrupulous care have produced in Goodyear Tires for the smaller cars a high relative value not exceeded even in the famous Goodyear Cords on the world's highest-priced automobiles.

In addition to its larger sizes, Goodyear manufactures an average of 20,000 small car tires a day in the world's largest tire factory devoted solely to the 30x3-, 30x3½, and 31x4-inch sizes.

Last year more cars using these sizes were factory-equipped with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

Their extreme worth is available for your Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell, or other car using one of these sizes, at the nearest Goodyear Service Station. Go there for these tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

THE FINE BELGIAN DRAFT STALLION

Season
1920

Season
1920

Don DeGozee

The Belgian Draft Stallion, foaled in 1908, will make the present season at my stable one-half mile from Big Bone Baptist church, Boone county, Ky., at $10 to insure a colt, money due when the fact is known, the mare is parted with or leaves the county.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE:

DON DEGOZEE, despite his great size and weight, is well balanced throughout, perfectly proportioned and symmetrically built. He has as light action as a stallion of much smaller type, and his disposition is much better than is usually found in horses of blood strains. He is a beautiful dark brown, 17 hands high, weighs 1800 pounds, has a broad foot, heavy bone, fine style and action. This great breed of draft horses is especially known for better action than any other draft horse, heavy, good bone, good hoofs and as kind, gentle workers.

DON DEGOZEE's dam, Della Wire, Brown mare, the great draft show mare of Campbell county, Kentucky, sired by Bayard DeGozee 2188, whose Belgium Stud Book number is 21670, bred by Mr. Baillieux E. of Gozee, sired by Morton (312), by Brilliant (709), out of Coatte (703), dam of Catharine DeGozee (21085), she by Lion (766) out of Marie (2421).

Great care will be taken to prevent accidents but I will not be responsible should any occur.

THE LARGE BONE SURE-BREEDING JACK,

MIKE

Will make the season at the same time and place and on the same terms.

MIKE is 15½ hands high, 7 years old next August, is black with white points, is from the famous Bodie Jack, and is the best Mule getter in Kentucky, his colts having sold as high as $120.00 at weaning time.

The many friends of Rev. J. W. McAtee appreciated the sermon he conducted at Bellevue Baptist church Sunday night.

R. W. Rice and Miss Jocelyn Bondurant were married at Newport, Saturday, May 19.

Warren Flick and Miss Maud Beemon were the attendants. The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Rice, of this place, and is an industrious young man. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Bondurant and is well known over the county as one of our capable school teachers.

They have been engaged in that way for several years. The young couple have the best wishes of their friends in this community for a happy and prosperous life.

They will reside for the present with the groom's parents.

Death has again visited our village and taken from our midst one of our oldest citizens, Mrs. Julia Smith, widow of the late Capt. John Smith, and mother of Mrs. Lena Buckner, of Newport, and Miss Julia Smith, Mrs. Henry Clore and John (Pepper) Smith, of this place.

Julia Anna Harsh was born in Rheinlaue, Byron, Germany, August 15, 1833, and came to this country when 16 years of age. At the age of 12 she became a member of the German Lutheran church and after becoming a citizen of the United States she united with St. John Evangelist church of Cincinnati.

In the year 1856 she was united in marriage to John Smith and their journey together thru life was longer than the average. He was called home in July, 1913, after 59 years of comradeship. She never recovered from the loss of her companion, her one desire was that she might be called. To the other shore and there be reunited with her loved one.

The past five years she has been an invalid and has been tenderly cared for by her daughters and granddaughters and was in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Clore, of this place, when the summons came for her to enter into rest, May 9th, 1920.

She had reached the age of 82 years and 21 days, and the last sixty years of her life was spent here. She was a faithful wife, loving mother and a kind, good neighbor, ever ready to lend a helping hand to any one in need. She was loved by all who knew her and had endeared herself to the younger set.

When Capt. E. Maurer, of Pittsburgh, formerly of this place, was a child he gave her the name of "Julia Mae" and that name clung to her through life with all who knew her in this community. She will be missed, but we would not call her back but will meet again on the heavenly shore. May her soul rest in peace.

Plant Those Gardens.

It is of greatest importance and value to the nation that every one who possibly can do so should plant a garden this spring. It is true that conditions have been discouraging, but the bright warm days are coming; and secondly, now will germinate practically as quickly as they would have done weeks ago under normal weather conditions. There is time enough for generous helpful yields from the garden plots. These yields will cut the high cost of living by millions of dollars. Wherever possible the school children in the large cities should be encouraged and helped to put in these gardens.

Chicago alone expects to cut living costs through such gardens by at least $1,500,000 this season.

Every vacant lot in every city also should be utilized by some one. It is criminal at this time to permit any productive land to lie idle. A brief study will disclose the fact that careful and intelligent gardening will produce several crops during the summer.

Some seeds require only from 20 to 40 days before they are ready in the form of vegetables for the table. Procure your hoe and rake and get to work doing your bit to assist in the solution of our chief economic problem!

Too, your true university lies out of doors. One of the most admirable colleges in the country is John Burroughs farm beside the Hudson; John Muir also is head of a university known as the Yosemite.

It truly has been said that there are men who, in crossing a field, see more than the seven wonders of the world.

There is health to be dug from the fields and gardens.

Take a Real Ride in the Cleveland, and You'll Know What a Car It Is

The Cleveland Six, the sensation of the year among light sixes, is selling itself to thousands who use discrimination in picking out the car they want.

To attempt to describe the qualities of the Cleveland Six is no easy task. You must ride in it to know it. Take a real ride and you begin to understand that here is a better light six, very much better. It has an enclosed over-head valve motor, of exclusive Cleveland design and manufacture and tested in road work for three years before being offered the public, that gives performance unsurpassed.

A real ride will show you, better than can be told you, that the Cleveland has power and pick-up and flexibility and ease of driving that do not come with many other cars. Low-hung spring suspension and splendidly upholstered cushions wipe out the road-bumps. Beautiful body lines place the Cleveland above the usual plane in appearance. Youell's request to be released from his contract for the construction of a one-half mile of county turnpike known as the Burlington and Locust Grove turnpike. A large number of the land owners along the route of the projected road were present to oppose the granting of Mr. Youell's request to be released from his contract. Each side was given a patient and full hearing after which the court went into executive session, and after some time decided to enter upon its record an order directing Mr. Youell to comply with his contract with the county, the county road engineer to superintend the construction work.

The city council should demand that this obstruction to traffic be removed. The RECORDER is willing to do its part. Now how many are willing to assist in having the work done?

TOUCHING TRIBUTE TO SALVATION ARMY

Kentucky Marine, Now Sleeping at Chateau Thierry, Sent Beautiful Message Home to Loved Friend.

One dark night, shortly after the American marines had received their first baptism of blood at Chateau Thierry, a Kentucky boy, Gilbert Young, of Springfield, sat crunched in a dug-out writing a letter home. In it he described to one of his dearest friends and former teachers, Prof. George Colvin, now State Superintendent of Public Instruction of Kentucky, the terrible ordeal through which he had passed unscathed.

In one paragraph of that letter, now a precious and treasured memorial, the young Kentucky marine told of the great work that had been done during those trying hours by the various welfare agencies. The greatest of them all, "the great," "the greatest and best of them all," God bless them forever, is the Salvation Army.

The body of Gilbert Young, the brave Kentucky boy, lies today at Chateau Thierry beneath the hills of France, but his soul, poured out to his friend, goes marching on in time with the great work the Salvation Army is seeking to accomplish now that worlds have been turned into POWERS and spears into pruning hooks.

The sacrifice of Gilbert Young and the hundreds of other young Kentuckians who gave their lives for liberty during the world-struggle will cause a heart in the great Blue States state to pour out its benediction upon the Salvation Army when money is solicited in the Second Home Service Appeal campaign May 10 to 20. The Salvation Army today as always stands ready to help wherever there is a need.

Kentucky Crop Report.

May 12.—The condition of Kentucky's wheat crop indicates a probable production of about 6,143,000 bushels this season compared to 12,029,000 last year, according to the May crop report issued jointly today at Frankfort and Louisville by the State Commissioner of Agriculture W. C. Hanna and H. E. Bryant, Kentucky field agent of the U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates. Probable rye production is estimated at 624,000 bushels compared to 744,000 bushels last year, and tame hay at 1,410,000 tons compared to 1,561,000 tons produced last year. Actual production of winter wheat, but still less than these estimates, depending on whether conditions are particularly favorable or unfavorable between now and threshing time and hay harvest.

Heavy reduction of wheat acreage in Kentucky last fall, late sowing, poor condition this spring and abandonment of 14 per cent of the reduced acreage that was sowed, are the chief conditions warranting such a low estimate of the wheat crop. Rye came through the winter a better winter wheat, but still much below average. Wheat acreage left for harvest is now estimated at 618,000 acres compared to 1,046,000 last year; condition this month is 100 percent of normal compared to 103 percent this time last year.

Rye condition is estimated at 82 percent of normal, compared to 100 percent this time last year.
Livestock losses during the winter have not been unusually heavy, except in some localities, though the spring condition of stock is slightly below average, excepting hogs, which are about average. Losses from each 1,000 head during the winter and spring were: Horses & mules 22; cattle 40; sheep 60; lambs 65; swine 45. The ten-year average loss was: horses and mules 20; cattle 31; sheep 69; lambs 77; swine 65.

S. A. ACCOUNTS FOR FUNDS COLLECTED IN LAST CAMPAIGN

Colonel William Evans Makes Public Financial Statement for "O K" Province.

More than a million and a half dollars will have been spent by the Salvation Army in the "O K" Province during the twelve months ending May 31, according to the official statement just made by Provincial Officer Colonel William Evans.

Of this amount $1,296,750.00 had been spent on January 31 last and there remained a reserve of $222,034.00 to cover the amount required between then and the end of May, making the grand total $1,518,784.00.

The greatest demand made upon the funds available for this province, which includes Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee, was in the liquidation of mortgages on the property of the Army, to which $100,755.18 was devoted, and in the purchase and erection of new buildings to accommodate the greatly increased work of the organization here. This cost $568,697.59. The debt which presented such a handicap to the work of the Army in this, as well as in other provinces, was the natural result of a long period of sacrifice, open-handed charity and insufficient support. For years it has been the custom throughout the country to send the needy to the Salvation Army where they always have received prompt and cheerful help; but it was too often overlooked that some return was absolutely essential if the institution was to maintain its feet.

The necessary support was formerly not forthcoming in the offerings cast into the tambourine passed in meetings and the Army has until now found it imperative to mortgage its property in order to secure money for the carrying on of the work. This old order changed for the better last year when the new plan of making a single annual Home Service Appeal to the whole country was adopted and when, for the first time in its history, the Army was enabled to liquidate any considerable amount of its debts and to pay the full salary of its officers, scanty though that is.

Support of corps activities for the eight months ending with January took $138,046.00 while there remained a reserve of $116,300.00 to carry through May. This money covers the rental of buildings in places where the Army does not own its establishments, lighting, heating and maintenance of these places as well as those actually owned by the organization, covers the salaries paid the workers in this province and includes traveling expenses, stationery, telephones and printing.

Maintenance of provincial and divisional headquarters activities cost $276,650.00, while $105,733.00 still remains unexpended and in reserve to maintain the work for the four remaining months.

These provincial and divisional headquarters exist for the purpose of supervising the work of the corps and the extension and development of the Salvation Army's undertakings generally within their territory. This expenditure therefore represents the rentals and maintenance of buildings used for officers and headquarters, salaries and the expense of operating fresh air camps and relief work.

This province's share, $22,627, went to bearing the expenses of national headquarters, while the national pension fund which exists to provide for officers who have grown old in the service entailed the deduction of $50,000 more from the grand total of the provincial budget. The women's work for the Province took $39,973.

The 1919 balance sheet for the Province shows the following:

	Expended to Reserve to January 31	May 31
For the support of Corps Activities	$138,046.38	$116,300.97
Maintenance of Provincial and Divisional Headquarters	376,650.10	105,733.45
National Headquarters	22,627.80
Women's Social	39,973.00
Pension Fund	50,000.00
Mortgages	100,755.18
Properties	586,697.59

Following a careful preliminary survey of needs and requirements the 1920 budget for this province has been set at $3,000,000. This money will be raised in the May Appeal and spent here during the next 12 months for the welfare purposes definitely explained in the foregoing paragraphs.

The Salvation Army makes a public appeal upon the principle that money, a medium of exchange, commands the material things which constitute relief for the worthy poor, the helpless and needy, the fatherless and the stricken; upon the principle that the officers and soldiers of the Army have no desire to acquire or accumulate for their personal emolument any stores of money or chattels, but instead have dedicated their lives to the work of relieving others; upon the principle that while its members must live decently, and are therefore entitled to shelter and food, they seek no reward in this life beyond the respect and appreciation of their fellow men and women, and that they are especially fitted, in consequence, both in spirit and experience, to handle money judiciously and with utmost wisdom.

A vital industry, the manufacture of Acid Phosphate, today holds out an opportunity to you to double your money in a very few years.

Investigate this money-making opportunity.

The greatest need of America today is more food. The high price of every sort of food stuffs has made the imperative need for bigger crops greater than ever before. Greater crops can never come from poor soil. Acid phosphate, government bulletins state, is America's greatest fertilizer asset.

The Atlantic Gulf Chemical Corporation can make acid phosphate cheaper than any other concern in the industry. At its disposal are mixes and equipment with which acid phosphate can be produced at a figure enabling it to undersell all competition, yet make tremendous profit.

The demand for acid phosphate today far exceeds the supply. So long as this condition exists, and it will for many years to come, that concern which makes acid phosphate cheaper than any one else in the field is bound to reap a harvest of unusually liberal dividends.

With the world's ablest chemists and engineers in charge of its work, the Atlantic Gulf Chemical Corporation occupies the strongest position in its field today for the rapid acquisition of magnificent income.

Ordinary industries make ordinary profits. A few products make untold wealth for their early backers, those who are smart enough to recognize an opportunity.

Repeated bulletins from the foremost authorities of both State and Nation recommend acid phosphate highly. Will you take their word?

Don't pass this up.

MORE HOT WEATHER DISHES.

Eggs will have reached the lowest figure for the year, during the summer, and if ever, now is the time to indulge in egg dishes galore, as well as in packing them for winter use.

Beauregard Eggs.—Take five hard-boiled eggs, one tablespoonful of corn-starch, five squares of toast, one cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of butter with salt and pepper to taste. Chop the egg whites, rub the yolks through a sieve. Scald milk and add butter and corn-starch rubbed together. Now add the whites, then add salt and paprika to taste. Put the toast on a hot dish, cover with a layer of white sauce, then a layer of the yolks, then the whites, and finish with the yolks on top. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and put into the oven for a few minutes.

Deviled Eggs.—Boil down cooked eggs, one teaspoonful of French mustard, four teaspoonfuls of minced onion or tomato, one tablespoonful of olive oil, salt and cayenne to taste.

Cut the eggs lengthwise. Take out the yolks carefully, not to break the whites. Rub the yolks to a smooth paste with the mustard and oil, then add the onion or tomato finely chopped. Fill the whites with this mixture and press the halves together.

Eggs Poached in Tomatoes.—Peel and cut into small pieces six medium sized tomatoes. Chop fine one small green onion. Put the onion and tomatoes into a sauce pan and cook slowly 15 minutes, adding salt and pepper. Have ready slices of well-browned toast, buttered. Carefully drop six eggs into the tomatoes, and when well poached place them carefully on the toast; pour the tomatoes around them and serve at once.

Peach Omelet.—Pare and stone three ripe peaches, then press them through a sieve, add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, and the well-beaten yolks of three eggs; add carefully the stiffly beaten whites of six, and pour into a well-greased baking dish. Bake 15 or 20 minutes and serve at once.

COMMANDER OF THE SALVATION ARMY

Commander Evangelina Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States, will leave for Europe on important business immediately at the close of the Salvation Army's 1920 Home Service Appeal, May 10-20.

The Commander will not only inspect the American Section of the Salvation Army work now going on with the American troops at Coblenz, Germany, and other points along the Rhine, but will confer in London with her brother, General Bramwell Booth, world head of the Salvation Army.

The Commander intends to remain in London ten days. She will go not only to Germany, in the interests of her organization, but to Belgium, where there has been a vast increase recently in Salvation Army work. In addition the Commander will hold an important meeting in Paris.

The Salvation Army is the only relief organization with the American Forces in Germany on the east side of the Rhine. It has five large soldiers' clubs in the Rhine country.

ALL KENTUCKIANS ARE MADE WELCOME

Booth Memorial Hospital at Covington Is Operated By the Salvation Army.

Kentuckians from every part of the State will always find a hospitable welcome at the famous Booth Memorial Hospital, at Covington, whether they have money or not. Support of this hospital is one object of the Salvation Army's Home Service Campaign, May 10-20.

The Booth Memorial Hospital was the home of the late Amos Shinkle, the founder and promoter of the suspension bridge connecting Covington and Cincinnati. When the home was erected many years ago it was famous all over the United States as one of the finest in this section of the country.

Mr. Shinkle left the beautiful home to the Salvation Army upon his death, and since that time it has been used as a hospital. It is strictly non-sectarian. Men and women from all churches and representing all creeds are on the advisory board and the various committees. They are among the most prominent citizens of Covington. There is strictly a labor of love, and they receive no compensation. The same care and attention is given to patients who have no money as to those who can afford to pay part or whole of the fees required. Not a single patient without money has ever been turned away from this hospital, although many patients who offer to pay are not received because of lack of room.

Thirty per cent of all the cases in Booth Memorial Hospital have been charity patients. This record is by far the best of any hospital in the United States.

The medical staff of the hospital is made up of the best-known physicians in this section. Dr. J. Risk Meek, a Pontiac county boy, is chief of staff. In connection with the hospital a nurses' training school is maintained. Miss Catherine A. Webb is superintendent of nurses. She is an experienced nurse and has had post-graduate work in five of the largest hospitals in the country. Seven of the graduates of the school went into Red Cross work during the war, and two of them were overseas. They were Miss Dunlap, who recently passed away, and Leannah Surrell, formerly of Pendleton county, Kentucky. Both of them rendered splendid service.

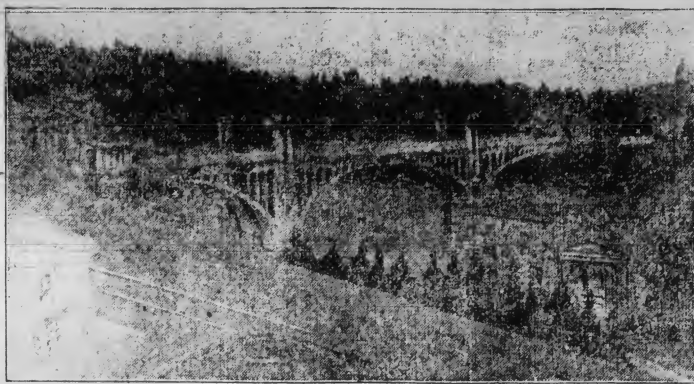

Great interest is being shown in Booth Memorial Hospital in all sections of Kentucky because patients are received from all parts of the state, charitable as well as full-pay and part-pay patients.

Salvation Army officers give 10 per cent of their meager earnings to charity. During the week of March 25th to April 5th, known to them as "Self-Denial Week," they cheerfully gave "win's left."

The Salvation Army has a commissioned officer staff of more than 18,000 working in 68 countries and speaking 48 different languages.

The Salvation Army knows no service too difficult, no task too great.

WAR MOTHERS' MEMORIAL BRIDGE TO SPAN KENTUCKY RIVER AT STATE CAPITAL

From a Water Color Rendering By Leo L. Oberwarth, A. I. A., Architect, Frankfort, Ky.

The War Mothers of Kentucky, an organization of the women who gave their sons upon call of their government that the world might be free, have determined that the patriotism and heroism of all Kentuckians in the late world war shall be memorialized in a most lasting way by the building of a memorial bridge across the Kentucky River at the State Capital. This splendid monument, shown above, was given the strongest endorsement by the General Assembly of Kentucky at the session just closed, with the suggestion that it be made a part of the great public highway scheme laid out by the Assembly.

The organization of War Mothers, which is made up of county units representing each of the one hundred and twenty counties of Kentucky, determined to unite in a single memorial, builded by the combined efforts of the county organizations rather than scattered monuments. They decided that the monument be an emblem representing the entire Commonwealth; that it should be a practical, useful memorial and that it should be located where it would be a spectacle to the greatest number of people of the Commonwealth. A glance at the picture shows the very practical side of these suggestions. The bridge will cross the Kentucky River at the head of Main street, in the city of Frankfort, its southern end resting on Capitol avenue, a street one hundred and fifty feet in width and ending with the new State Capitol and Governor's Mansion. Architecturally the bridge is designed strictly in harmony with the Capitol. It can be seen from both the steam and electric car lines coming into and leaving the Capital city as well as autoist passing along the Midland Trail. It is proposed that each county of Kentucky be represented in the memorial by the placing of a bronze tablet for each along the main avenue of the structure, the tablet to contain the names of the soldiers and sailors the county furnished to the National Government in the war. The entrance arches of the structure will contain public comfort stations, rest rooms and drinking fountains, there will be projecting bays, with seats, on either side of the walk ways of the bridge. Electric light standards ending in flag poles for decorative purposes will be placed at the bays. The approaches to the bridge North and South will be embellished with permanent landscape plantings.

That the Capital City of Kentucky is the proper setting for such a splendid memorial is generally accepted by the people who have interested themselves in the project. People from every section of Kentucky are in Frankfort daily. That the General Assembly held to this idea is shown by the following resolution of endorsement which was adopted unanimously in both branches of that body:

Whereas, The organization known as the War Mothers of the State of Kentucky, made up of the patriotic women who gave their sons to the cause of world freedom and sent them across the seas to battle for that cause, while they, remaining at home, gave their energy and time to every war effort fostered by the National Government, is now engaged in promoting a State memorial to the men who took up arms at their country's call; and,

Whereas, This organization has determined that such memorial should not be in the form of a monument, such as has been customary in the past, but a memorial that will ever be of use and benefit to the people of Kentucky while adorning the approach to Kentucky's Capitol and contributing to making of the Capital City of Kentucky a city all Kentuckians will be proud of; now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of Kentucky, that we do most heartily endorse this worthy movement upon the part of the War Mothers of the State and sincerely hope that their vision of a great Memorial Bridge across the Kentucky River at the Capital City will shortly be realized.

And be it further resolved, we view with approval the plan of having each of the one hundred and twenty counties of Kentucky represented in this splendid Memorial Bridge—the placing thereon of a bronze tablet containing the names of the soldiers who served from the various counties, and with special reference to those who gave up their lives.

We would urge upon the present State officials that they co-operate in every way with the War Mothers in this project, particularly the State Road Department, which might make of this structure part of the great highway scheme now being worked out in Kentucky, and would recommend to the next General Assembly that they assist in making such memorial possible.

NOTED CATHOLIC FOR SALVATION ARMY

Cardinal Gibbons Gives His Blessings to National Leaders in Their Work.

One of the most prominent prelates in the Catholic church in America is Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore. The Cardinal is a strong believer in and supporter of the Salvation Army. Cardinal Gibbons has just sent the following letter to Franklin K. Lane, ex-Secretary of the Interior, who is the national chairman of the Army's second Home Service Fund campaign drive, May 10-20:

"My Dear Mr. Lane:—Let me congratulate you on taking up the good work of helping that most deserving organization, the Salvation Army, in its 1920 appeal for maintenance. "Its splendid self-sacrificing work not only during the world war, but for years prior thereto, has endeared the Salvation Army to everyone. "May your work and that of your friends and associates in this national appeal meet with the fullest measure of success. "My blessings and best wishes, faithfully yours, (Signed) "J. CARD. GIBBONS, Archbishop of Baltimore."

The Salvation Army has given out its recipe for doughnuts. This is the formula from which all the crullers for the men of the A. E. F. were made. There is something magic in it, for it works wonders. Here it is:

Five cups flour, 2 cups sugar, 5 tea-spoonfuls baking powder, 1 salt-spoonful salt, 2 eggs, ¾ cup milk, 1 table-spoonful lard. Knead and cut and drop into boiling lard. The lasses who made these doughnuts in France say that a happy smile, added to the doughnuts, less the time of serving makes them even more delightful.

The activities of the Salvation Army are being carried on in 68 countries. This far-flung organization holds meetings and conducts its work in 40 different languages. In the United States alone its enterprises embrace: field evangelistic work, hotels for the poor, industrial homes for the unemployed, slum posts and nurseries in the great cities, rescue homes and majority hospitals, children's homes and relief work in prisons, besides other forms of relief, such as holiday dinners and the distribution of free food and coal.

Harrodsburg—Lightning killed a team of mules belonging to John S. Hunter, valued at $750. There were three teams at work in the field, and the center team was struck and the driver rendered unconscious. The team in the rear was knocked down by the shock, but uninjured, although the driver was also made unconscious.

Frankfort—On the request of Commonwealth's Atty. Huffaker the jail sentences of six months imposed on Leon Harris, Frank Loftus and Harry Mallory were commuted today by Gov. Morrow. They had served five months of the term. They were convicted of illegal registration at the last election in Louisville.

Danville—What is thought to be the largest land deal consummated in Garrard county was completed when J. I. Hamilton, of Lancaster, purchased for a sum aggregating $24,000 two tracts of land comprising about 170 acres. The land was the property of Robert Rankin. It lies near Camp Dick Robinson, five miles from Danville, just over the Boyle line.

New Castle—The cashier of the Deposit Bank, of the little town of Sulphur, proved too much for and surprised the burglars that paid the bank a visit. When they went in they disturbed the alarm that he had installed that makes an unearthly scream that lasted three hours. When H. W. Elliott, Jr., the cashier, got there with his gun he saw the burglars running toward the Baptist church, where they had an automobile and got away before he could get a shot at them, speeding up Fairview timber pike toward Smithfield.

Paducah—The plant bed of L. K. Hunt, a McCracken county tobacco grower, was grotesquely destroyed last week by the use of some powerful solution or powder whose chemical qualities can be determined, according to Mr. Hunt. Mr. Hunt is seeking information as to what was used in killing the plants so quickly and thoroughly. He states that he would like to try the solution on an unripe growth of asafra bushes on his property.

Frankfort—James Jones, sentenced to spend two to ten years in prison by the Campbell circuit court in 1915 for robbery, was paroled. When asked where the alleged robbery occurred and who was the victim Jones said that he did not know, as he had never been in Newport before the night of the alleged robbery, and that he did not know the name of the man who accused him of the crime. He declared that his conviction was due to a mistaken identity, but he has no ill feelings to the court or the jury who sent him to prison.

PENDLETON COUNTY ITEMS.

Falmouth Outlook
J. A. Hicks, of near Double Beech, brought to our office last Friday a curiosity in the shape of an egg. The egg was of usual size, but had a handle which resembled a gourd. It is a rare specimen in hen fruit.

There is a noticeable decrease in the rolling stock in Falmouth and Pendleton county this spring, due principally to two great causes—the high price of automobile and the scarcity of cash to buy it with. Last year, at this time the roads, especially on Sundays, were clogged with joy-riders. As long as this condition exists our roads will last longer. This will be good news to those of us who have to walk.

Judge E. S. Clarke, of the Court of Appeals bench, of Frankfort, advised a serious operation for stomach trouble at a Louisville hospital Wednesday morning. A short time ago he had an X-ray taken of his stomach, and a specialist advised an operation. It has been in declining health all winter. His family and friends are given every assurance that the operation will be successful, but of course the anxiety is great and we hope for his ultimate recovery.

Forty years ago dog fennel took Pendleton county, and it could be found in the fields, on the roadside and everywhere. It passed away and sweet clover came and spread out over the county like a blanket, and like dog fennel, it thrived best in the poorest soil. Sweet clover is fast passing. We made the prediction ten years ago that it was a weed, and would go as it came. Pendleton county is just now confronted with the greatest pest in its history—the wild onion—which is taking the fields like dog fennel and sweet clover. There is no known remedy to fight wild onions as yet, and until then our dairymen and alfalfa growers are up against a serious condition.

New York—Three thousand slackers, who failed to perform their duty during the war, are to be arrested in the Brooklyn Federal Judicial District within the next 10 days, it was announced today by Federal Attorney Loevy W. Ross. The district also includes all of Long Island and Staten Island. Foreigners, especially Russians, predominate in the list. Ross stated that added that Americans form a "regrettable" percentage.

The Powers Real-estate Agency, of Walton, will have a representative in Burlington next Saturday to distribute free among the farmers a lot of very desirable seeds. Call on him at the Farmers Bureau and secure a supply.

PETERSBURG.

Thinking a few lines from our little city might be of interest to some of the Recorder's readers I send these.

Our beautiful little town is situated on the bank of the Ohio river, has wide, shady streets, lovely homes and happy families. We have three churches—the Christian church of which Rev. R. H. Carter is pastor, who is a kind and gentle manner tries to persuade all to love and follow their Savior. The Baptist church is a lovely house of worship with Bro. Swindler its minister, and who has a kind word and a smile for all whom he meets. Last but not least is the Methodist church with Bro. Redinger, a good and religious man its minister.

We have a fine school taught by R. H. Carter. It turned out graduates the last session. Riley & Berkshire have a large drygoods and grocery store that is doing good business, while E. A. Stott has a fine grocery with his wife behind the counter with a smile and a welcome for all who come.

We have one doctor in the person of Dr. J. M. Grant, who is always ready for a joke and a big laugh. His medicine makes you well and his kind and jovial ways cheer you on to good health.

Our friend, Col. Graddy had a "phone" put in his residence and now he is all smiles and looks like a man of 30 instead of 70.

Dr. Hubert Walton and wife are home again to their many friends and the doctor is engaged much of his time singing to that fine baby of a few weeks.

Owen Watts, our bank cashier, carries that same old smile, especially when he thinks there is a house and lot in town to sell. Ott Scott is trying to get all the "dicks" in town repaired, being interested in the garage and service station.

Pratt Holloway is repairing his residence for what is not known.

B. J. Crisler and wife have charge of our first-class hotel and provide the best of accommodations.

Our ice cream parlor is presided over by Eugene Gordon who is enjoying a good trade. He is also interested in our popular picture-show with Mr. Cristy.

Flu, measles and mumps were in Petersburgh about all winter, but the health of the community is now good.

Forest Krutz is clerking for Riley & Berkshire and takes a great pleasure in waiting on customers, especially the ladies.

Our up-to-date barber shop is kept by E. L. Helms who manipulates the razor in a manner that makes it a pleasure to have him do your work.

Albert Stephens is one of the busiest men about the town since he became interested in the auto repair shop.

J. B. Berkshire is repairing his house. Mr. Robt. Carvor is able to be out again.

We are glad to hear that Thos. Jones is improving. Mrs. Annie Lonaker is recovering from rheumatism.

G. C. Graddy is the guest of his daughter in Erlanger.

Mrs. R. H. Carter has gone to Paris to visit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Arnold have purchased a new machine.

Mrs. Whitlock has come to stay with her sister Mrs. Riley.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Snelling has pneumonia.

Miss Lizzie Walton is working in the store for Berkshire & Riley.

Mrs. Louis Griffith and children are visiting her parents, R. P. Acra.

Miss Hazel McWeethy has returned from the city where she was operated on.

The Graduating Class of 1920 is the largest class Petersburgh High School has ever had.

Mrs. Max T. Gridley is here from Bloomington, Ind., spending a few days with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Chambers and daughter, Ruth, spent Tuesday shopping in Cincinnati.

Pratt Holloway has sold out his garage to Messrs. O. N. Scott, A. S. Stephens and K. P. Botts.

Mr. Luke Holt is moving to town where he has accepted a position running the truck for Berkshire & Riley.

Mr. Chas. Scharf has the contract for tearing down the old distillery and moving the brick to Erlanger.

We are sorry to lose from our midst Mrs. Elhu Alden, who has gone to Louisville to make her future home.

Mrs. Jane Connor returned last week after spending the winter with her daughters in Cincinnati and Ludlow.

A large crowd attended the sale of Mrs. Ada Newmark Saturday afternoon. Most everything brought a good price.

Barney Turner and family attended the birthday dinner of his mother last Sunday at the home of Geo. Heist and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Conrad entertained Sunday the following: Prof. J. H. Craven and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Conrad and daughter, Halle Louise, Warren Stephenson and wife, Mrs. Cynthia White, Mr. and Mrs. Cam Kennedy and daughter, Mary Elizabeth, Misses Alma Perkins and Melva White, Messrs. Smith Aey and Robert Stephenson.

Patience—Within a week 300 young men have abandoned farms in McKenney county, going to manufacturing centers of Ohio and Michigan. Farmers are unable to compete with labor agents, who promise good wages and transportation, although they offer $15 a month with board.

FLORINCE

Georgia Yenley has measles. Ed. Snyder and wife spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Castleman.

Looking after the Chicks.

The most difficult proposition that poultry breeders have to deal with is the task of raising baby chicks. If the proper equipment for handling the chicks is not provided, the difficult task is rendered still more difficult. During such weather as prevailed during the most of the month of March 1920, cold and wet, raw and chilly, when the souls of poultrymen were tried to the utmost, those poultry keepers who tried to raise early hatched chicks with make shift brooding equipment suffered heavy losses and at a time when it was especially important that the chicks should be saved. The stove brooder affords the best and easiest method of handling the early hatched chicks. For those poultry keepers using incubators and hatching any considerable amount of chicks. For the small flock owner and those who hatch only a few chicks at a time, the mother hen is the most reliable brooder for bad weather. In using the hens as brooders do not place more than twenty-five chicks with each hen and dry roomy quarters should be provided for the brooding operations.

In order to make a hen a satisfactory brooder, she must be confined to a small space so that her main attention will be centered on the business of furnishing heat to the baby chicks.

Each mother hen should be confined to a coop not less than two feet high and so arranged that the chicks can run in and out while the mother hen stays inside at least during the first three weeks of the brooding period. During the early spring months it is advisable to place the brood coops containing the hens in a shed or other sheltered place where they will be protected as much as possible from the wind and rains and where the chicks will have a considerable amount of dry floor space. Ten or more hens can be handled in this manner in a shed large enough for a wagon where if the hens were turned loose in the same place they would do so much fighting that many of the chicks would be killed. While it is possible to raise chicks with the small outdoor brooder, it is a tedious and various home-made contraptions, yet the losses which result annually from such brooding methods deter most experienced poultry keepers from employing such brooders.

Equip Your Smaller Car With Goodyear Tires

30x3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread $23.50
30x3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or any other car using 30x3, 30x3½, or 31x4-inch tires, you can well take advantage of the high relative value built into all Goodyear Tires.

You can well do so because you can secure in the smaller Goodyear Tires the results of such skill and care as have made Goodyear Tires the preferred equipment on the highest priced automobiles of the day.

You can well do so because these smaller Goodyear Tires are easy to obtain, being produced at the rate of approximately 20,000 a day, and because their first cost usually is as low or lower than that of other tires in the same types and sizes.

Go to the nearest Goodyear Service Station Dealer for these tires, and for Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes. He supplies many other local owners of the smaller cars.

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are thick, strong tubes that reinforce casings properly. Why risk a good -ing with a cheap tube? Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost little more than tubes of less merit. 30x3½ size in waterproof bag $4.50

More Business;

Less Partisanship.

How completely legalistic in mind is the United States Senate is demonstrated by the pending action upon the joint resolution requesting the President to declare to be ended the state of war between the United States and the Imperial Governments of Germany and Austria. Advocates of the instrument admit their awareness of the fact that, if adopted, it will be vetoed by the President. Nevertheless, they announce their intention of proceeding to finality. This attitude bespeaks the technical lawyer filled with anxiety to complete the record before a host the Court in order that the appeal may be perfected before a reviewing tribunal. The fact that other litigation is being obstructed and justice denied applicants during this vain performance means nothing to the specially trained pursuer of trifles. In this instance it is agreed that nothing but words will come of the pending proposal. The country hears naught by the skillful pleading of eminent attorneys whose sole object is to provide the campaign with material for attack upon the Chief Executive. In turn, it is expected, he will add to this sum of useless rhetoric, having before him the thought of personal defense. He, too, has been admitted to the bar. Meanwhile the country must await, with weary heart and sickening hope, some commonsense treatment of subjects nearer the American soul than the pettifogging putterings of the patronage-seeking politicians. There, for instance, is the unreasonably long delayed budget, the enactment of which will place the Administration upon a sane business foundation. Waiting, too, is the newly founded dye industry, seeking protection until it can defend itself. Under the restraint of a locked desk, too, are the bills to regulate the food monopolies and punish the profiteering barons. It is maddening to think that these urgently demanded matters—a part only of a greater program—must be fobbed off while the partisanship of a presidential year is given the right of way. Truly, the Senate is the citadel of Bourbonism—and fantastic legalism gone awry.—Enquirer.

CONGRESS AND PEACE.

One of the arguments urged in favor of the validity of the Knox peace resolution declaring a state of peace with Germany is that Congress has the right to declare war and must therefore, have the right to declare peace. This argument is entirely without basis in fact or logic.

As a matter of fact, the Constitution provides that the President shall make treaties of peace and that Congress shall declare war. Even if it should be the case that Congress should have the power to declare peace, it is not the case. That power is lodged with the executive branch of the government. There is a logical reason why Congress should have the power to declare war, but not to negotiate peace. It is summed up in the word negotiate. A nation does not negotiate for war. It is arranged that Congress shall declare war, so that the state of war, with all of its hardships and burdens, shall not be entered into without the people's consent. Even if there are interchanges of notes preceding the war between the powers involved, this interchange is conducted by the executive and not the legislative branch of the government.

But the coming of peace is not a matter of declaration. Preceding and succeeding the cessation of hostilities there must be negotiations. Congress is given no authority to conduct negotiations with foreign powers. Such negotiations are in the hands of the executive department, and for this reason Congress is not authorized to negotiate peace. Ambassadors and plenipotentiaries are responsible to the State Department and the President, not to Congress. The responsibility of carrying on the negotiations that must precede peace and the responsibility for drawing up a treaty of peace are, therefore, placed in the hands of the President. The peace terms, when finally drawn up, must be ratified by the Senate, that as war had to be actually declared by Congress. But since negotiations leading up to a treaty must be dealt with through diplomatic channels, this part of the procedure of peace was properly taken out of the hands of Congress.

The Knox resolution creating a state of peace is consequently not only in contravention with the wording of the Constitution, but also with the spirit of the Constitution and the logic of facts. Louisville Post.

Local Happenings.

There is occasionally a farmer in this county who has corn up and the harrow has been put on it. It seems that so far the stand has been every good, one thing in the farmers favor. A small percent of the crop is in the ground, and a great deal of corn land remains unbroken. Tobacco plants are coming on with a rush, and most of the land for that crop has yet to be turned over. Just now Mr. Farmer is very busy and the outlook for him to be rushed for several weeks is good. At this time of the year it is a long time from sun up until sundown and with the modern farm machinery he can dispose of work pretty rapidly when the weather is favorable, and he will go to it from now on early and late.

Governor Morrow has issued a strong statement in behalf of Hon. P. Ernst, of Covington, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator at the August primary election. Just now there is no indication that Mr. Ernst will have any trouble securing the nomination. His troubles will begin later on after the Democrats have trotted out their candidate, who will be Hon. C. W. Beckham, whose nomination is also a foregone conclusion.

Several airplane routes for passenger transportation are expected to commence service during the coming summer. Before the last of June it was announced that an aerial express route between New York and Chicago, and shortly afterward will go as far as Omaha. Plans have been made to carry it on to San Francisco. There are also plans on foot for a system to run up the river from Louisville to Cincinnati to carry mail and passengers.

The scariying and rolling of the Burlington and Florence pike is about completed. The work has improved the condition of the road considerably but the improvement can be only temporary, and it will not be long until it can properly be listed as a dirt road. The fact that that road improved that appeared so promising not long since seems to have subsided, and nothing more is being heard of it.

L. H. Bury and Harmon Jones, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, were business callers at this office afternoon the past week. Mr. Jones has changed the date of his sale of cattle from the 29th inst. to June 3rd, at which time he will close out his entire herd of milk stock. He has taken considerable pains in the selection of his herd and his cattle ought to bring good prices.

C. J. Craven, of Latonia, spent last Friday meeting old friends in Burlington and vicinity. It had been about four years since he was in Burlington and vicinity. It had been about four years since he was in Burlington the last time. He has a good position in Latonia and is looking well. He met with an accident a few days ago that was inconvenient to him.

Owen Allen, of Petersburg, spent last Monday in Burlington, guest of Dr. Castleman, the dentist. Mr. Allen has a prospect for a very fine garden this year and he wants his teeth in perfect order so he will be able to enjoy the fruits of his labor in the garden. When there is a prospect for anything good coming his way Mr. Allen always prepares for it.

County Clerk W. R. Rogers is back in his place of business but his eye has not improved sufficiently to permit of his doing any work. He is looking pretty well although it is plain to be seen that he has had some experience with the eye. He is the grind of which he gave up all his teeth.

Dr. Castleman has given the Buckner residence in Florence a complete and thorough repairing and has it about ready for occupancy. When completed it will be one of the attractive residences of the town, and will have all the modern improvements.

Last Sunday was an ideal day for joy riding but the conditions of the roads in this county are such that there is no pleasure in going over them in an automobile, and when they will be made better is a question that is uppermost in the minds of many.

Some predict that a considerable percent of the young fruit will drop from the trees early in the season because of having been so badly chilled in the month of April. If half the crop now indicated matures there will be an abundance of nearly every kind.

Lyman Rice, of Erlanger, was in Burlington, a few days ago, in the interest of the T. T. Spinks Coal Co. Mr. Rice says Spinks is making arrangements to take a very large quantity of coal at Erlanger this year.

Judge Gaines arrived home last Friday evening from Pikeville, Pike county, where he had been holding a term of the circuit court, he having been appointed special judge for the term.

TRADE FORECAST IN WOOLLEN GOODS

Stagnation Throughout Summer Forecasts for Trade in Woollens and Worsteds.

New York — The stagnation of woollen and worsted business will last throughout the summer, and by fall cloths, bringing lively business during winter, it is believed by some of the most shrewd and far-sighted operators here. The flood of cancellations which have damaged business is estimated equal to that experienced immediately following the armistice. The tangle that trade found itself in at that time took three months to unravel, and it is thought that to re-establish the woollen and worsted trade a similar period of stagnation must exist. Prominent dress goods men believe the business snarl came at just the right time, for during May and June business has always been at a low ebb. From these dress authorities come reassurance that fall prices of dress goods will stiffen and in many cases go higher. One dress goods jobber points to the fact that half the amount of tricotine for last July has reached the house. Manufacturers have asked several times for a cancellation of the order. In turn the jobber almost begged the retail house to countermand the obligation. The retailer wants the tricotine and the manufacturer will be held.

The domestic manufacturers of dress goods are asking for extensions of two to three months for some goods for delivery in June and July. The goods are now promised for August and September. In the case of foreign dress goods manufacturers shipments are long overdue. The mills in France are not eager for American orders, it is said. Local jobbers report that quite a few times they have received offers from French concerns to buy back goods shipped to America. The shortage of dress goods in France is acute, foreign jobbers can offer to buy back goods shipped to this country at prices in advance of those for which the goods were originally ordered, and from the other side make a profit. Deliveries of some goods are being made to this country, it is reported, to accommodate patronage of long standing. Cancellations in dress goods have not run nearly as high as those in men's wear lines. A prominent dress goods manufacturer requests for cancellations amounting to $15,000 on business this season. Jobbers of men's wear lines in the time. The local manufacturing trade is absorbing very little stock. The cancellations of goods is admitted and some speculative jobbers have even gained revenge against mills.

William E. Price Dead.

Mr. William E. Price, well known and worthy citizen of Boone County, died at his home on Tuesday, May 11th, after a short illness. He had been there some time with his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Wells. The body was brought home on Thursday, arriving here on the three o'clock train.

The funeral occurred from the residence soon afterward, the services being conducted by Rev. O. Eldred of the Christian church, Mr. Price being a member of that brotherhood. Interment in Emmerich cemetery.

All the family are honest and upright men, had lived in this city or in the vicinity of thirty-nine years, having come here from Boone County.

The surviving members of the family are his wife, two sons, two daughters and four grandchildren. Mr. Price, an only son, died at his daughter's home.

The daughters are Mrs. Fannie M. Wells, of Chicago, and Mrs. Nancy E. Andrew, of New York. Two brothers and one sister of the deceased survive. They are William Albert Price, of Erlanger, Andrew Byrd Price, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. A. H. Smith, of Chicago.

Six Teams on the Diamond.

Last Saturday afternoon was a busy period at the base ball teams of this county, several of them being in action Petersburg journeyed to Walton where it received its first big win of the season, Walton winning the game by a score of 15 to 14.

Verona came over to Hebron where they had a snap, defeating Hebron by a score of 10 to 1. The Verona team is said to be considerably stronger this season than it was last, and expects to be the champions of the county this year.

The Burlington club went to Bellevue and had a very narrow escape from a shut-out, the score being 3 to 1 in favor of Bellevue.

Making a Start.

Stephenson-White.

Wednesday night about 6 o'clock Warren C. Stephenson, 22, and Miss Georgia White, 17, stole a march on their friends by being quietly married at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. R. E. DeMoisey. They were accompanied by the bride's sister, Miss Myra White, and a brother of the groom, Art Stephenson. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple drove to Cincinnati. The bride is the charming young daughter of Mrs. Cynthia White and has a large circle of admiring friends. Mr. Stephenson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Stephenson of near town, and conducts a garage at Crittenden, Ky. He is an excellent young gentleman and very popular with a large number of his younger set. After a short honeymoon the young couple will be at home to their friends at Crittenden—Walton Advertiser.

HON. A. B. ROUSE

The denial proffered Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, Republican, to read a New York newspaper article charging that a "big business syndicate" had underwritten the McDoo campaign and that a fund of about $50,000 had been obtained by Harvey, Cleveland, H. C. Elgar, Henry Morgenthau and others.

Announces for Congress.

To the Democrats of the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky:

I announce my candidacy for Congress at the Primary to be held on the 7th day of August 1920.

You have honored me with the nomination for five terms, four of which I have received with opposition and the people have elected me by majorities of 447 in 1910, 734 in 1912, 1,329 (Republican opposition) in 1914, 1,022 in 1916 and possibly six thousand loyal boys in the military and naval service out of my district in 1918 my majority was 10,197.

Congress has been in almost continuous session since my first election and I have been at my post of duty constantly with the exception of the time I was at home on account of sickness in my family.

I have endeavored to represent my constituents and to look after their business as I believed they desired and if nominated for another term and elected I will continue to give you the best service I am capable of.

Very Respectfully,

A. B. ROUSE.

Selling Stock.

Ira Lee Thompson, of Aurora, spent a day or two in Burlington the latter part of last week. Mr. Thompson is a native of Petersburg, this county, and is a very popular young man among all acquaintances. Mr. Thompson was representing the Atlantic Gulf Chemical Corporation. The property is an acid phosphate mine located in Georgia, and Boone county men are interested in it. As Mr. Thompson presents the proposition it is to say the least very interesting to those who have money to invest. The company proposes to erect its own plant and anticipates handsome returns, as all phosphate companies are making big dividends and buying the phosphate. Mr. Thompson appears to be a pretty good salesman.

Ladies' Fishing Club.

Did you know Burlington has a ladies' fishing club? It is not one of these clubs the members of which let all the big fish escape. They march triumphantly home with the big fish as well as with the small ones. Mrs. B. B. Hume is the clubs most successful angler to date, she having landed a bass weighing nearly a pound. The officers of the club are as follows: Mrs. B. B. Hume, president; Mrs. C. C. Hughes treasurer; Mrs. M. L. Niddell, Recording secretary. The by-laws require the members of the club to spend at least four hours a day on the creek angling unless in case of sickness, death or high water. Mrs. L. A. Conner is the club's business manager.

MORE CAMPAIGN INQUIRIES ORDERED

Senate to Investigate Moves in All Presidential Drives.

Washington, May 20. Investigation of the campaign expenses of all candidates for the nomination for the Presidency was ordered today by the Senate.

The resolution, by Senator Wm. E. Borah, Idaho, Republican, providing for an investigation by a Privileges and Elections Subcommittee, was adopted without a recorded vote and with little discussion.

With the membership of the investigating committee already chosen, the Senate leaders are now making orders for witnesses to be brought out immediately so as to begin hearings late this week, if possible.

It is proposed to request a appearance of all presidential campaign managers with their books and vouchers showing contributions to the campaign. The resolution also provides for inquiry "as to any other means or influence, including the promise or use of patronage and the providing of funds, for setting up competing delegations and other facts that not only would be of public interest, but would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation."

Before the Borah resolution was called up Senator Chas. S. Thomas, Colorado, Democrat, denied that S. M. Baruch, either had contributed money or sought contributions on behalf of William G. McDoo, adding that he had been authorized by Mr. McDoo to make such a statement.

The denial proffered Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, Republican, to read a New York newspaper article charging that a "big business syndicate" had underwritten the McDoo campaign and that a fund of about $50,000 had been obtained by Harvey, Cleveland, H. C. Elgar, Henry Morgenthau and others.

Senator Thomas said there was no reason to believe that he was involved in the campaign, but added that he believed much of the gossip in that regard was "exaggerated."

BIG BONE OIL COMPANY

Has Brought in Two Wells on Its Warren County Lease.

Big Bone Oil Company which is operating on a lease in Warren county, this State, has brought in two wells, and there is every reason to believe that the company has a good thing in its hands. The officers of the company are E. H. Berkshire, of Petersburg, president, and the directors are Edward Terrill, Erlanger; E. N. Hight, Cincinnati; N. E. Riddell, Burlington; C. R. Slater, Jr., Covington; C. H. McQuinn, Lexington; J. C. McDermott, Bowling Green. The latter gentleman is an oil expert and owned the lease in Warren county and having lost it, he sold it to the Big Bone Oil Co. in this county so favorably impressed that he proposed to exchange stock in the lease in the Big Bone Oil Co. A trade was made and Mr. McDermott started the drill on the Warren county lease with the result above stated. It is proposed to develop the Warren-co, property and then begin sinking wells on the Boone county leases at Big Bone. The Warren county wells are in the neighborhood of some of the best wells in that part of the State.

Card of Thanks.

It is with a feeling of deep appreciation that the American Legion expresses its thanks to the I. O. O. F. Lodge of Hebron for the use of the latter's hall in giving the Legion dance on Friday night, May 21st. The action of the Hebron lodge was thoroughly consistent with the relations which is supposed to exist between organizations of the character named above in that they exemplified the fraternal feeling so essential to the welfare of both. The American Legion as a whole feels deeply indebted for the kind assistance and courteous treatment accorded it and trusts that the future will offer some opportunity to repay the debt with interest.

Attended Big Sale of Cattle.

W. G. Kite, wife and daughter, S. Kite and family and Dr. H. Hood, of Waterloo, attended the big Jersey cattle sale of the Allen Dale Farms last Saturday near Shelbyville, this State. The sale was held at 10 o'clock and brought an average of $753. The highest priced animal was Fairy Glens Raleigh, which brought $750. Messrs. Kite and Kite each brought a few young animals to add to their already well selected herds.

STOLEN ALCOHOL RECOVERED.

Grant County News.

Five barrels of grain alcohol, which was stolen from a freight car embargoed here last Saturday morning, just before dawn was recovered a few hours later after a search was made and the stolen goods located in an unused barn belonging to Ernest Littell on the Cynthia pike a mile from town. Six barrels were removed from the car but the robbers got away with only five barrels, which it is claimed they took away on a U. S. government truck donated to the county for road building purposes.

The car, which is one of three which have been standing on the northbound track since that track has been made a siding for embargoed cars, was located just in the edge of town. It contained 152 barrels of 110 proof alcohol, each barrel said to have a commercial value of about $100. The stolen two cars contain 190 proof alcohol which is said to have a commercial value of $4,000 barrel. Since the theft about a week ago, the stolen goods have been placed over the cars by the railroad company. The cars are located something like a mile apart, however, and while he strolled down the track to see if the other two cars were all right the robbers did their work. Cues furnished by nearby residents of the place of storage resulted in the stolen goods being located.

IDEAL SECTION ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY.

There is to be constructed on the Lincoln Highway by the national road stretching across the country from ocean to ocean, an "ideal section" which will embody the highest ideals of modern highway construction. This section will serve as an example to the road builders of the world seeking information as to the best and most satisfactory type of road that can be built.

The funds for building the section will be provided by the United States government. It is announced that the company will pay for the section, Vice-President J. N. Gunn said:

"The desire of the company in authorizing the appropriation to advance public knowledge regarding proper permanent highway construction, and to stimulate the public mind to the importance of having in charge the construction of America's public roads, a careful consideration of the needs of the future in undertaking present conditions."

The specifications of the "Ideal Section" have not yet been decided. A questionnaire has been mailed to every highway commissioner, engineer and engineer in the U. S. asking for suggestions. The location of the section has not yet been selected, but conditions on the Lincoln Highway in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa indicate that one of these states will be chosen.

Growing Stronger.

In this issue appears the announcement of Hon. A. B. Rouse as a candidate for the Democratic nomination and reelection to Congress from this Congressional District. Of course he announces his candidacy as a result of the action of the Democrats at the primary election the first Saturday in next August. Mr. Rouse has made the district his representative and ever had in Congress and is one of the most popular members of that body. There has been an effort made to spread throughout the district the impression that Mr. Rouse has been losing his political strength, but the majorities by which he has been elected do not indicate any weakness and everything points to his receiving a larger vote at the next regular election than any he has polled in the past. Justly popular with the rank and file of his party throughout the district, having made himself so by his untiring efforts in behalf of the people, he is receiving the support of a larger vote at the next regular election than any he has polled in the past. Justly popular with the rank and file of his party throughout the district, having made himself so by his untiring efforts in behalf of the people, he is receiving the support of a larger vote at the next regular election than any he has polled in the past.

Bank Robbed in Ohio.

Toledo, Ohio, May 20.—In true Western style six bandits shot up the main artery of Delta, O., near here, seriously wounding James Warner, a baker, invaded the Peoples Savings Bank and escaped with $12,000 in cash and Liberty bonds.

Townpeople scurried for shelter as the bandit sped thru two main streets in a touring car, shooting in all directions. More than fifty shots were fired.

Entering the bank the bandits slugged Mark Casler, the assistant cashier, with the butt of a revolver, rendering him unconscious. Other employees were forced into a back room.

The bandits escaped toward Toledo.

Some tobacco was set in different parts of the county last week. The plants were not large.

BUY LIBERTY BONDS

Intrinsic Values of Liberty Issues Are Pointed Out—Profits in Purchases Now.

Washington, May 20.—The Treasury appealed today to the press of the United States to aid in improving the Liberty Bond situation by carrying in their columns a statement as to the intrinsic value and their present price. The statement explained the reasons for the present bond prices and suggested methods for their improvement.

Referring to the slump in market quotations for Liberty bonds, the statement said, "The price has been brought down because so many people are offering to sell their bonds."

"If the market is flooded with tomatoes," the statement added, "You can buy them cheap, but if every one is clamoring for tomatoes and there are few to be had, the price goes up. The same is true of Liberty Bonds. Short-sighted people are dumping them on the market and wise ones are buying them."

The Treasury advised holding on to the bonds bought during the war and the buying of as many more at the present low prices. It was pointed out that the latter case the purchaser will not only receive the regular interest but make a clear profit of the difference between present prices and the face value of the bonds.

Seeing the Country.

A. L. Nichols and wife had as guests last Monday night Mr. and Mrs. Evan Taylor and their son, of Dawson, Minnesota. Mr. Taylor and son have been touring in their motor car for several months and have visited thirty-eight states in their travels. They visited several of the southern States where they found the best roads which were dirt. The worst roads were in Kentucky. The best looking stock Mr. Taylor saw on his trip was in the Blue Grass section of this State. They left this morning to visit friends in Osgood, Indiana, where they will leave for their Minnesota home, where they will stay a couple of weeks and then leave for another trip through the north, spending the summer. It was three years ago that Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nichols.

Wheat Crop in France.

It is reported that the wheat crop in France this year will break all records. It is to be hoped that in view of the conditions, for that would be of assistance not only to France but to all the world. It would make it unnecessary for France to purchase wheat in foreign markets, and would thus conserve her credit. And every increase in production, especially in food supplies, would be placed and cared for through the day free of charge and without any further obligation to me.

Heavy traffic on the Petersburg and Burlington pike the past few months has put the road in very bad condition at several points, and what a few months ago was a good road is now about on a par with other roads in the county. In many places the road is so bad that the road is very much vexed at the manner in which their road has been damaged.

BOONE HIGH SCHOOL

Commencement Exercises Attended By Large Crowd.

About the time the people in the country were about to start to Burlington last Sunday evening to hear the baccalaureate sermon delivered by Rev. R. E. DeMolay, it was threatening rain and, no doubt many remained at home on that account, but as it was the large auditorium at the Baptist church was filled to capacity. Owing to illness several of the graduates were unable to be present. At the appointed hour the procession of graduates, headed by Prof. Caywood and Miss Ruth Kelly, entered the church and marched to the seats reserved for them. After devotional exercises Rev. DeMolay announced the subject, "Take Aim," and proceeded to deliver an interesting discourse along a line of sound and thoughtful thought, giving the graduates numerous good pointers that will serve them to spend their lives in the way they desire. Rev. DeMolay was at his best and he handled his subject in a forceful manner that claimed the best of attention on the part of the congregation. The pulpit had been handsomely decorated with flowers for the occasion.

The seating capacity and standing room of the large auditorium of the Baptist church were not sufficient to accommodate the crowd that assembled Tuesday night to witness the graduation exercises of the Boone Co. High School, and many there who had to remain on the outside of the building.

The graduates met at Mrs. Eliza Walton's across the street from the church and in procession marched to the church and took their places in the pulpit which had been handsomely decorated for the occasion with flowers. The invocation by Rev. J. W. Campbell was followed by a solo by one of the two gentlemen from the College of Music, Cincinnati, who had been employed to make music for the occasion. These gentlemen, one a pianist and the other a violinist, were very effective and were a considerable feature of the program.

Miss Alice Walton, salutatorian, had as her subject, "Music," and delivered a very pleasing salutatory.

Mr. Arthur Eggleston, valedictorian, had as his subject "Agriculture." Mr. Eggleston had given his subject much thought. It was well arranged and the large audience appreciated fully the young man's able effort.

The Class Address by President Will B. Campbell, of the Western College, was a gem and the audience was sorry when it was concluded. His subject was "The Finished Product."

The diplomas were delivered by Supt. J. C. Gordon, whose presence was appreciated as they always are on such an occasion.

The benediction by Rev. Campbell concluded the program and thus passed into history another very successful year of the Boone County High School, for the Principal, Prof. J. A. Caywood and his able assistants, Misses Ruth Kelly and Estelle Huey, are entitled to the praise of the entire community.

Following is a list of the students who received diplomas:

Harvey Baker,
Chester Goodrich,
Clarence Herbstreit,
Robert Youell,
Clifton Roberts,
Arthur Eggleston,
Edward Eggleston,
Beesley Aylor,
Lydia Aylor,
Mary Conner,
Lee Nora Graves,
Ruby Walton,
Elmer Walton,
Florence Eggleston,
Mary Eggleston,
Madeline Huey,
Kathryn Kelly,
Alice Walton,
Helen Stephenson,
Ida Mae Stephenson.

The large Christian church building at Petersburg could not accommodate the people who assembled there last Monday evening to attend the graduation exercises of Petersburg High School. There were ten graduates each of whom was a credit to the school. The Class Address by Dr. W. A. Fortune, of Lexington, was pronounced masterful and delightful. The large audience of 250 persons presented the diplomas accompanied by his usual happy and appropriate remarks on such occasions. Prof. Caywood and his assistants are entitled to great credit for the high standard to which they have brought the Petersburg school, and the people are justly appreciative of their ability as educators.

Attorney D. E. Castleman and W. A. Price, of Erlanger, were business visitors to Burlington last Tuesday.

Settlement With Sheriff.

BERLINGTON RECORDED—ONE.

Settlement with the Sheriff of Boone County, for the year 1919, on account of School fund and County funds for said year.

I find that said sheriff is charged with the following sums, to-wit:

Balance on hand last settlement $104,003.97

Received from road commission $22,531.81

Delinquent $77.93

Sale of dog tags 1,393.55

Receipts from sale of cement and sacks 17.20

Amount paid J. C. Gordon, 1919 calls for $12,002.24

I find the sheriff assessed property owned by the assessor in the amount of $7,315.00

Making the grand total assessment $12,150,000.00 of this total assessment $1,070,500 is tax on intangible personal property and therefore not subject to local taxation.

I find that the county court and fiscal court have released from taxation on account of erroneous and double assessment property of the value of $25,000.00.

Deducting these two items, we have a total of $1,045,500.00 upon which the sheriff is charged with the collection of the tax for general expense, road fund and sinking fund, amounting in the aggregate to 70c on the hundred dollars, and said sheriff is therefore charged $727,334.13.

The listed polls for the county are 2,824. The sheriff is charged with the collection of the tax from the various corporations required by the laws of the state to pay a property and franchise tax in Boone County, namely:

American T. & T. Co. $22.07

Q. & C. R. R. 5,548.00

Penalty on delinquent school tax 126.36

Total for all purposes other than school $9,086.39

The tax duplicate for school purposes on each of a total of 25c on the hundred dollars is $6,051,720.00; this sum is arrived at in this way: To the total valuation of $12,002,240 returned by the assessor, we add $83,325,240.00, amounting to $5,562.00, and also the value of intangible personal property not subject to tax amounting to $1,070,500.00, and also the value of property in the various school districts amounting to $4,847,338.00, leaving the net balance of $6,051,720.00, as stated.

The tax on this sum at 25c on the hundred dollars is $15,629.25. To this we add a tax on school purposes of $1.80 each on 1,895 polls subject to school tax, $1,393.55.

Franchise tax on the nine corporations was likewise collected by the sheriff for school purposes, and he is charged with said tax as follows:

American T. & T. Co. $7.67
Citizens Tel. Co. 4.20
Pullman Palace Car Co. 4.75

The sheriff's commission for collecting all taxes for all county purposes, including school, amounts to $4,899.78.

No part of this commission may be charged to the money collected for school purposes, and it is all, therefore, deducted from the $10,086.39, leaving $5,186.61 in this fund of $5,186.61.

Of this sum $12,108.52 is appropriated to the general expense fund, $24,978.09 to the sinking fund, and $2,078.13 to the road fund.

Presiding these sums to the respective accounts to which they are assigned, we have the sheriff charged as hereinafter set out before giving to the sheriff the receipts paid against the various funds, to-wit:

Why Suffer?
Mrs. J. A. Cox, of Alderson, W. Va., writes: "My daughter . . . suffered terribly. She could not turn in bed . . . the doctors gave her up, and we brought her home to die. She had suffered so much at . . . time. Having heard of Cardui, we got it for her."

CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic
"In a few days, she began to improve," Mrs. Cox continues, "and had no trouble at . . . Cardui cured her, and we sing its praises everywhere." We receive many thousands of similar letters every year, telling of the good Cardui has done for women who suffer from complaints so common to their sex. It should do you good, too. Try Cardui. E-77

DOG TOWN

Gez whiz! Mr. Editor please send me immediately by parcel post one quart of Amica, 2 yards of courtplaster, one left ear—medium size, one upper and two lower front teeth, and about 2 pounds of iron-gray hair as we need them very badly.

We are sorry to say our Lord Mayor, Hugh Stephens, has gotten himself into serious trouble. Charges have been preferred against him by his wife. It seems that the Mayor has been talking a great deal hear of late about Woman Suffrage, taking the battle away from the men and giving it to the babies, so they can run around and vote. He had said so much he had become obnoxious to his wife, who is a dyed in the wool suffragette, and she preferred charges at the Woman Suffrage club and he will be tried next Friday.

Last Monday morning as Mrs. Ryle, Mrs. Hodges, Mrs. Stephens and Mrs. Bodey were coming to town riding in a car with Frank Green as driver, just before getting to the bridge, Green lost control of the car and it ran into a telephone pole and was overturned. All escaped injury except Mrs. Stephens, who lost the leather off her last years hat and the driver, who lost his pipe. It was a lucky escape for them from an untimely death.

Thaddy Ryle and Ed Hankinson commenced, Monday morning, erecting a new factory building at the corner of Water street and Jump Ave. They have sold most of the stock in the company. Joe Hodges, W. B. Stephens, Chester McMurray and Frank Green are the largest purchasers in the company. They are rushing the work on the building night and day so as to be ready for the fall harvest.

We were told a good one on Grand Chancellor Howe. When visiting in the neighborhood last week his friend, Colin Kelly, had him in charge, introducing him to everybody he came across. About a dozen of our sweetest girls, after formalities were over, (Howe was in heaven as near as we wanted to be, so he told a party afterward), when one sweet young thing remarked: "Mr. Howe, are you the gentleman that invented the sewing machine?" For once Howe was knocked off his feet, but his composure soon came back and with a Chesterfield bow he remarked, "my great-grandfather was the man."

We understand that Meddinos Dessie Ryle, Hazel Hankinson and Gracie Smith expect to leave in a few days to attend the San Francisco Convention.

I heard a woman say that the Lord was merciful towards Rabbit Hash as he had the Ohio river give it a washing out every few years.

The local colored Masonic lodge gave a supper last Saturday night for the benefit of the lodge. It was well attended and everything passed off nicely. A string band made music for the entertainment of the crowd.

Big Value in Tires for The Smaller Cars

30x3 1/2 Goodyear Single-Cure

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are thick, strong tubes that reinforce casings properly. Why risk a good casing with a cheap tube? Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost little more than tubes of less merit. 30x3 1/2 size in water-proof bag $4.50

Back of the manufacture of Goodyear Tires for the smaller cars is the same purpose to supply high value in the product that is behind the manufacture of the Goodyear Tires that equip the most expensive automobiles built.

This purpose is expressed by the enormous resources, extraordinary skill and scrupulous care applied to the manufacture of Goodyear Tires in the largest tire factory in the world devoted solely to the 30x3-, 30x3 1/2-, and 31x4-inch sizes.

The effect of this endeavor is noted in the fact that last year more cars using these sizes were factory-equipped with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

It is also noted in the fact that if you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell, or other car requiring one of the sizes mentioned, you can secure Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes at the nearest Goodyear Service Station.

Two suspicious looking characters blew into Union after dark last Sunday and inquired for a place to spend the night, and Mrs. Voshell, the kind hearted, good lady that she is, allowed them to stay at the Eagle Hotel.

Monday morning they paroled the town in search of milk, they claimed, but it was noticed that they were taking in the town. They made inquiries about the postoffice and said they were on a farlough from a camp, which statement is believed to be untrue as they looked too young to belong to the army and were dressed in citizens' clothes. They were out of town a few hours Monday and during their stay changed their clothes for working clothes. When they returned each carried a sack but it was not learned what these sacks contained. The last seen of them late Monday evening they were beating it up the pike toward Beaver Lick.

Local Happenings.

The little girls about town have organized a literary club, secured a hall, erected and equipped a stage and provided benches for the accommodation of an audience. They gave their first entertainment on afternoon last week, which was attended by several young persons who were delighted with the recitations and songs. They first charged one cent admission but have decided to increase it to a nickel.

Cristianina, Noruega, Mayo 25.—El congreso Nacional Noruega se aprobó varias resoluciones relativas a un cambio de gobierno y entre ellas se cuenta una que aboga por la creación de un régimen revolucionario basado sobre el sistema del Soviet.

The above is copied from a paper sent us from Mexico by H. E. Fisher. We do not know what it is. Do you?

The remains of a child born a few days since to James Beemon and wife, who reside near Morrow, Ohio, were placed in the vault in Odd-Fellows cemetery last Sunday. It was a twin. The mother and the other child were reported to be getting along nicely at last accounts. Mr. Beemon moved from this neighborhood to his present home only a few months ago.

Quite a crowd of Erlanger boys spent several days the past week at their camp down on Gunpowder creek, where they fished, bathed and had a general good time. These Erlanger boys have always so conducted themselves as to make their coming to camp a pleasure to the citizens in the neighborhood rather than an event to be dreaded by them.

V. W. Gaines and a friend are said to have had very fine luck fishing in upper Woolper creek last Thursday. They caught a number of large fish, among them being one bass that weighed about four pounds, as large a specimen as was caught in that section of the stream.

The Big Bone Oil Co., brought in on its lease in Warren county, last Saturday afternoon, what appears to be a very fine well. The local stockholders were notified by wire of the happening Saturday evening. The oil was struck at a depth of less than 700 feet.

In some sections tobacco plants are dying in large numbers. It was first thought by some that this was due to the cold, wet weather, but investigation has shown in some cases at least it is due to a disease known as root-rot.

The trucks in the county are moving the lamb crop to market as fast as they are ready to go. Driving stock to market from this county is a thing of the past, as motor trucks are moving all kinds of stock on short notice.

Deputy Sheriff B. B. Hume made a business trip to Richmond, Va., last Friday. He took Tim Sandford along as a body guard and he deserted and left the officer to make his way out of the Hick creek jungles as best he could.

A large locust bloom is coming forth, and it is said a good crop year is assured, which will be very pleasing to the farmers who have had so much with which to contend in getting their corn and other crops planted.

A post card received from H. E. Fisher, of Petersburg, who is in Mexico, says: "Dear Mr. Ridgely: Am sending you a Mexico paper. Everybody here seems to have confidence in the new Mexican Government."

Miss Bessie Riggs, 23, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Riggs, of Erlanger, died of tuberculosis of the brain, at the home of her parents on the 26th ult. Burial at Highland cemetery last Friday.

Judge Lassing, of Burlington, and Edgar Riley, of St. Petersburg, Florida. It is said that Mr. Riley made considerable investments while in the southern city.

Dr. W. O. Rouse and daughter, Miss Rachel, of St. Petersburg, Florida, are visiting relatives in this county. They made the trip from their southern home in their automobile.

Mrs. J. M. Lassing had the misfortune one day last week to pierce one of her feet with a rusty nail, and for several days the wound caused her considerable pain.

Herbert Kirkpatrick shipped 500 old automobile tires to a junker in the city last Saturday. He had all sizes and styles. He had been quite a while collecting them.

With favorable weather prevailing this week a small percent of the corn crop in this county will remain to be planted after next Saturday night.

Quite a number of persons visited the graves of 19 and 20 last Sunday and placed flowers on the graves of departed relatives and friends.

BASE BALL

Several Interesting Contests. Petersburg and Verona Have Exciting Games.

Big Bone and Mudlick base ball teams hooked up on the grounds of the latter last Sunday afternoon where it was defeated 6 to 2. The last time these teams met Burlington went down in defeat 13 to 1, which shows the team is improving in form.

Burlington base ball club visited Hebron last Saturday afternoon where it was defeated 6 to 2. The last time these teams met Burlington went down in defeat 13 to 1, which shows the team is improving in form.

The Verona and Petersburg ball teams pulled off a very exciting game on the grounds of the former last Monday afternoon, Petersburg winning by a score of 6 to 4. At one time Verona had a lead of 4 to 0, but heavy stick work on the part of Petersburg and some bad errors behind Ryan, Verona's box artist, finally wiped it out. Matthews started the game for Petersburg but the third inning discovered that his arm was not in condition and Keim took his place and appeared to get stronger as the game progressed while Ryan weakened some after the third inning in which Verona scored four runs.

Bellevue defeated Aurora 12 to 7 at Bellevue last Monday afternoon. Joe Brady twirled for Bellevue and Allen Thompson was in the box for the visitors.

B. H. S. AT THE TOURNAMENT.

Prof. Caywood's team which he had hoped to present at the educational tournament at Dry Ridge last week was badly shot to pieces by illness, and his school was not represented in several of the contests. The Professor is well pleased with the showing his school made under the adverse conditions and submits below a list of the medals captured during the two days. The tournament will be held at Crittenden, Grant county, next year.

Following is Burlington's record in the tournament: Male Declaration, — Clayton Brown, second.

The first four schools in the tournament stood as follows: Dry Ridge, first; Walton, second; Burlington, third; Independence, fourth.

The Recorder Kicks.

It is said it is proposed to have Burlington receive the mail from Erlanger under the new contract which will go into effect the first of next month. The new schedule, if put into effect, will provide for the mail to leave Burlington early in the morning and return before noon and make a trip in the afternoon. Burlington is getting the best mail service it ever had and the proposed change should not be made. As the mail is now carried the carrier is enjoying a good passenger traffic and if the schedule is changed as proposed that will be just about wiped out. The mail service Burlington now has is all that can be desired and a strong protest should be made against the proposed change.

DON'T SELL BONDS.

Low Market Price of Liberty Paper No Cause For Alarm Washington Post.

The market price for Liberty bonds is quite low. Evidently many owners of bonds are selling these securities. If they are not compelled by dire necessity to let go their holdings, they are foolish to sell, for the bonds are worth 100 cents on the dollar and will bring that if they are held. In addition, they yield interest at a fair rate, and no pledge on earth is more sure. If the United States lives, the bonds will be paid in full, interest and principal. Of what other security is there worth as this is said with equal assurance?

A decrease in market price is often misunderstood by holders of bonds who are not familiar with financial matters. They take alarm and feel that they must sell their bonds "before they go lower in price." That is false reasoning. If adopted, it causes unnecessary loss to individuals who cannot afford to lose even one dollar.

All that is necessary is to hold all bonds. The market price is partly manipulated and partly a result of excessive selling by persons who may be ignorant or too hard pressed. But the market price need have nothing to do with any bondholder. He is not concerned with the depth of a railroad cut if he is on a stout bridge, his only concern being the journey across the bridge. Similarly the only concern of a bondholder is to collect the coupons and the bond in full when due. The price might sag to nothing, but that means nothing if the owner does not sell. The United States is a strong bridge to maturity, exactly on the level and without regard to the depth of the chasm that is crossed.

The Lane's Turning.

To every thinking mind in this country it was clear that the era of high prices, high profits and high wages, ushered in by the outbreak of the war, could not go on endlessly. The only question was when it would end. There were many who were impatient to see it terminate, lest the madness bred of inflation should bring about cataclysmic conditions from which this nation in many years might not recover.

It must be a source of comfort to those who entertained such well-founded anxieties that the turning is at hand. The steady decline in the speculative market is the unerring sign. It was in the same way that the overstrain in the seventies, in the nineties of the last century, and in the first decade of this century was relaxed. But a more gratifying feature distinguishes this present adjustment. If the fall were equal to the height of the frenzy, the result would be terrific, destructive.

It is a great relief to know that the decline will be gradual. This is apparent from present developments. In the former periods mentioned it was a fall direct from the clouds to the earth. This time a parachute in the form of the Federal reserve system, which operates toward restoring normal balance, will insure a slow and safe descent. This further issue of paper money, and slowly reduces the amount in circulation. Of course, this wise suggestion is prompted by the forcible reminder of a steadily declining gold reserve.

It is for the public now to adjust its business affairs, by declining all commitments based, as heretofore, on extensive credit and a continuous current of money. This applies to the sphere of commercial dealings, to contracts of buying, selling and wages.

PERFECTION NOT OFTEN SEEN

Assertion Made That Not One Person in Ten Thousand is Absolutely Sane.

Perfect health of mind and body are both exceedingly rare. Not one "civilized" person out of ten thousand is perfectly healthy. Not one civilized person out of ten thousand is perfectly sane. That is to say, absolutely level headed in all respects, not attaching undue importance to its own hobby, and with no prejudices against new ideas, able to appreciate the other side of the question and to change his ideas when he is convinced that he is wrong.

Sanity has been defined as "the ability to accommodate oneself to one's environment." Not a bad definition. Those who deery the man and customs of other races or people, merely because they are different from their own are not entirely sane — Los Angeles Times.

Margaret Eliza Malory.

Margaret Eliza Malory Cook, was born near Burlington, Jan. 25, 1863; was married to Andrew Cook Feb. 8, 1882. To them were born six children. She leaves to mourn her death a husband, seven children, seven grandchildren, three sisters and one brother. She was known for her unbounded hospitality and kindness to all. She, with her husband united with the Patriot, Ind. Baptist church, and she has ever since been a consistent Christian. On account of living a distance from her church, and at times on account of her health, she had not been permitted to attend church services, but amid all her suffering in life sorrow and pain she has ever been enabled to say that the "Lord is my Shepherd."

May has warmed up considerably and a real taste of summer weather has been furnished.

The cherries on some trees are low and far between.

Came Back Home.

The strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" by an old fiddler in Indiana brought back memories so dear to Miss Martha Randall, a student at the University of Indiana, that she came post haste to matriculate in the Arts of Science College at the University of Kentucky, last September. She is now planning to specialize to a great extent in Botany and to do extra work in History at the University. Miss Randall's home is in this county, but she is a graduate of the Aurora, Indiana, High School, and also of Bowling Green Normal. She taught one year in the Model School at Bowling Green and was also a principal of an elementary school in the western part of the state. Last year she was assistant principal of the Butler Hi School. Besides her work, which Miss Randall declares to be so intensely interesting, she takes a great interest in the various Campus Clubs and is treasurer of the Ruffalo Botany Club. She is doing remarkable work and shows unusual character in her chosen work. Her friends will be glad to hear of her success and be proud to say she is from Boone county.

Dark Growers Form Protective Association.

Hopkinsville.—Dissatisfied with the prices being paid for tobacco and the future outlook in that respect, about twenty-five representatives of counties in the dark growing section of Kentucky and Tennessee met at Guthrie and perfected The Tobacco Planters' Association. The charter for the organization, fixing only nominal capital stock, was taken out some time ago. The purpose of the organization is very similar to that of the Tobacco Growers' Association, which figured so largely in tobacco affairs several years ago and which had a large membership in the dark belt. The new association were actively identified with that organization.

The plan this time is to have the farmers pledge their crops for a period of three years. These will be offered first in the loose state, and if prices are not satisfactory the tobacco will be put in the hands of the organization. The tobacco was only handled in the prized state, and this was one of the causes for the dissatisfaction which arose.

It is proposed to form an organization in each county in the district at once and to actively begin a campaign for pledges, which should show how being put into the field.

Caused By A Dog.

Somerset, May 26.—The killing of a bird dog about four weeks ago had its sequel late Tuesday afternoon in the killing of three men on the farm of John Hansford at Ocallo, about 12 miles from this place, in Pulaski county. The dead are Jack McKinney and his two sons, Virgil and George McKinney. John Hansford and his son Scott Hansford, are now here, having come into Somerset late yesterday and surrendered to County Judge Tartar. There were no witnesses to the killing, and the only account is that given by the defendants. John Hansford, who is a deputy sheriff, said that about four weeks ago one of the McKinneys killed a bird dog belonging to his son, and that had feeling had been engendered by the incident. Late Tuesday, he said, the McKinneys had come to their farm, where he and his son were working in the field. The trouble was renewed, and the battle began. The McKinneys were killed outright, but neither Hansford nor his son received a wound.

Slow-Turning Tide of Prices.

The public must not become discouraged because the reaction from high prices is slow. On the other hand, there is encouragement in signs of a recession movement, not clearly defined in all its phases, but emphasized by recognized economists as having started and certain to gain momentum. Like the tide of the ocean when at its height, the first stage of recession must be expected to be marked by sudden waves that for the moment seem to combat the inevitable retrogression.

So it is with commodities. Many of them which enter directly into the necessary cost of living are selling lower. Others, like the stubborn waves of the ocean, are resisting the general tendency and serve to keep the general average high. Also, the recent "cut prices" sales at retail are not to be construed as marking an immediate downward movement. Many of them were for the purpose of clearing off goods that had accumulated over a very unfavorable season. Many of the lower quotations made by wholesalers were with the hope of facilitating the movement of goods tied up by railroad congestion and embargoes.

There are too many things operating against lower prices to justify expectation that they will come with a sweep. Strikes have interfered with transportation. Scarcity of raw materials at the mills, as well as idleness of rest- less employees, is curtailing production. There still is a strong buying power in the people, and a lingering of the extravagance contracted from war inflation and higher wages. This last was shown plainly in the eagerness with which "cut prices" goods at recent retail clearances were snapped up at prices which in many cases were severely discounted. Their marking up earlier in the year. There must be freer movement of raw materials, less idleness, more production, and a continuance of the public challenge of profiteering, before marked permanence and continuance may be expected of the receding price tide.

Besides all this, unless the recession of prices is to end in financial and business panic, it must be as gradual as was the advance of prices, which was a development of six years of war inflation, and has been carried over into the reconstruction period because of the world-wide waste of war, the turmoil of the people, the unsettlement of industry and of all economic conditions, and the desire of manufacturers, middlemen and wage earners to re- gain or increase their war-time scale of prices without recognition of the fact that deflation must be general and not partial.

What's become of the prejudice against automobiles because they frightened the horses

NOW cars are every- where. The horses have gotten used to them— and so has everybody else. Think of it! This year the American people will spend nearly a billion dollars on tires alone.

Tires are one of the big- gest items on the car owner's bills.

Hardly a Saturday, when you motorists drop in to "tune up" for a Sunday trip, that one or more of you doesn't tell us something of value to our business. Sooner or later it comes back to you in Service.

Service is what the car owners of this community are looking for nowadays.

And especially the small car owners, who put service first in figuring their motor- ing expenditures.

Just because a man has a moderate-price car is no reason why he should get any less service out of his tires.

We believe that the man with the small car is entitled to just as good tire service as the man with the big car—and both are entitled to the best tire service they can get.

That's why we represent U. S. Tires in this commu- nity.

And why more car owners—large and small—are com- ing to us every day for U. S. Tires.

Come in and talk to us about tires. We're here to help you get the kind of tires you want.

Foch Forecasts the Future.

The prognostication of another war, by General Foch, will send a shiver down the backbone of the world. For the fear of it is in its very soul, and its respect for the opinion of that military genius will serve to deepen its apprehension into consternation.

Nothing could be more terrible than having to take the next great war for granted. Unconsciously, if not intentionally and with deliberation, every Government would begin to stiffen its sinews and summon up its blood for a conflict which would drag into its maelstrom all the peoples on the globe. Because our fears are fathers of our thoughts and of our conduct, both the fear of war would be the breeder of that war. Without another valid reason for its occurrence, that universal dread might easily render the conflict absolutely certain.

It will be natural, therefore, to deprecate this gloomy utterance of the great French soldier. The men of peace will reproach him for the pessimism of his view, how ever clearly he may think he can foresee the current of events. They will condemn him for making certain what, without his aid would be, at its worst, a dread contingency.

There will be those, however, who will think that nothing can be worse than that the world should be caught napping by a catastrophe like the German war. It was the element of unpreparedness which seems to them to be the direst evil of that situation. They never mean to be caught asleep or off their guard again by a tempest so tremendous. For a moment they are forewarned, they think.

The choice between these evils will be difficult for most of us common people. Whether it is better to live in a constant state of apprehension, or let their fears engender a possibly avoidable catastrophe; to turn their backs into an armed camp, and train their souls to rivalries and to hatreds; or, on the other hand, to stick their ostrich heads in the sand and permit themselves to become the easy prey of mercenary enemies, they cannot easily decide.

Sharp, indeed, are the horns of this dilemma, but one of them must be chosen.

The Immigration Problem.

In every period of high industrial activity this country has been pressed by a scarcity of man-power. It is brought home the more forcibly by present conditions. Acreage of food-producing land has been cut by reason of the lack of farm hands, who, it seems, are being lured to industrial centers. This is cataclysmal. And even the depopulation of farms has not supplied the industries and trades with sufficient help, all of which amply proves that the stream of immigration, shut off by the great war, again must be opened up with caution, of course.

There is just reason for hesitating to unbolt the gates, because of the lawless spirit shown by workmen of diverse nationalities. This prompts circumspection, but must not bar the relief of which this country stands in sore need. There is no insurmountable obstacle to overcome in relieving the difficulty. Experience has shown deportation to be an effective means in suppressing smuggling, the most pestilently hostile to the institutions of the nation. All that is required is to put a finer edge to this weapon. The arms of the authorities should be strengthened in deportation proceedings.

The fact is that the sharp lessons administered of late by the Government have had considerable effect here and abroad. The deportation of Emma Goldman and her lack-moral companions was an announcement to the red fraternity throughout the world that America no longer is the country "where everyone can do as he pleases." This will keep those away who come only to achieve vicious ends.

With such precautionary measures and other regulations that may suggest themselves, immigration should be permitted in order to obtain the man-power so sorely needed on the farms and in the factories of America.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Miller, of Florence neighborhood, entertained at dinner Decoration day their daughter, Mrs. M. B. Black and daughter, Miss, Mr. A. B. Cummins, J. S. Poor, all of Covington; Misses Fannie and May O'Hara, of Erlanger; Mr. J. L. Frazier, the popular cashier of Union Bank, and J. S. Surber, of Florence, who went out in the afternoon to give Mr. Miller's farm and to give him some instructions in tilling the soil.

Mrs. J. A. Richmond moved from Bellevue to Dry Ridge, Grant county, last Tuesday. Mrs. Richmond is the wife of a man well known to the people of Bellevue and hated to leave them, and they were sorry to see her leave.

Joseph Maurer, an old citizen of Bellevue, and the father of Circuit Clerk Chas. Maurer, has been very ill the past week. Owing to the very much the nature of his trouble there is no hope of his improving.

Elijah Stephens and Walter Whitcomb, Burlington, and R. D. Barbers, attempted the rural carriers convention held at Erlanger last Monday night.

Henry Oelner, about the oldest citizen of the town of Florence, has been very ill for several days.

More Revolution in Germany.

Maximilian Harden, the courageous and irrepressible stormy petrel of Germany, predicts another revolution in that country within six or eight weeks, the revolt to be accompanied by a reactionary reign of terror.

Germany probably is as filled with the needs of revolution as is Mexico. Human passions are not confined with frontier boundaries. The heart-burnings, disappointments, greed, lusts, hates and ambitions loosed by the war and emphasized by the defeat of a proud and ruthless people still actively are spurring antagonistic groups to revenge or to the recoupment of vanished privileges and distinctions, or both. The disciples of Kultur rose to place and power thru generous blood-letting; the proletariat now has tasted blood; the formula is to gain all mortal desires thru shedding the blood of men. So Harden realizes. He tells us that the "idea" of revolution is in the air; that "the scenes are being set for it." He asserts that the plotters have nothing more to lose if they fail, and everything to gain if they win. This is the inducement to all revolution.

Perhaps it might not be a bad thing if what this brilliant and observing editor predicts should come to pass. Germany has not suffered proportionately with other countries affected by the great war. If her people are to be content to stand for a "communist revolution," which shall be made the excuse for a counter-junker revolution, they deserve death. It will come to them in such a contingency.

The world does not yet seem to have sickened of war and its brutalities. Forasmuch as the so-called Christian nations still are playing the game, making it a sanguinary pastime. Perhaps, by and by, the conscience of the world will revolt against the obscenity of blood lust, and we shall realize a period of comparative peace and good will on earth. But at present that time seems to be remote.—Ex.

Joseph Bullock.

Joseph Bullock passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Edgar Graves, near Louisville, Wednesday morning, May 6, 1930. He was born in West Haddlesley, England, March 16, 1838. He was 92 years 2 months and 10 days old. He was united in marriage to Mary Elizabeth Ibbotson in 1871, coming to America the same year, and their journey thru life was longer than the average, she having been called home just one month before.

He leaves two sons, Wilfred and James, of Hebron, and two daughters, Mrs. Frank Jackson, of Camden, Ohio, and Mrs. Edgar Graves, of Louisville. The services were held at Hebron Lutheran church last Friday afternoon.

Card of Thanks.—We wish to thank our many friends and neighbors who were so kind during the illness and death of our father, Joseph Bullock; also Bro. Royer for his consoling words, the choir for the music and Mr. Swindler, of Latonia, for conducting the services.

The Bereaved Family.

James Thomas Jones.

James Thomas Jones died at his home in Petersburg May 28th. He was born in 1857. He was united in marriage March 1, 1872, to Jennie Aera. He is survived by his wife, three sons, Elbert Harman, Edward, and two daughters, Mrs. Charles Moore and Mrs. John Wilson, besides 11 grandchildren. He leaves a host of friends to mourn his death, a highly esteemed citizen of the county of which he had been a citizen all his life.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Swindler and Riley, after which the remains, in charge of undertaker Scott Chambers, of Walton, were conveyed to the Petersburg cemetery where they were laid to rest by the side of those of his son, Elbert, who died many years ago. Mr. Jones was a consistent member of the Baptist church from early in life, and the life he led is worth emulation by all.

Farmers Hard Struggle.

Hopkinsville, May 27.—Farmers in this region are struggling manfully with unprecedented conditions to raise crops this year. The rainy season, continuing a good part of the winter, delayed wheat planting for weeks, and there is little hope of a crop.

Rain also made it impossible to prepare plant beds for tobacco. Labor situation is worst known. Negroes are finding jobs in towns and cities. Thousands of children have been taken from the schools and many women and girls for the first time, are working in the fields to insure food crops. A large number of farmers, too, are working on Sunday. The introduction of tractors is proving an important factor, and these are often worked at night, artificial light being used.

County Road Engineer E. M. Arnold and wife were guests of his daughter, Edna, from last Saturday until Monday.

APPEAL TO CITIES

TO AID FARMERS.

Washington, May 23.—Appealing to city dwellers to aid the farmers harvest their crops this summer, Edwin T. Meredith, Secretary of Agriculture, today declared that without such aid "there is serious danger of a food scarcity next winter."

Handicapped by a combination of circumstances over which he has no control, the American farmer, the Secretary insists, is doing his utmost to meet the food needs of the country.

He absolves him of suspicion of slacking on the job. Because, however, of handicaps, chief among which is the shortage of labor, the Secretary declares, the farmer is faced by the necessity of curtailing his production, unless aid is assured to him.

For this reason Mr. Meredith urgently appeals to city business organizations and student bodies throughout the country to pledge themselves to send large numbers to the farms this summer and help the farmer gather his crops.

"The problem," he declared, "is as much the city man's as it is the farmer's." Their interests are inter-dependent. I often wonder if the inhabitants of the cities realize how closely their problem comes home to them.

"With the exception of the packing centers, the cities of the country have on hand at any time enough meat to feed them perhaps four days. They have enough flour to last only a few weeks. Their vegetables and fruits come in from day to day.

"Practically everything they eat is only a few days, or at most a few weeks removed from the farm. Whenever there is a shortage of production it is reflected instantly upon city dwellers.

"We face at present the danger of such a shortage for the next year. Curtailed acreage necessarily means curtailed food production, and without adequate labor farmers cannot maintain adequate acreage. Not alone is there a shortage of 30 per cent in the supply of hired labor, but farm work is behind because of the backward spring.

"With the best possible season from now until harvest, those two things—shortage of labor and late spring—mean reduced production. With a poor season from now on, a food scarcity is inevitable. High wages would mean but tie to the city worker if he could not buy food, except at famine prices.

"Curtailed food of immigration alone during the war has been sufficient to make a deep cut in the normal supply of labor of all kinds. With what supply of labor there is the farmer feels he is unable to compete with higher paying industries of the cities.

"If he is to have the help he needs this summer he must rely on a thorough awakening on the part of the cities to their responsibilities in the situation. They must realize that, so far as agricultural products are concerned, that an emergency faces the country, as grave in many respects as that which faced us during the war, and calling for the same degree of patriotic response.

"During the war the cities showed what they could do to aid the farmer in emergency. The present shortage of farm labor exactly corresponds in figures and in fact to the shortage which existed in the summer of 1918. Still, exceptionally large crops were produced that year. Why?

"In the first place, because the individual farmer himself gave every ounce of his energy to the patriotic duty of seeing that the country at war did not lack food. Old, retired, and sometimes crippled farmers, with their wives, went into the fields to help.

"Important also was the fact that large numbers of business men, students and workers in the city responded to the appeal that they pass a part or all of their vacation periods in the fields helping the farmers. Only by similar co-operation can we meet the present emergency in the agricultural situation.

RAIL LINE CROSSES OCEAN.

Remarkable Trip That Is Taken by Travelers on Their Way to Key West, Florida.

Thousands of Americans at the vacation time of the year take the only ocean trip that can be made on a railroad train, writes "Niksah" in the Chicago News, go to Key West by way of the line which runs through the Atlantic ocean on an embankment built from one to another of those tiny islands known as the Florida keys.

As you ride along this remarkable railroad, you look out the window and down into the clear shallow water and see great schools of fish playing near the surface and deeper down you can glimpse now and then the shadowy form of a small shark. On either side of you stretches away the horizon a vast expanse of brilliant blue water, dotted with islands, which vary in size from a fraction of an acre, to perhaps a quarter of a square mile. They are low and flat and covered with low-growing mangroves, and other swamp plants. Here and there a group of cocoanuts or royal palms lifts a feathery silhouette. Occasionally a little shack is glimpsed and a few mills are seen in the distance. But for the most part the region is a wilderness of blue water, white sand and low-growing jungle—a wilderness that you would love to explore in a small boat.

Of life you see little. Now and then white flocks of ibises rise from the islands; a few ducks splash daintily away from the shore; or a great blue heron trails its long legs in lonely dignity across

Why the Cleveland Six is Multiplying its Friends

The Cleveland Six is making new friends every day, thousands of them every month, because it brings them so much more than they had even dared to expect,—so much more of the pleasure of driving, and the ease of driving and of the comfort of riding.

The motor of the Cleveland Six—designed by the Cleveland company's own engineers, tested in road work and engineering shops for three years before being offered to the public, and now built in the company's own great factory—is something new to countless thousands of motorists who prefer the light six type of car.

They have never driven behind just such a motor as this. The wonders of its pick-up and flexibility are exceptional and the brakes sure. Low underslung spring construction and soft restful cushions give the Cleveland unusual qualities of comfort.

Since first sent out on its journey into the big world of motordom, last July, the Cleveland Six has made friends, and multiplied them. Thousands of owners know what a good car it is and they tell their friends.

MONTANA IN THE LEAD.

The State of Montana has the best all-round school system in the United States, according to the results of a comparative study of State school systems made public by the Russell Sage Foundation. The report assigns second place to the schools of California, third place to those of Arizona, fourth to New Jersey and fifth to the state of Washington.

Other findings of the report are that the school system of the United States as a whole has doubled in efficiency during the last fifty years, having an index number or rating of 26 in 1870 and one of 52 at the present time. Since these index numbers are figured on the basis of 100, the school system of the country has now an effectiveness or efficiency of only 52 per cent, according to the report.

The figures for the individual States as given show that during the past thirty years the West has been coming up educationally, while the East has been going down. During this time the greatest increase among all the States has been made by Utah, while the State to which is attributed the greatest falling off in the report is on the attendance in high schools. There are now 100 times as many pupils enrolled in high schools as there were in 1870. The number then was 10,000 and now it is nearly 2,000,000. The high school attendance has increased with great rapidity, but new pupils have been mostly girls.

The most notable educational change that has taken place during the fifty years covered by the report is in the attendance in high schools. There are now 100 times as many pupils enrolled in high schools as there were in 1870. The number then was 10,000 and now it is nearly 2,000,000. The high school attendance has increased with great rapidity, but new pupils have been mostly girls.

In the matter of teachers' salaries, the States show most diversified practices. The lowest average salary is $2 per month for the State of North Carolina, while the highest is $88 in California, both being based on a year of twelve months.

Figures are given to show the relative standing of the school systems of the States and possessions. These indicate that California has always been at or near the top of the list, while the two Carolinas have in every case been at or near the bottom. Every New England State is shown by the figures to be losing ground, while every State in the Far West has gained in relative rank during the period covered by the report.

Sectional Prejudice.

In the last few days there has been increasing mention of candidates in both parties who have hitherto not been considered for the nomination because they come from States to whose citizens presidential nominations are rarely given.

After the Civil war there existed a feeling against Southern men being President which lasted a number of years. Since then political expediency has given weight to the State from which a man has come in considering him for the presidential nomination. For example, it has been considered wise to nominate a man from doubtful States like Ohio and Indiana in the hope that his personal following in that State would carry the party in the national election. The Democrats have hesitated to nominate a man from the solid South because they have never secondly that the solid South would be Democratic anyway. The Republicans have hesitated to nominate a man from New England and have preferred to choose a man from a State that might go either way in the hope that the choice itself would carry the state into the column of the party making the nomination.

This line of reasoning and of action is one which the nation should try to get away from. It too greatly limits the choice of candidates. In the past month there has been probably more discussion of this question, more opposition to this policy than during the last twenty years. The discussion has arisen because several candidates have been suggested from States that were considered unavailable grounds from which a candidate might be chosen.

Undoubtedly one of the strongest men of the Democratic party is Carter Glass, now Senator from Virginia. He is in every way qualified for the presidency by his ability, by his experience, by his attractiveness of address. The New York Times has recently come out for the Ambassador to England, John W. Davis. Mr. Davis was one of the most brilliant and capable men in Congress in the past 20 years and as Solicitor General of the United States he demonstrated that he was one of the ablest men that ever held that office. Senator Glass is considered unavailable because he is from Virginia. Mr. Davis is from West Virginia and since West Virginia is almost a Southern State the possibility of his nomination has not seemed great. The Republicans have a somewhat similar situation in the candidacy of Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts, who has been highly spoken of and who has made an excellent record as Governor; but because he is from New England it is probable that he will be nominated.

It is time for the people of the United States to make it plain that they will not be deceived by these sectional prejudices. Other wise they defeat their own best interests. To eliminate the possibility of the nomination of Mr. Davis or Mr. Glass simply because they do not come from Ohio or New York or Indiana is to not only damage the Democratic party, but to injure the country by narrowly limiting the field for the selection of presidential candidates. Some of the ablest Presidents have come from Virginia; Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Harrison, Tyler, Taylor and Wilson were all born in Virginia, though of these only Tyler had his home in Virginia at the time of his election. But since the Civil war it has not been considered good policy to nominate a man from a Southern State.

It seems to the Evening Post that the politicians are overestimating the importance of a man's State in relation to his eligibility as a candidate. If he has good friends in the State in which he lives, he has more enemies there also. The people today are determining their votes upon the question of the issues involved and the ability of the men who are running rather than on State pride or sectional prejudice. The fact that Woodrow Wilson was born in Virginia and long held his residence there did not militate against him. He carried New York in 1912, although Roosevelt, a native of New York, ran against him.

As soon as the people can convince the politicians that the State from which a candidate comes is not a determining factor in the election, a much wider field for the choice of presidential candidates will be opened and the country will be more assured of men of real presidential capacity being nominated by both parties.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the B. C. F. Bureau will be in the office at Burlington, June 8th at 1:30 p. m. In the last report from the State Secretary, Gifford Morgan, there was an increase of 20 per cent in membership of the State organizations from April 1st to May 1st. Boone county did her share with an increase of 14 per cent during April. Let us endeavor to increase regularly in proportion to all front line counties. J. COLIN KELLY, Secy.

Two communications, one from Beech Grove and the other from Longwood Hollow were received at this office this week, neither of which bore the signature of the writer, hence we do not appear. The RECORDER must know who writes and we must know who writes any letter.

The Road to Recovery.

The speedy recovery of England, France and Belgium from the ravages of a fearfully destructive war affords a lesson—deserving careful study. Each of these three countries spent its available resources, almost to the last penny. Over and above this drain of the vital resources of national life, France and Belgium were crushed by the fearful loss of manpower, by the malicious destruction of their mines, of their factories and their machinery.

In less than eighteen months the traces of this devastation to an amazing extent have been obliterated. On the farms of Northern France, which the enemy riddled with bomb craters, crops are growing. Mines that were flooded and in which the machinery was smashed, are in operation. Factories have been reconstructed and the output would equal the prewar production but for the shortage of raw material. The public finances rapidly are recovering from the desperate conditions brought on by war.

This wonderful change was wrought by nothing else than the conviction that patriotism is as necessary in peace as in war. The patriotic workmen of these three nations scorn Bolshevism. In France and Belgium strikes are discouraged even by the workers. Industrial upheaval is recognized by them to be the greatest barrier in the way of recovery. The high taxes levied to reconstruct the financial strength are borne without grumbling.

Where people are animated by such patriotic spirit trouble finds no home and prosperity grows apace.

Mrs. H. W. Shearer and little daughter, Helen Hall, have been the guests of her parents Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall, the past week.

About Government Bonds.

Panama bonds issued by the U. S. Government some years ago, that are bearing two per cent interest, are quoted in the commercial money markets at slightly above par. And yet the same money markets are quoting Liberty Bonds below par, some around the 90 mark. And this gives a little food for thought.

The holder of the Panama bonds know that while the interest is small they are absolutely sure of that interest, and they know that their principal is as sure as time and tide. Now, exactly the same security lies behind the Liberty Bonds—the entire wealth of the richest nation this old country has ever known. And the Liberty Bonds bear interest at more than double the rate of the Panama bonds. It is a psychological problem pure and simple.

Liberty issues with that same feeling they did on previous issues. Yet one is as good as the other, while the returns to the investor on the Liberty issues are far more advantageous to him.

30x3 1/2 Goodyear Double-Cure
Fabric, All-Weather Tread..... $23.50
30x3 1/2 Goodyear Single-Cure
Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread..... $21.50

Last year more cars using 30x3-, 30x3 1/2-, or 31x4-inch tires were factory-equipped with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

This is plainly a result of the high relative value produced in these tires for the smaller cars by Goodyear's enormous resources and scrupulous care.

They represent the same intense endeavor to supply utmost satisfaction in tires that has laid the basis for the marked preference which exists everywhere for Goodyear Tires in the larger sizes.

This real Goodyear value in tires is available for your Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell, or other car using one of these sizes, at our nearest Service Station. Go there for these tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are thick, strong tubes that reinforce casings properly. Why risk a good casing with a cheap tube? Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost little more than tubes of less merit, 30x3 1/2 size in water-proof bag..... $4.50

Binder Twine Plentiful.

The wheat grower need have no apprehension as to the supply of binder twine this season. Reports coming to the bureau of plant industry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture indicate that there will be a plentiful supply of this commodity available for the American farmer. Not only will it be plentiful, but it is likely to be cheaper this year than for some years past.

Yucatan, the chief and cheapest sources of henequen, from which the twine is made, produced a large crop this year; which coupled with the termination of control of prices by the Commission Reguladora, was responsible for a drop in the price of fiber from 15 to 10 cents a pound in March. The price now is reported to be eight cents a pound. This reduction should be reflected in the price of twine this season.

Thus far the recent revolution in Mexico has not affected the henequen industry of Yucatan and Campeche, the two important fiber-growing states of that country. It is too late now for any disruption of this industry to affect seriously the supplies of twine for this year's harvest, as practically all the fiber necessary for the present needs have already been imported to the United States.

Although there is no danger for this year's twine supply, officials of the Department of Agriculture are somewhat apprehensive over the effect that the low prices of fiber prevailing now will have upon the production of henequen during the next few years. Low prices, according to reports to the department, are leading the growers in Yucatan to reduce their planting, with the result that a real shortage of the fiber five or six years hence is a very likely possibility.

Hickman, Ky., May 20. — Roy Shaw, well known farmer residing east of Hickman, states that a few days ago he brought in 200 pounds of wool. This he sold at 30 cents a pound, or $60. Then he went to purchase a suit of clothes for his son and found that the money received for the wool was just enough to pay for the suit. He says there are about four pounds of wool in a suit, and on that basis the wool he sold for $60 will make fifty suits, which sold at $60 a suit, will bring the seller $3,000. Allowing half for labor and other material going into the suit, somebody still gets a profit of $1,250 on a $60 investment. The wool in a suit has cost the manufacturer less than the sum of ten dollars.

An Economic Fiction.

It is the greatest joy of economic fictions to disguise themselves behind some ethical fact or law, and so escape detection. Of all these masquerading rascals none is more crafty, more deceptive, nor more fatal to the individual and community life of man than the claim that it is the duty of capable workmen to limit the exercise of their talents in behalf of less competent companions in shops and mills. To do so is, indeed, to perform an act of self-sacrifice which is, therefore, claimed to be a virtue.

But all sacrifices of one's self for some such acts are vices! It is a vice to sacrifice one's self for the enjoyment of illegitimate pleasures; for unworthy causes; for ignoble ideals; for people who only take advantage of the sacrificial act to achieve the evil ends they could not otherwise accomplish.

It is even an ethical law that, while we ought to give others our light, it is a blasphemy to bestow upon them either our lamps or oil.

When labor agitators demand the restriction of human talents in behalf of incompetent workmen they are either ignorant or dishonest if they urge this fatal act as a virtue on the ground of its being a sacrificial act. In the first place, their lowering of the standard output of human energy will diminish, instead of increase, the efforts of their inferiors and so do their beneficiaries harm, instead of good, and in the second place, will bring about the certain atrophy of their own unutilized energy and skill.

Nature knows no other more inexorable law than this one of the atrophy of organs, or faculties when unemployed, of which the existence of the verminiform appendix and the rudimentary muscles of human ears are the unanswerable demonstration.

It is no more certain that a building will deteriorate by disuse than a hand, or a brain, a faculty, or a talent. If it is desired to reduce the ability and efficiency of the race to produce the necessities of human life the advocates of this rotten economic principle have chosen the shortest cut to their goal by foisting it upon their unsuspecting fellows. It will deteriorate the strongest nation it would make the world a desert.

An interesting contest is raging between the young men and young ladies of our Sunday school and the boys declared Sunday that if they won they would treat the girls to a 25 mile hike. Announcement is made later of the real decision.

The Ladies' Aid met at the church last Wednesday and spent the day quilting. The ladies very enthusiastically planned new work for the coming year. Anyone wishing to join the Aid or help us in this splendid work will please come to the meetings or notify Mrs. Spencer Tanner.

A great deal of tobacco ground was prepared for planting the past week, and as the plants are about all ready, nearly all the crop in this county will be set out upon the coming of the next season. Quite a number of growers whose plants were early have been using tobacco seed, and the planting has been in progress all this week on a small scale. So far all the ground that has been set is in good condition and the plants are reported as making a nice start except in a few instances where cut worms have done a great deal of damage.

William G. Rouse, son of the late Taswell B. Rouse, died on the 8th inst., at his home in Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, aged 57 years. Mr. Rouse was born and raised near Burlington, but he was a resident of Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, for many years. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Emma Bickman. Mr. Rouse has a large number of relatives in this county, his mother being a sister of the late Ben R. Gaines.

Grass is beginning to acquire its fattening qualities and live stock is improving nicely after coming out of the winter in rather bad shape.

Rev. David Blyth, of West Liberty, Ohio, was in Burlington Tuesday, meeting his friends, all of whom were glad to see him looking so well.

Elder H. M. Curry will preach at Mt. Pleasant church at the usual hour on the morning of the fourth Sunday in this month.

Mrs. Eliza Poston has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Kelly, out on the East Bend road, for several days.

Remember W. C. Weavers sale on the afternoon of the 19th inst., near Burlington.

The recent landing in New York of a number of Scandinavian girls and women caused a feeling in the houses of the city where house servants are needed. The rejoicing was premature. The refusal to accept places as cooks and maids and nannies was almost unanimous. Swedes and Norwegians make excellent house servants, but they no longer desire domestic work. They are finding places in factories and restaurants and shops.

The shortage of help in the homes and on the farms has similar aspects. The hired man and the hired man voice the same complaint of long hours, indefinite duties, little time for recreation and rest, lack of privacy and personal freedom, loneliness, crowded or uncomfortable sleeping quarters, and in some instances, lack of sufficient nourishing food, and irregular pay.

The difficulty of securing domestic help is daily increasing, and farmers all over the country are calling for men to plant and plant. The supply of farm labor is only 72 per cent. of normal and 15 per cent. below what it was last year. Statistics show that domestic servants are decreasing in numbers, while all other occupations available for women are constantly and rapidly increasing. The number of industries open to women was largely augmented during the war. It was necessary for women to take the places of men—and in many instances they have done the work so well and have found it so much more lucrative than their former positions that they have continued the work.

During the past ten years much has been done to make domestic service more acceptable. Housekeepers are learning to systematize the work so that the duties are more definitely known, and more "time off" is allowed. Wages have increased, and, considering the board and perquisites, the pay is very high in comparison with women's wages in other occupations. Greater attention is being paid to servants' quarters, and today there is little reasonable complaint along this line. Yet, in spite of the greater attractiveness of the service, the number of domestic servants is steadily decreasing.

When we consider that, according to the census of 1910, only 3 per cent. of the families in the United States employed servants, and that during the last 10 years the number has greatly decreased, we realize that the house servant shortage is of limited and insignificant importance in comparison with the shortage of farm labor.

Unless the farmers receive help a serious food shortage is threatened. Farmers' sons released from campments or overseas work instead of returning to the farms, have, in large numbers, preferred to locate in cities, where they receive higher wages and are not subject to the long hours and the monotony of farm life. The lure of the city has also been felt by many of the young folk who remained on the farm during the war, and they are deserting the farmer at the critical planting time. Some of the younger farmers, and that during the last 10 years the number has greatly decreased, we realize that the house servant shortage is of limited and insignificant importance in comparison with the shortage of farm labor.

What is the remedy? Comfortable living conditions for farm labor, fair wages paid at regular intervals, reasonable working hours and better rural schools. The farmer can, and has met the situation somewhat by the use of farm machinery.

In brief, the rural districts must be made as attractive for habitation as the city. Most people prefer to live in the country, but they feel the lack of the conveniences of the city, the opportunities for recreation the city affords, and the opportunities for educating the children. Theaters cannot be put in the country, but library extensions and community meetings at school houses are active in the work of recreation and modern science has done much to alleviate the inconvenience of living in the country. The greatest work now to be done is in bringing the rural schools up to the standard of the city school.

The U. S. Supreme Court has refused to review the testimony in cases of the Government against C. B. Schoberg, Latonia, 62 years old, shoemaker and former Kenyon County Magistrate; Henry Peterson, 65 years old, wealthy tobacco dealer, Kenyon county; and J. H. Kruse, 56 years old, former Covington brewer, who were convicted in the United States District Court, Covington, in September, 1918, following indictments which charged them with having violated the Federal sedition act. Peterson was sentenced to serve five years in the same prison.

The only way for these men to escape serving their sentences is to secure a pardon from the president.

Children's day services will be held at Hopeful church Sunday, June 13, at 10:30 p. m. This service is especially different from the usual one, as it attracts a large attendance. There will be special music and a program for the children.

Don't Miss This

Vegetation is needing some warm nights to hasten its growth.

Burlington, usually quiet, has been exceedingly so for the past two weeks.

B. F. Eggleston, of Hebron, was a caller at this office early Wednesday morning.

Dirt roads went on the bum again last week, and were very bad at some points.

Remember W. C. Weavers sale on the afternoon of the 19th inst., near Burlington.

J. W. Conner and Lyman Rice, of Erlanger, were in Burlington a short time last Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Alice Snyder and Miss Amelia Corbin are visiting their sister, Mrs. Fannie Snyder, of Petersburg.

R. O. Ryle, of the Beech Grove neighborhood, passed thru Burlington Wednesday morning with a truck load of fine lams.

W. D. Cropper, J. C. Gordon, A. B. Renaker, L. T. Utz and B. H. Ryle attended the bankers' meeting held at Ft. Mitchell yesterday.

The G. O. P. National Convention at Chicago had just begun to warm up nicely when the Recorder and the Burlington Standard carried the news that the candidates were for a real hot time in the candidate making.

The RECORDER received a ton of newspaper paper last Tuesday that cost just $21.30 laid down in the office. A few years ago the same amount of paper cost $41 laid down in the office.

Master Commissioner Chas. Maurer sold land last Monday as follows: In the case of Grunkemeyer against Murphy about 10 acres to be divided for $500. In the case of Slick against Slick 120 acres to Fannie Slick for $500.

Burlington postoffice will soon become a third-class office, which carries a better salary than the present office, and an appropriation for clerk hire, fuel and lights. The postmaster will be appointed by the president and will hold office four years from the date of appointment.

BUILD MORE HOMES!

From the far Philippines comes the urgent call of the Governor General asking for assistance in the matter of rent disputes. Chicago is organizing a $100,000,000 corporation for the purpose of house construction. Other cities are moving along this line. The Ways and Means Committee at the Capitol recently was told that a nation-wide shortage of houses is the root of unrest in the country, and the stimulation of building activities is urged if the nation would avoid an ominous crisis. In England a rent restriction bill seeks to aid in correcting the abuse of profiteering. France is struggling with the same problem.

That something must be done in this matter in order that the country may avoid serious consequences is obvious; that is, some thing comprehensive and far-reaching in its scope and effect. The trouble is not confined to the cities, but is evidenced in suburb, village and hamlet. Houses are scarce and rent is high.

The other day the Governor of Wisconsin in a special message to the Legislature recommended a law applicable to all cities in the state, giving the State Railway Commission power to fix the rental of buildings as it now has the power to fix utility charges and railroad rates. The Governor said:

"Those who have taken advantage of the situation, either directly or by skillful devices, have compelled the state to resort to official regulation. It is an inefficient Government, indeed, that will permit avarice to pick the pockets of the people, or permit them to be put out into the street by soulless property owners or by equally soulless agents."

The working out of such regulatory legislation presents many difficulties. There should be emergency regulation by law in every state that would insure just and reasonable rents. The landlord should have a fair return for the use of his property, and the tenant should be protected against actual distress and hardship. But, after all, the matter depends as much on the character of the people as on the character of the law.

Stanley Eddins appears to be on the improve now for good. He has had a very tough time of it the past few months.

A gentleman by the name of Campbell moved from the city last Saturday to W. L. Kirkpatrick's bungalow out on the East Bend road.

Frank McCoy and wife, and Aubrey Mulberry and wife, of Devon neighborhood, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Penn, last Sunday.

Miss Edith Cooper, of Vanceburg, is the guest of Miss Elizabeth Kelly, of the Locust Grove neighborhood. They have been attending school together at George town.

A heavy rain visited the Locust Grove neighborhood about noon on Wednesday of last week and did considerable damage to growing crops and plowed ground. Edgar Henley, of that neighborhood says it just about ruined his plowed fields, and that in his long experience as a farmer he never had land so badly washed.

Dr. E. W. Duncan received a letter from his son, Edwin, who is attending the Naval Academy at Annapolis, the first of the week in which the writer announced his early departure for a long cruise on the U. S. S. New Hampshire. He will pass through the Panama Canal, visit Honolulu and many other important places in western waters.

Willie C. Cason, who resided on the Madison pike, Kenton county, died last Saturday from injuries received when his milk truck turned over with him. It is said he attempted to adjust the top on a can of milk while his truck was running, when it took a shear on him and ran off the road, turning over and pinning him beneath it. He was a son of the late Frank Cason, and has several relatives in this county.

C. F. Blankenhoker, member of the North Kentucky Fair Board, was in town last Monday. Being asked about the outlook for the next fair he spoke very encouragingly of the prospects. The board has turned its attention more to the cattle exhibit in the last few years as the horse show has been gradually growing smaller and less interesting. The cattle interests in this county have been on the increase for several years, and it is well enough for the fair to recognize the fact by an increase in the list of premiums given that class of stock.

O. P. Phipps, of Indiana, was a visitor to Burlington last Monday, and was glad to meet his Boone county friends. He is looking well but has a hankering for the Boone county hills and valleys yet.

I am now prepared to do retreading and vulcanizing, and it will be to your advantage to bring your old tires and tubes in to me and let me look them over and see if I can repair them so you can get several more miles out of them.
GEO. PORTER, Burlington.

President J. H. Stevens, of the Boone County Wool Pool, was in town last Monday, and when asked about the pooled wool said owing to the conditions of the market the wool may not be sold for two months. He said those who have wool should take care to keep it off of the ground so it will not get damp and injure it.

FROM PENDLETON COUNTY.

Falmouth Outlook.

The corn crop is about all planted in Pendleton county, which will be followed closely by hay harvest and tobacco transplanting. This will be a lot of hard work coming in one bunch for the farmer, and as farm labor is scarce and wages high there will be a large amount of work neglected.

The sheep flocks of Pendleton county have been sheared, and the wool is ready for the market. The big interests have set the price of wool, and will be about 50 percent lower than it brought last year. This will be disappointing to the wool growers. During the war the Government set a price limit on wool, and if the Government can do that they can pass a law setting a minimum price.

Arthur Parker, formerly of this county, but now a resident of Bourbon county, met with a serious accident Sunday. He was watering some stock in a branch, and noticing the water had washed a wire fence down, he attempted to place a fence post back in the ground when it fell against his stomach. A physician was called and as only a leucosed place was evident, the accident was not thought to be dangerous. The next day, however, it was found that Mr. Parker's bowel was punctured. He was removed to the Paris Hospital, where he remains in a critical condition, with very little hope of recovery.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

PLAN OF GRAZING FOR GOATS

Give Vegetation Opportunity to Grow by Dividing Range on Which Animals Forage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The production of more mohair and meat can be obtained in raising goats on the range by following a plan of grazing which will give the vegetation a chance to grow sufficiently to maintain itself. Most goat ranges are used throughout the year. This and the general practice of driving the goats on from a corral at the ranch headquarters and back every day for months or throughout the year have been largely responsible for the deterioration of the range. An excellent method of giving the forage a proper opportunity for growth is to divide the range into three areas—one for spring, another for summer and fall, and a third for winter.

The number and distribution of the goats on these divisions should be such as to secure proper and uniform utilization of the forage. The divisions should be protected from grazing except during the seasons determined upon. On successive parts of the summer and fall range grazing should be deferred until after seed maturity of the forage plants so as to insure proper regeneration. On winter range the forage close to the sheds should be reserved for stormy periods only.

The old practice of bedding the goats on the same bed ground every night in the year prevents proper management of the range and results in overgrazing, in uneven utilization of the forage and general depreciation of the range. This in turn has a bad effect on the condition of goats and the production of meat and mohair. The use of many bed grounds widely distributed over the range aids materially in improving the quality and quantity of the forage, reducing the trailing and driving of the goats, and securing better growth of goats and mohair. The ideal system is to bed the goats wherever night overtakes them, and it is this system, called the "bedding-out" system, that growers of goats are urged to adopt whatever practicable.

The bedding-out system cannot be strictly adhered to during kidding, during periods of stormy winter weather, nor just after shearing, but its use at other times is practicable and it has many advantages.

Range to be suitable for goats should possess a mixture of browse, grasses, and weeds, be free from continued heavy rains and snows, and be well supplied with bed grounds and watering places. Browse furnishes most of the range feed for goats throughout the year, so that it should be abundant. Grass and weeds are necessary for does and kids during the spring and summer, and are of considerable value at all times to give variety to the forage.

Plenty of fresh palatable feed has a marked beneficial effect on mohair production, growth of the goats, and the proportion of kids raised. It also reduces the proportion of losses. Therefore, instead of overstocking a range with inferior goats, the producer should stock it with the best of high-grade goats which it can conservatively carry.

The range goat should be the large, well-built, early maturing Angora, producing a large quantity of the mohair. The body and chest should be relatively broad and deep, the back wide and straight, the thighs full, the ribs well sprung, and the legs short, strong, and set wide apart. Such Angoras make possible a substantial revenue from two sources—mohair and meat.

The does should be uniform, of good size, have good constitutions, be good producers of mohair, and should produce sufficient milk to insure proper growth of their kids. The bucks should more nearly approximate the ideal than the does. They should be large and vigorous and should produce a large quantity of high-quality mohair. Only those wethers which produce a very large quantity of the mohair should be retained in the herd after they are two years old.

Most Popular Hog.

The butcher hog, weighing between 200 and 250 pounds is the most popular with the packing companies because it furnishes everything that is desirable in meat, and consequently with command a higher price.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

To enrich the mind, and purify the heart, to keep the tongue still and the arms active, to eat slowly and sleep quietly, this is true philosophy.

SUMMER SALADS.

ELLIS' HOT'S salad is always welcome at any meal, at any time of day. Raisin and Apple Salad.—Wash and dry one cupful of seeded raisins, add one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, two cupfuls of apples, one cupful of mayonnaise. Line a bowl with lettuce, pile the apples and raisins in the center cover with the mayonnaise. Serve with nonfat cheese balls and garnish with tart red jelly.

Banana and Apple Salad.—Line a bowl with lettuce. Slice three bananas and four apples, mix and put on lettuce. Mix one-half cupful of peanut butter with one-fourth of a cupful of French dressing and pour over the salad.

Roquette Dressing.—Mash eight tablespoonfuls of roquette with one teaspoonful of mustard, salt, pepper and rennet to taste, add one-fourth of a cupful of olive oil, stirring all the time, when smooth add one-fourth of a cupful of chili sauce, a tablespoonful of vinegar or lemon juice, a teaspoonful of stable sauce. Serve on head lettuce.

Marquise Salad.—Wash and peel two fine tomatoes, cut in halves and place on lettuce. Chop half a cupful each of onion and parsley, add two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and let stand two hours. On each piece of tomato heap a tablespoonful of the onion and parsley, then pour over French dressing. Serve very cold.

Potato and Celery Salad.—Take one quart of boiled diced potatoes, one cupful of finely diced celery, one-half cupful of chopped onion, two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley, a cupful of boiled dressing. Add a hard cooked egg, chopping the white fine and rubbing the yolk through a sieve.

Prune Salad.—Wash and soak over night twenty large prunes. In morning cook gently and remove the pits. Mix two tablespoonfuls of peanut butter, one cream cheese and if too dry add a little cream, stuff the prunes. Serve on lettuce with French dressing.

Little green onions sliced in cream with salt, pepper and a dash of vinegar, make a tasty salad to serve with bread and butter.

DELECTABLE DINNERS.

RENCH and Italian cooks know how to season; their dishes will be palatable and plentiful, but the cost will be very low. The musical names given some of our homely dishes surely do make them taste better. Our old fashioned cornmeal mush they call "polenta." Could it possibly taste as common as mush? Then on Friday they serve baccala, which is just our ordinary codfish, but it is so disguised that its friends find it hard to recognize it.

Baccala.—Freshen a pound and a half of codfish, if salty, by soaking over night, cut in four pieces and fry ten minutes in olive oil. For the sauce add a little olive oil to a saucpan, one clove of garlic, one chopped onion, one sliced green pepper, one bay leaf, two cloves; cook five minutes then add a small piece of butter, a half a pint of tomatoes, salt and pepper. Put in the fish and cover closely, let simmer two hours, adding water if the moisture dries out. Serve with hot cornmeal mush.

Rogone.—Few people like kidneys, for they are so often poorly prepared. Split and cut away all the white in vein or leaf kidney; cut the kidney in cubes and drop into boiling water one minute. As it turns white, drain and place in a frying pan and cook in olive oil fifteen minutes. Then put into a casserole in which is a sauce like the one used for lamb chops, with the addition of more garlic. Cook slowly for several hours. Serve with rice or polenta.

Braciola.—Take a pound of thin round steak, wash it out flat to a wafer-like thickness, cut into four strips, a few inches wide, and salt and pepper freely. Chop fine one clove of garlic, one small onion, a little parsley, with some savory dressing. Spread the seasoning along the middle of each strip. Roll and tie with thread and brown in a little fat, cook slowly thirty minutes.

Seasoned Veal (Scalopine).—Cook this slice of veal, pounded thin, in olive oil, season with salt and pepper; when nearly done add a tablespoonful of vinegar. Serve hot.

Pull Together for an American Merchant Marine

The war resulted in the creation of a great merchant marine—10,000,000 tons of American ships which cost us $3,000,000,000.

Everybody agrees that we must keep this fleet on the seas.

If we fall back to pre-war conditions—when only 9 per cent of our foreign trade was carried in American ships—We shall be in the position of a department store whose goods are delivered in its competitor's wagons.

Congress is considering legislation which will perpetuate our war-built merchant marine.

Until this is done the ships we have should not be sold to face conditions which, prior to the war, resulted in the decline of our merchant marine to insignificance.

This Committee calls attention to these facts because a right solution of our shipping problem is vital to the future prosperity of shipbuilding, but equally vital to the safety and prosperity of the nation.

A FAMILY MEDICINE

In Her Mother's Home, Says This Georgia Lady, Regarding Black-Draught. Relief From Headache, Malaria, Chills, Etc.

Ridgely, Ga.—Mrs. Chas. Gaston, of this place, writes: "I am a user of Theodore's Black-Draught. In fact, it was one of our family medicines. Also in my mother's home, when I was a child. When any of us children complained of headache, usually caused by constipation, she gave us a dose of Black-Draught, which would rectify the trouble. Often in the Spring, we would have malaria and chills, or troubles of this kind, we would take Black-Draught pretty regular until the liver acted well, and we would soon be up and around again. We would not be without it, for it certainly has saved us lots of doctor bills. Just a dose of Black-Draught when not so well saves a lot of days in bed."

Theodore's Black-Draught has been in use for many years in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles, and the popularity which it now enjoys is proof of its merit. If your liver is not doing its duty, you will suffer from such disagreeable symptoms as headache, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, etc., and unless something is done, serious trouble may result.

Theodore's Black-Draught has been found a valuable remedy for these troubles. It is purely vegetable, and acts in a prompt and natural way, regulating the liver to its proper functions and cleansing the bowels of impurities. Try it. Insist on Theodore's the original and genuine. E. T.

FARM STOCK

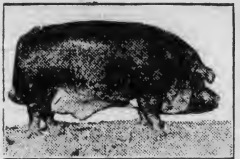

DO NOT NEGLECT HERD BOAR

Management Is Important Part In Raising Strong, Healthy Pigs—Deserves Best Care.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The management of the herd is a very important part in the raising of strong, healthy pigs, and one which is sometimes neglected. He should be the most valuable animal in the whole herd, and as such deserves the best of attention. The boar should be purchased from a breeder of pure-bred hogs when between eight months and one year of age. Many breeders, however, purchase a boar when a weanling pig, but to be successful in this choice requires a wide experience and sound judgment. Aged boars which have proved their worth can sometimes be purchased at a reasonable price. It is much safer for an inexperienced breeder to buy an old, active boar than a young untied boar. If possible, the farmer should visit the herd where the boar was raised and note the conditions under which he was bred. At any rate, it is always possible to obtain from the breeder notes on the health and kind and amount of feeds used, so as to serve as an index to his subsequent treatment.

Upon arriving at the farm the boar should be unfastened as soon as possible and placed in quarantine to guard against the introduction of disease into the herd. If he is lousy it is well to treat this condition at once. His feed should be a continuation of that to which he has been accustomed, feeding rather lightly the first few days until he recovers from the strain of shipping and becomes accustomed to his new surroundings. If it is not feasible to continue feeding as previously indicated, the change to a more convenient ration should be made very gradually in order not to disturb the appetite or health of the animal. As a rule, a pig 8 to 12 months old will be in proper breeding condition when received unless he has been very heavily overfed. In purchasing an older boar, particularly one which has been in the show circuit, it is often necessary to reduce his condition before attempting to breed. With some animals the breeding power is permanently impaired by too high condition at some time in their life. The boar should be well fed but not fat, as a too high condition makes him inactive, a slow breeder, and a rather uncertain sire.

After the breeding season the boar should not be fed so heavily, and should have a wider ration, that is, one containing less of the protein concentrates and relatively more corn. The ration at this time is practically the same as that fed the brood sow when she is not producing a litter of pigs. He should have the run of a pasture a quarter of an acre in area in connection with his paddock. Here he can exercise and obtain much of his feed from the forage, or in the winter when the forage is consumed he may be fed on alfalfa or clover hay in connection with the grain ration. Keep the boar healthy, give him exercise, plenty of rough feeds, and keep him in condition by varying his supply of grain. Under such conditions little trouble will be experienced in getting a normal boar to produce large litters of strong, healthy pigs.

PIG CLUB MEMBERS PROSPER

Some Have Been at Work Long Enough to Have Porks for Sale and Make Money.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pig club members in Florida are working up an industry among themselves. Some of the members who have been in club work long enough to have some pigs for sale are disposing of their stock to other club members. One club boy has sold $100 worth of pigs to club members this year. Another, who joined the pig club two years ago, is now furnishing pigs to other members, and says he is glad he went into the club work, and believes that every boy and girl who can do so should join.

ATTENTION TO BROOD SOWS

After Weaning Her Pigs She Should Be Kept on Pasture and Fed Gaining Grain Ration.

The sow having weaned her pigs should be kept on pasture and fed a gaining grain ration to build up her system and flesh for rebreeding, and provide nourishment for the incoming fall litter.

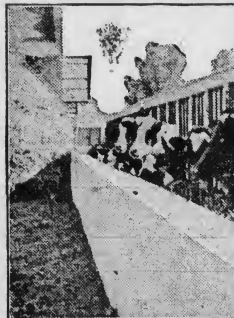

SAVING LABOR WITH CATTLE

Alter Daily Routine of Chores So As to Reduce Amount of Work Needed—Other Hints.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In general, labor in beef cattle operations may be saved in two ways. The first, which probably will offer quickest relief and not require an extra outlay of capital, is to alter the daily routine of chores so as to reduce the amount of labor needed. (1) Allow calves to nurse their dams in the pasture instead of bringing them to the barn lots for that purpose. (2) Run the bull with the cows instead of keeping him in a paddock. (3) Stack coarse roughages in racks from which the cattle may eat at will instead of raising their feed to them daily. (4) Use self-feeders in fattening cattle for market instead of rationing the feed to them once or twice a day, as the practice may be. (5) Feed the different feedstuffs in their whole state instead of chaffing, cutting, crushing, grinding, etc. (6) Load manure to the spreader and haul it to the field direct rather than dump it on piles, thereby eliminating the necessity of reloading. (7) Dehorn all grade cattle and pure breeds not to be exhibited at fairs and run them together so far as possible rather than separate them according to sex, age, etc., thereby making it possible for one man to look after a greater number of cattle in the same length of time. (8) Carefully cull the herd so as to retain only profitable animals and reduce the number of surplus ones to be carried through seasons in which the greatest care per head must be supplied.

The second way to save labor with beef cattle is to supply labor-saving equipment. While this method requires an expenditure of money and will probably not bring such quick relief as the first method, the equipment supplied will be permanent and in the long run will probably be more economical in saving labor. The following are some of the forms of equipment that should be supplied for this purpose: (1) Permanent pasture; (2) self-feeders; (3) feed racks; (4) deep wells; (5) windmills; (6) water-piping system; (7) water troughs; (8) litter carriers; (9) manure spreader; (10) dehorning chute, and (11) pasture fencing.

In many instances some of the suggestions given under both methods of saving labor could be economically applied.

INDIVIDUAL HOUSE FOR SOW

Separate Pen or Stall Six by Eight Feet, With Fender, Is Best at Farrowing Time.

At farrowing time each sow should have a separate stall, pen, or individual house about six by eight feet with a fender or railing about ten inches from the wall and a foot off the floor to keep the pigs from being caught against the wall by the sow when lying down.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

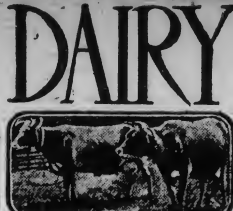

Horses and mules will be used for many years on some farms.

Compared with corn, nine bushels of cooked potatoes are worth two of the grain as a hog feed.

When lambs are coming rapidly the ewes should be watched day and night to avoid unnecessary losses.

It does not pay to take a chance feeding hogs with milk containing strong soap or some of the washing powders.

A lamb too weak to stand should get a bit of its mother's milk as soon as possible. If it refuses to nurse feed it from a bottle.

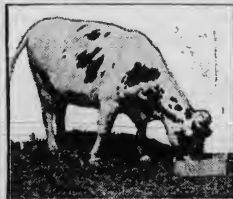

COWS INCREASE UNDER TEST

As Result of Work of Testing Association in Ohio Community Material Gains Noted.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cow-testing association of Hamilton county, Ohio, which is composed of 24 members of the county farm bureau, placed 304 cows on test for four months or more during 1918. Of this number 131 cows were on test for the full year. In 1916 the cows owned by members of this association produced 4,126 pounds of milk and 177.98 pounds of butterfat a head. In 1917 the cows produced 4,721 pounds of milk and 212.9 pounds of butterfat, while in 1918 the average was 6,107 pounds of milk and 250 pounds of butterfat.

The average gain a head in pounds of milk during 1918 over the first year was 1,981, while the average gain a head in butterfat was 83 pounds. The average gain of 1,386 pounds of milk in 1918 over 1917 represents a total gain for the association of 415,294 pounds. Figuring this at $2.975 a hundredweight, the average price for the year, gives an added value of $12,334.14 to the association.

The returns show there were no exceptionally high producers, but the average production of the entire association shows a very material increase.

COW TESTING ASSOCIATIONS

Increase in Butterfat Production Largely Attributed to Work of Organizations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The estimated average butterfat production of all the dairy cows in the United States is about 160 pounds a year. From 80 yearly summaries of cow-testing associations, including the record of 26,710 cows, their butterfat production averaged 245 pounds a year. This is more than 50 per cent above the country's average production, and a large part of the gain may fairly be attributed to association work.

From every point of view, therefore, the cow-testing associations seem to be successful. Measured by the strict rules of the investigator they have made good; tried out in the field of practical experience they have proved true; weighed in the balance of public opinion they have not been found wanting.

DAIRYING ON BETTER BASIS

One of the Greatest Needs of Industry at Present Is More Attention to Breeding.

At the present time one of the greatest needs of the dairy interests in this country is that the individual farmer shall be more of a student of the fine points of breeding. Comparatively few now pay much attention to that. It is not so with horses. We take a great deal of pains to breed our mares to the best possible sire. We have learned that it pays to do this. We get extra and they sell for a better price when we wish to turn them off. The same attention might well be given to the matter of mating cows and bulls. If we ever get away from the thousands of cows that take our good feed and our care and give back not enough to pay for their keeping, we will have to get the best sires we possibly can and mate them with cows of known good qualities. Then dairying will come to a better basis. We will all of us be doing business at a profit.

DON'T GUESS AT PRODUCTION

High-Priced Feeds Make It Desirable for Dairymen to Test All Cows in His Herd.

Remember that the higher prices paid for feed, the less you can afford to keep a poorer cow in your herd. Don't guess. Weigh the milk. Weigh the feed. Test the milk. Don't guess by the looks in a tub. And you can't tell by a cow's looks, either. The milking looks of a cow is often no more than skin deep.

MILLIONS GOING INTO ROADS

Western States to Spend Much Money in Highway Construction and Needed Maintenance.

Millions of dollars will be expended in highway construction and bridge work and maintenance by the states of the central West during the present year, according to data recently compiled by highway authorities. Colorado has 51 miles of highways under construction at a cost of $300,000; 91 miles ready for contract to cost $360,000, and 30 miles and three bridges contemplated, to cost $350,000.

The Photograph Shows a Portion of the Pike Peak Ocean-to-Ocean Highway.

Maintenance on 4,000 miles will amount to about $500,000, while local road and bridge expenditures will amount to about $2,200,000.

Idaho has 87 miles, costing $720,000, under contract; 45 bridges, costing $425,000, ready for contract; and about $1,800,000 worth of additional work is contemplated during the season.

Iowa will expend $15,000,000 on the road system of the state, of which about $11,000,000 will be for road and bridge construction.

Missouri has 600 miles under contract costing $1,785,000; 883 miles, costing $3,104,000, ready for contract, and about $3,000,000 additional construction contemplated. Local road and bridge expenditures in the state will amount to about $7,000,000.

Nebraska has 173 miles, costing $431,000, under contract; 145 miles, costing $550,000, ready for contract, and about 610 miles, estimated at $1,310,000, contemplated. Local road and bridge expenditures will amount to about $3,000,000.

Nevada has four miles, costing $54,066, under contract; 102 miles costing $67,412, ready for contract; 123 miles, costing $523,000, contemplated. Local expenditures on maintenance will amount to $600,000.

Oklahoma has 128 miles, including 80 bridges, costing $1,360,000, under contract. Additional construction of 165 miles, costing $2,500,000, contemplated.

These amounts will be supplemented by increased federal aid appropriations and later, it is hoped, by national construction of main trunk lines under the supervision of a federal highway commission, as provided for in the Townsend bill which will come up for consideration by the next congress.

SAVING OF IMPROVED ROADS

Report of Congressional Committee Shows 8 Cents Per Ton Per Mile Can Be Saved.

The report of the joint congressional committee which investigated highway economies in 1914 shows that a saving of 8 cents per ton mile can be effected in transportation costs when a road is lifted from the dirt to the durable class. This does not take into account increased real estate valuation or social advantages resulting from the improvement.

Build Roads Now.

If roads are a good thing, why not build them immediately, instead of waiting and suffering inconveniences for years to come, because it should be remembered that we are not saving any money by acting in such a manner.

Big Change in Sentiment.

People are apparently ready and willing to spend huge sums for roads where a few years ago it would have been impossible to secure even a small appropriation for this purpose.

COSTLY CAMPAIGNS.

Probably no event in the past few months has attracted so much attention or drawn so much comment from the press as the revelations of the Senate committee investigating the pre-convention campaign funds.

The Brooklyn Eagle makes the comment that a great injustice is done some of the candidates by the suspicion that naturally attaches to large campaign funds, "for the laws of many States compel primaries, and these primaries entail campaigns that cannot be run on the basis of the campaign it seems to the Evening Post, have been run on wind and with lots of money back of the wind. But there is some merit in the remark of the Brooklyn Eagle that candidates suffer from a personal injustice as the result of the revelations. We do not believe that Gen. Wood, or Lowden, or Senator Harding would seek to bribe a delegate to the national convention. Those who would accuse these gentlemen of such an action because of the large campaign funds would, indeed, do them an injustice. Gov. Lowden, for example, has made up his mind to leave the campaign on his own account, and he has no knowledge of the payment of $2,500 to each of two delegates from Missouri, and the "wind" refuses to accept the support.

But the fact is that such payments were made. The general public does not believe that the candidates are dishonest, but the public does justly suspect the influence that such large sums of money may have on the choice of a nominee. Governor Lowden's campaign funds, for example, are the size of Gen. Wood's, and most of it came from his own pocket; but even in such a case it was shown that $5,000 went into the bank accounts of two delegates, and that they were told to do anything they wished with it. The man whose candidacy is being promoted cannot always be certain of the sagacity of those active in his behalf. The availability of a large sum of money is in itself a temptation to some men to use it in a manner of doubtful propriety.

Again the electorate is suspicious of the presence of hundreds of thousands of dollars in a campaign fund. The use of enormous sums of money, even though the money itself be used properly, will carry with it a suspicion from hand to hand, even if not from hand to pocket, an undue weight—a weight entirely aside from the qualifications for the Presidency of the man in whose behalf it is spent. The American public does not wish the choice of its President influenced by any element other than his fitness for the office.

No one can glance over the figures presented by the Senate investigating committee without observing the enormous discrepancy between those sums used for the Republican candidates and those used for the Democratic candidates. What is the explanation of this? It is that the Republican party believes in the efficacy of money in a political campaign. As the New York World says, "the Republican party is a business party. It prides itself on its business methods, and one of the methods of business is to buy what it wants." With this possible exception of Senator Johnson, none of the Republican candidates has had an appeal for the voters' support; and the appeal of Senator Johnson is distinctly not to the best elements of the party. Money has been needed by the Republicans to stir up enthusiasm. They have found the single means available, and they have trusted to it from the start.

It will inevitably occur to every voter that when such sums have been silent in the campaign for the nomination the man nominated is not going to take the chances of letting his previous expenditures go to waste by stinging himself in what expenditures he thinks necessary to carry the election. In brief, that means that the Republican party must be prepared to spend enormous sums between June and November. Then the candidate who has profited by the use of large sums of money in securing the nomination and in securing the election, if he is successful in November, cannot help feeling under obligations to those who subscribed the money. That is the phase of the whole situation which most alarms the voters. We do not want a man in the White House who is under financial obligations, even directly, to anyone—certainly not to large business interests. Contributions were made to the Roosevelt campaign by Harriman, by the Standard Oil, by life insurance companies, by the beef trust, and by other business interests. It was the most serious fact that Col. Roosevelt had to overcome before the people. The Republican candidates are now disputing the right to the Roosevelt mantle, but it seems that they are disputing it by following along one of his faulty lines of action, instead of reprimanding his virtuous line.

The relations of the Republican party to Big Business and its associations with large concentrations of wealth are part of the history since the days of Mark Hanna, but it will find that never before have the voters been so aroused against the influence of money in politics as they are at this time. —Louisville Evening Post.

Parasites Lower Vitality.

Lice is a common pest among swine and to eradicate them calls for vigorous and persistent treatment. Frequently examine the ears, flanks and the inside of the legs to see if there is any evidence of lice. They may be easily seen traveling along the bristles, especially in the parts just mentioned. Watch for the eggs or "nits" which are small oval white bodies attached to the bristles. Dipping will kill the lice but has no effect on these eggs, hence it is necessary to dip the swine frequently, killing the lice that hatch from these eggs after the previous dipping.

Lice are blood-sucking parasites and cause a great deal of skin trouble by biting the hog and sucking the blood. In addition to the restlessness which this causes, the hog, the lice act as a drain on the vitality of the hog thru the loss of blood which they abstract. In his endeavors to relieve the irritation, the hog will rub on posts and other objects and his coat will become rough and harsh. Close watch should be kept for these parasites, for they are easily transported from one animal to the other by direct contact or by contact with infected bedding quarters.

Dipping should be done at intervals of not over two weeks and several dippings may be required before complete eradication is accomplished. At the time of dipping the quarters and bedding should be thoroughly disinfected. For dipping and disinfecting use Cresol compound. Use two gallons of Cresol to 100 gallons of water for dipping. Coal tar products of the kind ordinarily sold as stock dips are commonly used to treat hogs for lice although these are not always as effective as might be desired. Cresol compound and coal tar dips may be purchased at any drug store.

Cematis is the most durable of various materials as eradicating vats. Farmers' Bulletin 481 of the United States Department of Agriculture, Concrete Construction on Live Stock Farms, gives some splendid points in regard to making a dipping vat. The vat should be set in the ground at a convenient place where there is good surface drainage away from the vat. A vat ten feet long at the top, eight feet long at the bottom, one foot wide at the bottom and one foot wide at the top is a very convenient size for dipping hogs. Have it deep enough that the hogs will not strike the bottom of the vat when they plunge. It is a good plan to have the vat so located that a two-inch drain pipe may lead from the bottom of the vat to facilitate in emptying and cleaning the vat and avoid pumping or dipping out the contents in order to clean it. Old filthy dip should not be used, but the vat should be cleaned and recharged before dipping again. If the dip has become dirty or has stood for a long time in the vat. The entrance should be on a slide and the exit should slope gradually and have cleats at intervals to provide footholds for the hogs emerging after dipping. A dipping vat should be on every farm where a number of hogs are kept.

A wide difference of opinion exists in regard to hog wallows, some strongly favor them and others just as strongly oppose them. There is no doubt that filthy hog wallows are a source of danger as hogs wallowing in or drinking contaminated water are likely to contract disease. There are some advantages, however, to be derived from them. In hot weather, they can furnish both the water and the cooling to the hog. Clean wallows will clean the scurf from their skin and protect them from flies. It is a good plan to pour creosote oil in a quantity to form a thin layer on the top of the water, about every ten days. This helps to keep the hogs free from lice and other parasites. Should the oil irritate the skin of the animals, its use should be discontinued. Some growers add a small quantity of the coal tar dip to the filthy hog wallows, but there is an element of danger in this for poisoning may result from the absorption of phenis by hogs which live in the water a great part of the time. The concrete wallow is becoming popular on most of the largest hog farms of the country. These wallows should be located in a shady spot and should be deep enough to contain eight or ten inches of water. As recommended for the dipping vat, a two-inch drain pipe should be placed in the bottom of the wallow to permit its being cleaned out.

practically any hog man who is handy in building little useful things around the farm, can do very satisfactory concrete work, thus reducing the cost of many useful appliances to the very minimum. If, however, a hogman does not feel financially able to invest in a concrete wallow or vat, the dip diluted with water, as the instructions accompanying it can be applied with the spray pump or sprinkling can or it can be rubbed on every part of the hog with a brush or swab, cotton waste. Be careful not to apply the dip stronger than the directions specify.

Another week like the one just past will put the farmers at the front with their work. It does not take them long to make up for lost time when weather conditions are favorable.

BETTER THAN GOLD will be presented at Florence, on Friday night, by the Burlington High School Dramatic Club. This is a good play and has been presented at Petersburg and Hebron, where it took well with the audiences.

FALLING PRICES.

The wave of price-cutting that has swept over the country has been followed with varied emotions by all classes of people.

To the prospective purchaser, who is reacting against the continual inflation of prices, had planned to make over last year's garments and have half-worn shoes resoled and furnished up, there was a moment of doubt followed by delight when the consignment had been rejected, was actually bought at one-third off. Doubt was again followed by delight when it was found upon investigation that the advertised promise of "half price" in millinery and rational reduction in shoes were "really true" and that the reduced articles were of the best quality.

Most of the customers, who filled the shops, were interested in the cutting of prices from purely personal motives, but economists have followed the reductions, which have been general and radical in all lines of clothing and dry goods, with a keen interest in observing the effect of the price reductions upon business.

The reductions began in New York and Brooklyn increasing from 10 to 20 per cent. The price-cutting spread, West and South, increasing as it traveled, to 30, 40 and even to 75 per cent in some Western cities.

Many causes have contributed to the sudden reduction in prices. Restricted credit, which is the policy of the Federal Reserve Board, has caused a contraction of loans by the banks, and merchants and speculators have been compelled to turn their stocks into cash in order to obtain needed funds. The operations of speculators, who bought large stocks of goods, hoping for rising prices, and had borrowed money on the stocks kept out of the markets, had resulted in an over-inflation of credit, and a consequent running up of prices beyond the limit the public would stand, so that there has been, as a result, a definite reaction against exorbitant prices, even among the extravagants, and a wave of thrift, parsimony, sensible economy in buying, which has helped bring prices down.

This thrift, the determination to do without luxuries, is encouraging. The manufacture of luxuries will lessen as the demand decreases. The money saved, money practically wasted upon non-necessaries, will be used in augmenting productive capital. The number of workers at present employed in producing luxuries will be released for the production of necessities, and the result will be a genuine relief of present conditions through increased production.

Kentucky News Gullins

Madison County.—The first tobacco plants in any of the larger tracts have been set out and give promise of doing well. Quite a number of the farmers are waiting for a rain and are getting a little impatient. B. Curren, one of the largest farmers has finished setting out one and a half acres which was formerly the site of the old ball park. He is a producer of tobacco for many years and believes that plants properly planted in proper soil this time of the year will grow well despite the present weather.

Very few crops have been planted owing to the unfavorable weather. Farmers are anxious to put out both tobacco and corn crops as it is getting late, but that will not deter them and many contend that after the ground is thoroughly warm the crops get a better start. An army of county men are ready to plunge into the belated work of planting and keep busy while the weather is fine. The weather is retarding one of the heaviest corn crops in the state, reports say. Until the rains ceased this week there was grave apprehension regarding the ability of getting the corn crop in the ground, but this fear has been allayed. The intensely warm period of the day at times plays havoc with the horses and they have to be seated, but the crop is going in fast and the farmers are happy. Gardens are looking fine considering the very late spring. Green vegetables are selling very high and it is hoped that the production will tend to cut the price as meat and flour continue to soar.

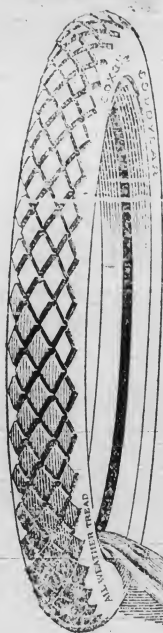

Bourbon County.—Great progress made last week in planting tobacco, transplanting tobacco and preparing ground for this crop. Some are plowing corn, others just finishing planting. Those who used planters have tobacco about set, others setting at this time. Gardens doing nicely. Wheat and grass look fine. Bluegrass showing up much better than expected, but a promise an average crop. Oats look fine and good crop of fruit promised. Live stock is in thrifty condition but movement light. Plenty of grass for hogs and cattle. Sheep shearing at an end and lambs are taking on fat. No shipments expected until the middle of June.

The excessive, continuous rains that have prevented the farmers from doing work the entire spring still continue, and a number of farmers in this vicinity have abandoned their intentions of growing a crop this year. There is very little farm work done to this date, and the prevailing opinion is there will not be more than a twenty-five per cent crop grown in this vicinity this year, and with a ten per cent wheat crop; oats look fairly well, but a small acreage was sown. Corn is selling at $2.50 a bushel, and everything else in the feed line in proportion, except hay, and that can not be sold at any price. A large amount of cheap feed is now being shipped in here and sold to the farmers at high prices.—Ohio County

Meigs County.—The corn crop will be cut on account of the farmers being unable to plant. The best promise for potatoes in a century. Farmers are in better humor over their tobacco since the week of warm sunny weather just experienced. Plants made from dormant growth. Many plants died during the cold rainy weather.

Mt. Sterling—Petitions are filed asking for $500,000 good roads issue.

Mt. Olivet—Several Robertson county women have had success with lemons. Mrs. J. A. Wheeler raised three on a small tree each of which weighed over a pound.

Harrodsburg—Charles Hill, in Boyle county, has an old violin which the stamp shows was made in 1633. It's an old heirloom, and he has refused large offers for it.

Danville—Three Mexicans, who declared they were refugees from the Villa-ridden part of Mexico, were arrested here in a freight car. They were fined and sent to the workhouse.

Pahucuh—Bert Ray, inmate of the Calloway County Poor Farm, has recovered judgment against the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railroad for $15,000. He has been an inmate of the county institution since he was run over by a freight train last November.

Madisonville—Lightning rendered unconscious six men sitting in front of a restaurant at St. Charles. Three county men probably were fatally injured. The bolt, which preceded a severe electrical storm, bowled the men over like tennpins. Their faces, necks and shoulders were burned.

Campbellsville—The past week has been the busiest week of the season with Taylor county farmers, fine weather made possible the preparing and planting of a large acreage of corn, as well as the setting of much tobacco land. Many fields of tomatoes have been set also. While help is scarce, farmers are feeling more encouraged.

Campbellsville—Taylor county, through its representatives, Judge Wm. Francis and County Clerk Walter Ellis, is preparing to launch a campaign for better roads throughout the county. Two rock crushers, two wheel scrapers, steam drills, and other necessary machinery will be added to the county's equipment. The heavy hauling over frozen roads during the past winter left the county roads in a terrible condition of ruts and washouts.

Faducuh—More than 100 Mc-Cracken county tobacco growers place members of the recently organized Tobacco Planters' Association, met here at the county courthouse where a third of the number signed a pledge to raise their 1920, 21 and 22 tobacco crops for the association. They pledged their support of the association in all efforts to obtain fair tobacco prices. Proposed plans for the operation of the new association were explained by growers who attended the meeting of planters in Guthrie. The crops will be sold over a floor owned by the organization, at prices carefully offered after the tobacco is officially graded. A local warehouse will be secured for all sales of the association crops.

Frankfort—Judge Jas. P. Lewis, of Whitesburg, was appointed State Banking Commissioner by Governor Morrow to succeed George G. Speer, whose term of office expires July 1. Judge Lewis was Secretary of State during the last administration, having been the only Republican elected four years ago.

Louisville—Crude oil, assaying 50 per cent gasoline, has been found in quantity in an abandoned well in the heart of Jefferson-town, a few miles south of here. The oil was burned in stoves and gave satisfaction, it is said. Motorists carried much of the oil away, but it is not known whether any of them ventured to use it. The abandoned well is more than 50 feet deep, but surrounding wells, where traces of oil have been found, are very shallow.

Frankfort—Foss Whitaker, Jailor of Letcher county, must serve six months in his own jail. Gov. Edwin P. Morrow refused to remit the jail sentence imposed on Whitaker by the Letcher circuit court. Whitaker was sent to his own jail by County Judge Samuel Collins for having engaged in a fight. Having a key to the jail in his possession he let himself out and was later indicted on a charge of jail breaking and sentenced to serve six months in jail.

Local Happenings.

Corn production averaged little more than two bushels per farmer's workday of ten hours in the middle of the last century, when he husked and shelled by hand and turned the crank of a sodder cutter. The average rose to 14 bushels half a century later when he used a gang plow, disk harrow, corn planter, self-binder for cutting, husker and frouder cutter, and a shelling machine, says the United States department of agriculture. Besides, there has been improvement in agriculture. If the corn was husked from standing stalks and these some rain, but later on the corn was not shelled, the gain in production per day of farmers labor was from 10 bushels in the earlier time to 20 bushels in the later.

Ever mindful of the interest of his constituents, Congressman A. B. House sends the following to the Recorder for publication:

"By the terms of an act of Congress approved June 5th, 1920, all persons who served in the war with Spain, and who are now suffering from a physical disability of a permanent character when so incapacitated that they are unable to earn a support by manual labor, are entitled to a pension."

A terrific electrical storm visited this locality late last Sunday afternoon. It was accompanied by some rain, but later on and thru the night a fine rain fell and on Monday morning those who had tobacco set out a fineness awaiting them, and a very large percent of the tobacco crop in the county was pitched that day. The rain was exactly to the liking of the farmers.

TAX THE LOAFERS.

The occupation tax is right and just, but the man who has no occupation at all should be made to pay. The fact that a loafing place. Not many men would care about going out in the woods and lean up against a tree day after day, but there must be some benefit derived from lean against a building, the door casing of a business house, or the show case in a merchants store. There would be nothing very exciting in taking a soap box out into the pasture, tilting it against the fence and watching the cows go by, but a seat in front of a hotel or even the curbing evidently has some value to the loafer for which he should be made to pay. The fact that people congregate in a town, should give the town a social value which is as real as some of the trading advantages and those who appropriate this advantage should pay for it. — LaRue Herald.

When Harvest Ended.

Years ago in the middle west, when wheat was harvested with sickle and rake, it was the custom for the reapers to cap and finish and, to stack all the rakes around it, thrust the sickles into it, and then the whole company of reapers formed a circle and at a signal by the captain of the reapers, gave three cheers. They listened for the echo, and replied three times. It was accounted a good omen for the next crop. This was known as the stubble call. A blast of a horn from the cabin was heard in answer to it and the harvest was ended.

BASE BALL

Burlington base ball team accompanied by a small contingent of rooters, went over to Verona, last Saturday afternoon, and was defeated 4 to 5 in a very exciting game, the Verona team staging a winning rally in the ninth inning.

Burlington and Petersburg teams will meet at Burlington next Saturday, when Burlington expects to make it more interesting for the visitors than it has heretofore been able to do.

Erlanger defeated the team from the city last night. Bob Brannage, one of the Erlanger team broke up the game by hitting a homer with three on base.

Walton base ball team played the Lebanon team Saturday. The score was 17 to 11 in favor of the visitors.

The Rheims & Neim base ball team will play the Verona team at Verona next Saturday afternoon. The visitors were present strong team and a good game is anticipated, as a Verona article is putting up a very extra article of ball this season.

Will Present School Valuable Library.

E. Y. Chapin, of Chattanooga, a native of Petersburg, this county, will make the Petersburg school a present of a library of several hundred volumes of valuable books. Mr. Chapin is chairman of the Book Committee of the Chattanooga City Library, and is in an excellent position to make a valuable selection of books for education. Through Chapin is having the Petersburg board of the proposition handled by his old friend, John M. Botts, and Prof. R. H. Carter, both of whom are taking much interest in the matter. When the Chapin donation of books is on the shelves of the library at Petersburg the school there can pride itself on having probably the most complete and most valuable library in the county, and it will be a monument to one of its citizens of half a century ago, whose love for his native town has never lost any of its fervor.

Furnish Comfort for Your Cows.

The making of milk is a complex process for the cow, and while she is going forward with it from day to day she must be gently treated. The nervous system is deranged, and as a result she cuts down the milk flow, and you will notice the loss in the milk pail every morning. You must give her in the way of handling and stabling, pasturing in season, for to do her utmost and stand up under the strain she must have through the smallest thing her appetite or bodily comfort craves. If she is left with a board floor without bedding, is irritated by the stanchion, or the rumpled with a milk stool, whipped and yelled at until she is so nervous she wants to jump into the manger or through the stanchion—if these things are forced upon her she is going to make her owner pay well for the privilege he enjoys.

Profiteer Fined $55,000.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Expressing the hope that his action would serve as a "moral lesson" to all others throughout the country who may be charging unjust prices for necessities, Federal Judge Howard L. Howe, of Burlington, Vt., imposed a $55,000 fine on the John A. Roberts Company, of Utica, convicted of having profiteered during the maximum sentence which the law would permit. Judge Howe said: "I believe that convicted profiteers should be sent to jail. To any retailer who is charging more than a fair and reasonable profit, the price of his goods is a temptation for him to look upon the papers of another without his permission. I believe that this is the usual way of conducting an examination in their country. This is one reason why the prosecution is in so low repute. People have come to look upon teachers' examination as a farce or a fraud. Teachers and examiners themselves are responsible for this. See to it that every provision of the law is complied with; do everything possible to make the examination fair. I shall see to it that the examinations are not too difficult and not too technical. Some of the questions asked in the last examination will not be repeated in substance or in kind."

HOLDING UP THE PUBLIC.

The price of wool has declined, but the price of clothing goes up. The price of hides has declined, but the price of shoes remain enormously high.

The production of news print has increased fully equal to the increase in consumption and the price of this kind of paper continues to advance.

The price of hogs has declined from $22.00 to $15.00 and still the price of breakfast bacon continues at the old high level.

Those are but a few samples of how the public is being held up.

In the palmist days of the trusts fifteen years ago, there never was anything like the squeeze upon the consumer which now prevails.

The retailer, as a rule, is not getting the grapes. In some instances he is holding out the purchaser, but as a general thing he is not making any greater profit of profit, when the cost of doing business is taken into consideration, than he made before the war.

The manufacturer is using the high price of labor as an excuse for soaring prices and enormous profits.

The American Woolen Mills offers an object lesson. It has a capital stock of $1,000,000 and yet its net profits for the first three months of this year were $10,000,000, which if maintained until January 1st will be $40,000,000 or more than 350 per cent.

The material in a pair of fine shoes does not cost more than $3.00 and yet the shoe consumer pays the consumer from $15.00 to $20.00.

The manufacture of news print paper and the cost of the raw material has not increased more than 100 per cent while the selling price has been advanced 500 per cent.

There is a corner on newsprint. The price of curled meats is held up by a combination of the pack

The Government can't or won't do anything to relieve the situation and the consumer is more or less worried by the fact that in a free country but the principal freedom just now seems to be to rob and fleece the public.—Elizabethtown News.

Misses Louise Walton, of Shyley Park, Ohio, and Alice Walton, of Erlanger, are guests of Mrs. Fannie Cropper.

SOME DEPLORABLE FACTS

State Superintendent Colvin States Plain Facts in Plain Words.

County Superintendent Gordon has received from the State Superintendent of Schools the following letter which is of very great importance to County Superintendents, County Boards of Examiners and teachers and those who expect to become teachers. The letter follows:

Frankfort, Ky., June 9, 1920. My Dear Superintendent:—After grading the papers of applicants in the recent examination, certain facts become more and more evident. Always and everywhere we must preach better preparation for our teachers. It is nobody's fault that we have an accepted custom of a teacher can teach that which he does not know. It is not just now so much a question of professional training as it is of scholarship. Methods must wait upon matter.

The first fact that impresses itself upon you by an examination of the papers is the lamentable lack of scholarship. I cannot find it in my heart to criticize these applicants for this. The sort of scholarship which they have access did not supply the scholarship. Our first step must be to teach the fundamentals in our elementary schools.

Our next obligation is to impress upon each applicant who takes the examination that standard of honor that will not allow the applicant to believe that we fail to realize that when we cheat in an examination we are cheating the childhood of our State. Here again, we are the victims of custom and precedent. Too many teachers do not consider it dishonorable to get or give help in an examination. Every purpose of an examination is defeated unless each applicant relies upon himself for his answers. This is a mistake. The teachers from the papers themselves that in a number of counties questions were answered by groups. The standard of honor that we have mistakes, exactly the same language and exactly the same method of analysis. It is not humanly possible to have an examination without collusion. Our own experience in examinations has familiarized you with this condition, and you realize how difficult it is to have.

Permit me to suggest that you use every possible precaution to have the examinations conducted properly. I have already stated that there will be no temptation for one to look upon the papers of another without his permission. I believe that this is the usual way of conducting an examination in their country. This is one reason why the prosecution is in so low repute. People have come to look upon teachers' examination as a farce or a fraud. Teachers and examiners themselves are responsible for this. See to it that every provision of the law is complied with; do everything possible to make the examination fair. I shall see to it that the examinations are not too difficult and not too technical. Some of the questions asked in the last examination will not be repeated in substance or in kind."

We recognize that we are facing a crisis, and we are relying upon your loyal cooperation in meeting this crisis. I know that you are just as sincerely concerned in securing competent teachers for the children of your county as I am possibly be. I want to help you. I want the people of Kentucky to respect the teachers more and to pay them more. We have no right to expect this unless we deserve more. Our profession must be above suspicion; our profession must vindicate itself. See to it that every provision of the law is complied with; do everything possible to make the examination fair. I shall see to it that the examinations are not too difficult and not too technical. Some of the questions asked in the last examination will not be repeated in substance or in kind."

This new method of certifying will be of great value to you. It will purify examinations and to elevate our scholarship, than anything that has come to us.

I pledge you that if you will have the examination, it will be my purpose to stand by you. With best wishes, I am, Sincerely,

GEO. C. COLVIN, State Superintendent.

GO TO EXTREMES

Health Faddists Apt to Become

A Nuisance.

The following editorial from the Gary Times is printed by the Journal of the American Medical Association as a lesson to health faddists:

There is a great deal of truth in the satirical story of Jiggins, who had the health habit. Jiggins lived 29 years ago, and health was a disorder. The Dal las News says that Jiggins took a cold plunge every morning. He said it opened the pores. After he took a hot sponge. He said it closed the pores. He got so that he could open and shut his pores at will.

Jiggins used to stand and bathe in an open window for half an hour before dressing. He said it expanded his lungs. He might, of course, have had it done in a shoe shop with a boot black, but after all it cost him nothing this way. And what is half an hour?

After he had got his vest on Jiggins used to hitch himself up like a dog in his harness and do his exercises. He did them forward, backward and hindside up.

He could have got a job as a dog anywhere. He spent all his spare time at the office he used to lie on his stomach on the floor and see if he could lift himself up in his shirt. He could, then he tried some other way until he found one that he couldn't do. Then he would spend the rest of his lunch hour on his stomach perfectly happy.

In the evenings in his room, he used to lift iron bars, cannon balls, heavy dumb-bells and haul himself up to the ceiling with his teeth.

He liked it. He spent half the night slinging himself around the room. He said it made his brain clear. When he got his brain perfectly clear he went to bed and slept. As soon as he awoke he began clearing it again.

Jiggins is dead. He was, of course, a pioneer, but the fact that he humbled himself to death at an early age does not prevent a whole generation of young men from following in his path.

They are ridden by the health mania.

They make themselves a nuisance.

They get up at impossible hours. They go out in silly little suits and run marathons heats before breakfast. They chase around barefooted, get the dew on their feet. They hunt for ozone. They bother about pepsin. They won't eat meat because it has too much nitrogen. They won't eat fruit because it hasn't got any. They prefer albumin and starch to huckleberry pie and doughnuts. They won't drink water out of a tin. They won't use oysters out of a pail. They won't drink milk out of a glass. They won't drink milk. Yes sir, afraid. Cowards.

And after all their fuss they presently incur some simple, old-fashioned illness, and die like anybody else.

SERIOUS PROBLEMS

That Are Pressing For Solution Are Briefly Stated.

(Leslie)

It would be foolish to deny that serious problems are passing for solution.

But these problems will be solved eventually through the application of that force called public opinion, which represents the innate common sense of the American people, and which always prevails when any crisis develops that really threatens the welfare of the nation.

There is no need to go into any sort of detail as to the facts that bear mainly on the present situation. Briefly they are:

1. The unparalleled prosperity boom in this country, due mainly to the war-buying of the European nations.

2. The sudden emergence of the United States as the great creditor nation of the world.

3. The skyrocketing of both wages and the cost of living.

4. The new era of credit, credit expansion, wide distribution of paper money, extravagance and speculation.

There is unrest in acute form, despite abnormal prosperity and abundance of money.

5. Practically unopposed, progress of unscrupulous, unbridled labor leadership, which has deliberately ignored the fundamental principles of economics by the incessant use of "demagogic" tactics, and is operating to restrict production.

6. A short term war taxation scheme which has accumulated the "war" taxes now beset the industrial situation.

7. Profiteering in various forms and guises.

8. The last named is perhaps the most insidious and dangerous fact of all.

Labor is profiteering by limiting production, both by means of "strikes," and also by means of "unreal" fundamental unsound "dead-line" and also by means of unreasonable wage demands, which are a reaction against his own best interests.

Capital is profiteering both by the good old fashioned method of deliberately shooting up prices regardless of consequences, and also in large measure, by refusing to reduce the cost of things, which points the necessity for a more liberal distribution of profit in one form or another among the workers, than obtaining in the old days before the war period.

That is really the crux of the whole thing.

Any day of the multimillionaire trust magnate with arbitrary powers over labor and production is gone.

A few men with much more than a few million dollars will have no place in the world of tomorrow.

There is going to be a wider distribution of the good things of life, and that means not only money, but leisure and opportunity as well among the people than has been the case in days gone by.

The capitalist who disputes this or who fails to recognize it as one of the certain developments of the future is very shortsighted, and will probably not long endure as a capitalist at all.

This state of things was not brought about by the war; the war only hastened it along and made it all the more certain.

Protracted Meeting.

First the sugar short and coal shortage, money getting short, and then they come along and tell us the hay crop is going to be short and consequently, milk short too. Even the shortening in shortage is getting shorter, and skirts ain't getting a bit longer, judging by observations taken on Main street in Burlington.

Esq. Charles Wilson sends the county judge the following description of the floater found in the river at W. W. Grimsley's landing last Sunday:

White; about 25 years old, about five feet, eight inches high, would weigh about 130 lbs., well dressed in a suit of dark clothes, wore low tan shoes with rubber heels and soles, tan hose, hair closely cropped, two of the upper teeth solid gold, lower teeth well preserved. He did not have the appearance of a laboring man. On his person were found four one dollar bills, twelve two cent pieces, a small pipe, two postcards with no writing on them, and a photograph of a young lady. The body was put in a box and buried at Grimsley's Landing.

JAMES E. SMITH

A Prominent Citizen and Farmer Passes Away After a Lingering Illness.

James E. Smith, aged 76 years, 11 months and 19 days, died at his home on the Petersburg pike near town last Wednesday evening after a lingering illness of hardening of the arteries. He was a son of the late W. T. Smith, and is survived by his wife, who was Miss Minnie Gales, and two sons, Earl and Russell, both grown. Mr. Smith has a large circle of relatives in this county where he was born and raised and made his home his entire life. He had a most delightful home, surrounded by all the comforts of life, owned a fine farm of several hundred acres and was one of the county's best and most prosperous farmers, his farm work being done with the most up-to-date implements and machinery. He was of a retired disposition and lead a conservative life. He was a most excellent citizen and neighbor and will be greatly missed in the community where he spent his long and useful life.

A short funeral service will be conducted at the residence this afternoon at 2:30 by Rev. J. W. Cupp, after which the remains will be interred in the family lot in the Odd-Fellows cemetery.

Should The Lusitania

Again Float?

The undertaking of a French salvage company to raise the Lusitania from her tragic grave off the coast of Ireland has aroused mixed feelings throughout the Allied countries. One section of the people, looking upon the Lusitania as a solemn tomb, prefers to have the great ship remain where her dead and her treasure at the bottom of the sea. Another portion of the public wants the Lusitania raised in order that this victim of German frightfulness may be redeemed in honor. A third part of the public is moved by the desire for a more mercenary view. The Lusitania and her heavy lot of gold and jewels, they say, should not be lost to the world.

If the French succeed in raising the ship, they have performed an unprecedented feat of sub-sea salvage. It is planned to cut the giant craft into five sections and to raise each by means of compressed air. With average weather the work may be done in a year's time.

There is no certainty whatever that the Lusitania ever again will sail the seas. But if science and human pluck again should bring her to the top and rededicate her to the service of man, no ship over will have provoked deeper emotions than this one as she revisits her old ports of call. She will be a ghost ship materialized into fact. — Cincinnati Post.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

A meal should be regarded as an important end in itself. It should be taken at leisure, body and mind being for the time being given up to it, and to agreeable, social intercourse.

THE DELICIOUS PEACH.

No more delicious dish for dessert can be served than one of sliced peaches with cream and sugar. When peaches are plentiful one likes to vary the serving. A most appetizing pie may be made by baking a rich crust and when cold fill it with sliced peaches well sugared and covered with sweetened cream. To make it still more beautiful sprinkle with finely minced pistachio nuts or with shredded blanched almonds.

A bird's nest pudding is another form of dessert well liked. Slice a pie pan half full of peaches and cover with a baking powder biscuit dough. Bake and turn over on a plate, spread with butter and sprinkle sugar and a little nutmeg if liked over the peaches.

Peach Pudding.—Pour a cupful of hot milk over a cupful of dry bread crumbs and let stand five minutes; add a half cupful of sugar, the well-beaten yolks of three eggs and the stiffly beaten white of one. Mix well and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Heap thinly sliced peaches well sweetened over the top and cover with a meringue made of the two egg whites and three tablespoonsful of sugar. Cover the pudding with the meringue and bake until a delicate brown. Cake crumbs make a more delicious pudding.

Rice With Peaches.—Cook one cupful of rice until tender, adding milk at the last of the cooking; season with butter and add sugar to sweeten, then pour into a hollow mold. When ready to serve unmold and fill the center with sweetened sliced peaches and serve with cream and sugar.

Peach Chutney.—Prepare three pounds of peaches after peeling. Put them into a saucepan with a pint of mild vinegar; cook until tender. Pound in a mortar four ounces of onion and two ounces of garlic, five ounces of fresh ginger root; add the peaches with six ounces of raisins, an ounce each of white mustard seed and chili peppers and six ounces of sugar, simmer ten minutes and add more vinegar if needed. Bottle for winter use.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

MAKE TROUBLE FOR DENTIST

Successful Treatment of Wisdom Teeth Always Is More or Less of a Problem.

Wisdom teeth, especially lower ones, are much more difficult to handle than any of the others in the mouth. When their nerve dies or has to be killed by the dentist he cannot be sure for some time that it is really dead. The reason is that the roots of a wisdom tooth are twisted or curved in such a manner that the root canal cannot be explored.

The upper wisdom teeth have three roots, frequently fused together, forming a grooved cone, which is usually curved backward, says Gray's anatomy. "The roots of the lower, two in number, are compressed together and curve backward."

It is this backward curving of the compressed roots that gives trouble to the dentist. Often the canal that runs through each root is so narrow and so curved that the finest of the "broaches" used to draw out the dead nerve will not penetrate, and sometimes when it has penetrated it will not come out.

When this happens there is only one thing to do—leave the broach and apply iodine, which will very soon eat away the steel of which the broach is made.

Las Vegas Has Future.

Las Vegas was founded by some Mexicans when New Mexico was a part of old Mexico. In 1853, and the Mexican government granted to the new community an area of some 100,000 acres. The Mexicans took up what they needed of this land and built a village in the middle of the settlement. It remained a sleepy Mexican town until some time in the seventies, when it was struck simultaneously by several Yankies and Jews, and as a wave of prosperity.

The Mexicans, who had been squatting on a part of the community grant, showed that they were capable of learning modern business methods by claiming the whole 100,000 acres. After a long contest the courts confirmed them in their titles to the lands they actually occupied, but decided that the rest of the area belonged to the community. And so it is today. This town owns great grazing areas, which are open to all citizens, and valuable timberlands. Ultimately Las Vegas will be rich and her people Las Vegas free.

The Essential.

The new bookkeeper at the museum turned back the book of rates by heart before taking over the job. "Here, sir, you must leave your umbrella at the door," he said to a visitor who had failed to hand over that article.

"But I haven't an umbrella," the visitor pleaded. "Then you must go back and get one," said the bookkeeper. "No one is allowed to pass in here unless he leaves his umbrella at the door." Exchange.

Consoling.

Bobby—Grandpa, why do you look so sad?

Grandpa—Ah, my lad, I was just thinking, here I am seventy years of age and I have done nothing that is likely to make posterity remember me—nothing.

Bobby—Oh, well, don't worry, grandpa. Maybe you'll still have a chance to live in history as some body's grandfather.

ATTENTION TO EARTH ROADS

Authority on Highway Construction Likes Concrete, but Favors More Care of Lanes.

"More attention has got to be paid to the earth roads if the coming fiscal elections are to go over." This is the opinion of E. L. Stevens, inventor and road expert. Mr. Stevens is, perhaps, one of the most unique characters in the road-building world. A graduate civil engineer, he left the technical work for the perfection and development of the road system of America. He came out from the planning and engineering of the regular engineering profession and went down into the field of building roads to study the level of ordinary men to study the level of ordinary men to study the level of ordinary men.

Sand-Clay Road Well Cared For.

to tell the methods for the proper up-building of the nation's highway system.

For a number of years Mr. Stevens has been highway commissioner for the State Park highway. This piece of road work in itself is a testimony to his ideas. He is also the inventor of the Stevens Improved road drag, one of the simplest and most efficient road machines on the American market.

Mr. Stevens believes in concrete highways and prepared boulevards, but he also believes that the earth road, which comprises more than 80 per cent of the country's highways, is of no less importance. "A concrete highway isn't going to do a farmer much good if he has got to haul his load three miles through hub-and-mud before he gets to it," is Mr. Stevens' attitude.

The farmer is the man who is going to pay for most of the country roads, and although concrete roads are needed where the traffic is sufficiently heavy the earth roads that feed the concrete road must be kept up. As an inventor of road machinery, a road engineer, a road supervisor and a road worker for his practicalities and the life dream of better roads as his idealism, Mr. Stevens is fully qualified to judge highway problems.

UTAH TO SPEND $8,000,000

Part of Money Is to Be Spent for Improvements on Arrowhead Trail to California.

The state of Utah has decided to spend about $8,000,000 on roads in the next two years, with an expenditure this year of about $2,000,000. Some of the Utah millions, which are made up of state and federal funds, are going to be used on the development of the Arrowhead trail, which is tributary to all parts of southern California, from San Diego and Imperial valley on the south to Fresno and San Luis Obispo on the north.

$300,000,000 FOR HIGHWAYS

Sum Which If Capitalized at 5 Per Cent Would Represent Investment of $6,000,000,000.

Government road officials estimate that road construction and maintenance in the United States involve an annual outlay of over $300,000,000, a sum, which, if capitalized at 5 per cent, would represent an investment of $6,000,000,000. There has never been a nation-wide traffic census to show either the direction or volume of traffic over these highways.

Roads Must Be Linked Up.

If we are to keep costs down, our highways must be linked up and there must be through truck lines provided to which feeders can be built.

Lower Hauling Costs.

Hauling costs are lowered by good roads because the slope of the land is limited by the worst spot in the road.

One of Major Activities.

Road building will shortly become one of the major activities of our government.

To Keep American Ships on the Seas

For the first time since the Civil War we have a real merchant marine. It cost us $3,000,000,000 to get it.

The farmer, manufacturer, laborer—every American is interested in holding our position on the seas.

As a first step in this direction it is necessary to modify those articles of existing commercial treaties which have operated to thwart the upbuilding of our merchant marine—By giving the notice of termination for which the several treaties provide.

This action is directed in the constructive Shipping Bill now before Congress.

While declares it to be the policy of the United States "to do whatever may be necessary to develop and encourage" a merchant marine.

This policy deserves the support of every American.

Lacking this support the present effort to maintain our merchant marine may suffer the fate of many ineffective attempts of the past.

BEST AGE FOR WEANING PIGS

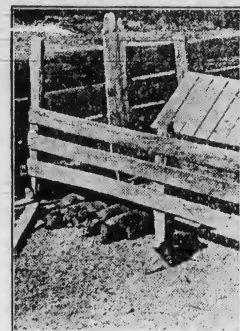

Good Plan to Let Porks Nurse Until Twelve or Fourteen Weeks of Age—Keep Them Growing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Too many farmers follow the practice of weaning pigs when too young, many being weaned at six and seven weeks of age. A good brood sow properly fed has a good flow of milk when the pigs are of this age. There is no better feed for growing pigs than their mother's milk, consequently it should be used to the greatest extent possible. When the pigs are of suckling age the sow should be on full feed. Unless there is some extraordinary reason for earlier weaning the pigs should not be weaned under the age of ten weeks, and it is better to let them nurse until they are twelve or fourteen weeks old.

Often serious results follow weaning at too early an age. An entire change of feed following weaning may create serious trouble. If, however, pigs have access to corn, shorts, middlings or tankage, or fish meal in a self-feeder placed in the open where they can eat at pleasure without being disturbed by other hogs, they can be weaned at the age of twelve or fourteen weeks, with very little change in their feed, by allowing them to continue on the self-feeder.

To obtain the best results pigs should gain continuously until they are ready for market. The best results will not be obtained unless pigs have access all the time possible to good forage crops, alfalfa and red clover preferred. If these feeds cannot be procured rye, oats, barley, cornmeal, rape or any other grain or grasses that will produce good forage in the locality should be sown. The pigs should be watched closely to see that they are on their feed. If they are not the feed should be changed, replacing corn with barley and using skim milk or buttermilk if possible. The pigs should be kept free from lice by the use of crude oil good black oil. They must have access at all times to good, pure water. Shade must be provided during the hot summer months. Natural shade is always best, but where this is not obtainable temporary shade may be provided by setting posts and nailing boards on poles about three and one-half or four feet from the ground and covering with straw or grass.

SELECT PIGS FOR BREEDING

Animals Should Not Be Pushed, but Kept Growing Nicely to Develop Bone and Muscle.

Pigs selected for breeding purposes should be kept growing nicely, but they must not be pushed, for the whole object of their feeding is to make them stretch out and develop bone and muscle in place of fat. They should be continued on a growing ration. A little skim milk and shorts make a good ration. A small amount of ground oats and cracked corn will help develop and insure normal growth. But corn should be used sparingly as it is too fattening for pigs. Remember that these pigs should also have an abundance of green feeds.

ALFALFA BEST FORAGE CROP

Greatest Single Crop That Can Be Grown and Pays Handsomely—Unexcelled for Hogs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every farmer, whether or not he raises hogs, should have some alfalfa if he can possibly get it. It is the greatest single crop that can be grown and pays handsomely where it is grown. As a forage crop for hogs it is unexcelled.

LIGHT HOGS ARE PREFERRED

Relative Marketability of Various Cuts Is Deciding Factor in Selling Animals.

A heavy hog will bring the producer more money than a 200-pound hog, but pound for pound the latter is worth more. The relative marketability of the various cuts is the deciding factor.

DAIRY FACTS

SEND HOLSTEINS TO FRANCE

Herd of Pure Breds and Grades Purchased by French Commission to Be Sent Over.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

American dairy cattle are to follow American soldiers to France. One hundred and four Holstein-Friesian cows—42 pure bred and 62 grades—and four pure bred bulls are to leave this country shortly on a specially equipped transport. "Transport" have been issued to Havre, France, and from there the cattle will be sent to devastated districts where they will do their bit in bringing back health and happiness to the children of those regions. The cattle were purchased by the French high commission, and at the commission's request dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture assisted in selecting the animals.

Efforts were made to collect the animals from herds believed to be free from contagious disease, especially tuberculosis.

Of the entire number of cattle selected from 42 herds a very low percentage reacted to the tuberculin test. Special efforts were made to select only well-grown, large, strong animals, of good conformation, which showed evidences of becoming large milk producers. In age they varied from two to four and one-half years, so that a long period of usefulness is ahead. All were due to freshen soon after arrival in France, so that milk will be available at once.

The animals were shipped from the assembling points by express to New York, where they are to be loaded on a specially equipped transport. To insure proper care throughout the ocean voyage, a dairy expert of the United States department of agriculture will accompany the shipment.

Members of the French high commission expressed themselves as being well pleased with the cattle selected. It is understood that these dairy cows are to help satisfy the urgent demand for milk from the war-stricken areas.

SUMMER FORAGES FOR COWS

Plan Recommended by Missouri College Expert Calls for Seeding of Sudan Grass.

A good general plan recommended by Prof. Sweet, of Missouri Agricultural college, for providing late pasture for cows is to plant Sudan grass about June 1, at the rate of sixteen pounds the acre. This should yield ten to fifteen tons to the acre and should be ready for feeding from about July 15 to August 1. An early maturing variety of soy beans planted at the rate of thirty pounds to the acre May 30 will be available for feeding from about August 1 to 20. A good northern variety of corn planted about the middle of May at the rate of six quarts to the acre will become available about August 10 and can be fed whenever needed. The second crop of Sudan grass will be ready to cut about August 25 to September 1. Cow peas planted at the rate of five pecks per acre about July 1 may be fed from about August 25 to September 30. After this time field corn may be used at any time. Sorghum crops give good results during the late summer.

BETTER BREEDING WILL AID

Furnishes Most Economical Way to Obtain Large-Production Cows—Use Best Heifers.

In dairying, large production and profit go hand in hand. Breeding furnishes the most economical way to obtain large-production cows. The purebred bull, with generations of high-producing ancestors back of him, must be used for breeding, and only the best heifers from the best cows should be chosen to be the dams of the next generation.

Cow for Tropical Countries. The black Holstein cow is being urged for dairying in tropical countries.

Salt Is Important. Do you salt the cows regularly? This is just as important as regular milking.

CONTROL SHEEP-KILLING DOG

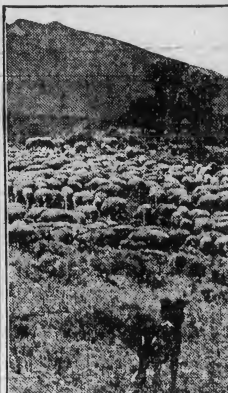

Secretary of Agriculture Asks Twenty Governors to Urge Laws Protecting Sheep.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The enactment of more adequate state laws to control sheep-killing dogs is urged by Secretary Houston in a letter just sent to the governors of 20 states. The secretary points out that, although there has been a gratifying increase in the number of sheep in the United States in the last year, there is room for further expansion of the industry. Farmers, he says, are discouraged in many instances from keeping sheep on account of the danger of damage by dogs. The letters were sent to the governors of Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin, where state legislatures are now in session. Following is the letter:

"I understand that many states now have under consideration the matter of legislation to encourage the larger development of the sheep industry by removing or controlling the dog menace. During the past year, as you perhaps know, there has been a gratifying increase in the number of sheep in the United States. There is undoubtedly room in many sections of the country for further expansion along this line, especially in the settled farming areas. The field representatives of this department, however, generally report that farmers are discouraged in many instances from keeping sheep on account of the danger of damage by dogs.

"The question seems to be primarily one for consideration and action by the various states. I am, therefore, taking the liberty to bring the matter to your attention, with the hope that you will look into the situation and make such recommendations as may seem wise to the legislature of the state. May I not, in this connection, call your attention to the carefully drawn and apparently well-enforced laws of several states, notably those of New York and Pennsylvania, which are set forth in the bulletin (Farmers' Bulletin 835) inclosed herewith."

USE FEED TROUGHS FOR PIGS

Should Be Constructed So That Each Little Porker Will Get His Full Share.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Young pigs should be given their feeds in such a manner that each individual pig gets its share. The simplest way to accomplish this is to allow the pigs to eat from a properly constructed feed trough, one that will keep the pigs out of the feed and will lessen the possibility of crowding.

SYSTEM OF SHEEP FARMING

To Be Successful Wool or Mutton Cannot Be Ignored—Two Products Profitable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A system of sheep farming that is to be continuously successful can not ignore either wool or mutton. In many cases the two products will be worthy of equal consideration. In others either one may be emphasized according to the peculiarities of conditions, management, and marketing.

BEST TIME FOR SOWING RAPE

If Done at Last Cultivation of Corn Lamba Can Be Turned Into Cornfield in Autumn.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is good practice to sow rape at the last cultivation of corn. The lambs can then be turned into the cornfield in the fall and will feed upon the lower leaves of the corn and rape and make excellent gains.

Highway Improvement

PLAN TO MAKE A ROAD DRAG

Illustration Shows an Implement Which Is Simple and Inexpensive—Tough Wood Best.

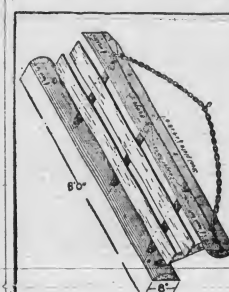

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The accompanying illustration shows a typical design for a road drag, which is very simple and inexpensive. The design contemplates the use of an ordinary log of timber, such as may be readily obtained in almost every locality. The log should be about 7 or 8 inches in diameter and from 6 to 8 feet long, and should preferably be of hard, tough wood which will not decay very rapidly when exposed to the weather. White oak, burr oak, chestnut, cedar, hickory, walnut, or any similar wood may be satisfactorily used, provided that it is well seasoned before the drag is put into use. Railroad ties have been frequently used for this purpose and possess the advantage that they are already cut to about the right length. In selecting the tie, however, care should be exercised to see that it is of sound wood and of the proper size.

The drag is made by splitting or sawing the log into two equal semicylinders, which are then framed together in the manner shown in the illustration. The better of the two pieces should form the front runner of the drag, because it is the one subjected to the greater wear. Moreover, while the front runner should always be placed with the face forward, it is claimed by many that better results may be obtained by having the round part of the back runner go forward in order to increase the smearing action of the drag. The two runners are usually spaced from about 30 inches to 36 inches apart, and are connected in ladder fashion by means of cross stakes or rungs.

The ends of the rungs are ordinarily fitted into 2-inch auger holes, bored in the runners, and are securely held in place by means of end wedges. The rungs are usually spaced at 4-foot intervals, when framed together, will be displaced in a longitudinal direction with respect to each other. The object of this displacement, or offset as it is usually termed, is to make the ends of the front and back runners follow approximately the same line on the road while the drag is in operation. The amount of displacement, therefore, should depend on the amount of skew necessary to make the drag empty itself. But since this skew varies with the condition of the road surface, the proper offset to be given to runners cannot be definitely fixed. Under ordinary conditions an offset of from about 12 inches to about 16 inches will prove satisfactory.

In order to make it easy for a man to stand upon the drag and to shift his weight properly when dragging over a hard surface, the drag should be provided with two 1-inch boards parallel to the runners and nailed down to Typical Design of Split-Log Drag. The rungs. These boards should be about 8 inches wide and their length should be slightly less than that of the runners of the drag.

The chain by means of which the drag is drawn should be about 8 feet long and its links should be made of three-eighths-inch steel. On light drags two trace chains may be used for this purpose.

Many road drags constructed as above described, without metal-cutting edges or other modifications, have been very satisfactorily used where the conditions were favorable. It is evident, however, that such drags are effective only on comparatively soft road surfaces, and to diminish this limitation and also to increase the life of the drag it is very desirable to provide a metal-cutting edge for the front runner. An excellent edge of this kind may be made from a strip of iron or steel about one-fourth inch thick and about four inches wide, and even old wagon tires or worn-out trailer blades have been very satisfactory.

THE KEYNOTE SPEECH.

...and woman who intends to vote next fall should read in full the speech delivered yesterday by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge as temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention. There is every reason to suppose that the platform adopted by the convention will be in conformity with the keynote speech of Senator Lodge, and so by considering the speech we can see the lines along which the Republican campaign will be conducted during the next five months.

The best possible argument for the election of the Democratic ticket next fall is this speech by Senator Lodge. With the exception of a demand for a higher tariff, and this was only intimated, and a demand for the concealment of credits "in such manner as to give preference to the most essential products" which is nothing less than the announcement of a dangerous policy of putting into the hands of government the decision of who shall and who shall not be permitted to borrow money, with these two exceptions and neither is used in the speech there is not in the entire speech a single policy for the future definitely outlined and affirmatively stated. Senator Lodge himself confesses this weakness in his peroration. He acknowledges that there are various views in the Republican party and concludes with a request as follows:
"Let all honest differences as to means and methods, if there are such, be set aside until November in order that the great over-ruling purpose in which we all agree and which we have achieved may be attained. Make no declaration of principle broad, so devoted to the supreme object, that all may accept it and all work for the same dominant result."

What is the dominant result and the great and overruling purpose? Which Senator Lodge refers to? He answers the question in an earlier passage of the speech:

"The defeat of the present administration and all it means transcends in importance every other question."
So the dominant issue is the defeat of the Democrats and the victory of Republican office-holders. He asks that all differences of opinion be forgotten and that the declaration of principles be so broad that no one can object to them. That is what he sought to do in his speech and the result is what might have been expected. A declaration to which no one can object is a declaration with no affirmative aim, a declaration with no positive purpose, a declaration purely negative in phraseology and in thought. The people are to be given no hint as to what the Republicans would do if elected. No reason is to be given why Republicans should be put in office except that they do not like the Democrats.

Such a course, to be sure, is the only one open to the Republican party. They cannot announce what they will do, because they cannot agree among themselves what they should do. If elected,
Senator Fall has one Mexican policy, Senator Nelson another, Senator Knox has one policy on international relations and Senator Lodge a different one.
Senator Johnson has one, or rather several attitudes toward capital and labor and with these Senator Penrose is not in accord.
If the Republicans were put in to govern the government of the nation would come to a standstill because then, as now, they could not approximate agreement sufficiently to permit affirmative action.

This thought is constantly in Senator Lodge's mind and it tinctures every paragraph of his speech. He considers in turn the attitude of President Wilson toward the government, the expenditures of the present administration, the economic situation, the administration of the Mexican policy, the question of Armenia, and finally the treaty and the League of Nations. In every one of these paragraphs he criticizes the work of President Wilson and denounces the Democratic administration and in not one of them does he present a different policy for the future.
For example, relative to Mexico he says: "We must watch and wait no longer. We must have a man who has a policy and who can act" and again: "We must take up and by a wise and firm policy restore Mexico to this position which she ought to occupy."
But he does not suggest what that policy should be. He offers no program as to Mexico. He offers no solution of that complex situation.

Again he refers to what he calls
"the perilous conditions of the hour" and says that "the one force strong enough to grapple with the encircling dangers is the Republican party" But he does not say how the Republican party should grapple with the dangers.

As to the Armenian mandate he says: "We are anxious to help Armenia in all reasonable ways and no doubt shall do so." But he fails to suggest how that help should be given and contents himself with saying that the mandate should be refused.
As to the League of Nations he confesses to the divergence of opinion in the Republican party, but says: "We were all firmly united in our determination that the League as submitted by Mr.
Wilson must never pass." Another negative policy. As to just what the Republican party thinks should be done about the League
Mr. Lodge maintains a complete silence.

These quotations are taken from all parts of Senator Lodge's speech and are sufficient to show its absolutely negative character. Many of his criticisms are unfounded and unjust and those we will take up from time to time in these columns. His eidi-cious claims as to what the present Republican Congress has done we will leave also for future consideration.

Upon the showing of Senator
Lodge's speech, it would be dangerous, even a disastrous action to put the Republicans in power. The speech is a confession of weakness. It is a confession that the Republicans can unite upon no affirmative policy in national affairs. It is a confession that the disagreements in their own ranks are so great that only negative statements and negative proposals can the party be kept intact. A house divided against itself cannot stand and a party so utterly divided in opinion cannot provide the first element for a successful administration. It has no unity of purpose. According to Senator Lodge's speech, it has no purpose at all, except to get into office. On the question of what it would do, if it got into office, Senator Lodge is dumb through ten thousand words.

How, the Republican party has called! Senator Lodge calls attention to the fact that in 1896 it put the word "gold" into its platform and took thereby a great risk. That is true and it did more than take a great risk
—it took a courageous and positive stand. The origin of the platform and its success in 1896 were due to its unequivocal position upon the leading question of that day. Compare the Republican platform of Lincoln in 1860, with the Republican platform of 1920. In the Republican party made its purposes clear. The people knew what it stood for on the great issue. The great issue of 1920 is the League of Nations and no one can say where the Republican party stands on the League of Nations for it has no positive stand on the League of Nations. It confesses to the people with columns of rhetoric, but not one word of affirmative policy. Such a course can have and should have but one end—defeat. No one is in doubt as to what the Democrats stand for.
And no one can know what the situation the Republicans have at the outset. You can't beat something with nothing—Louisville Evening Post.

And Now The Chameleon!

Enquirer.
Theodore Roosevelt enriched political zoology when he announced the discovery of the rhetorical weasel which ate the words it uttered. It has remained for the Republican National Convention to add to his collection the chameleon declaration of principle which assumes the color of rhetoric, for and neutral, and has none of its own. Of such character is the deliverance upon the subject of the covenant of the League of Nations.

The sole fact that it is acceptable to the irreconcilable action of opposition, of which Hiram W.
Johnson is the exemplar; to Henry Cabot Lodge, whose position was that of approving the covenant after it was safeguarded and Americanized, and to Nicholas Murray Butler, whose idea was that extreme concession should be made to the inflexible President Wilson's demand for ratification, is sufficient to stamp it as a straddle, to use the expressive technical term of practical politics. If it has any fact that it comes from the extrinsic as the view of the radical opponents of the treaty. Intrinsically it is a mere exercise in philology.

The way has been cleared for the Democratic party to offer to the country a definite presentation of this issue. Generally speaking, the platform as a whole is encyclopedic and seeks to embrace every debatable subject upon which difference exists and through the proper handling of which votes can be gained.

Its chief characteristic is the unsparring, unequivocal and unlimited criticism of President Wilson, which runs through its warp and wool. Indeed, the Democratic party is actually ignored and the criticisms upon the Administration are heaped upon its titular head.

There can be no gaining the reputations of the condemnation of laxity and extravagance and the departments such as the postoffice and the Executive of the order of the Executive to act in coordination with the legislative power.

Expediency, no doubt, prevented the adoption of the plan of protecting the public from hardships caused by industrial disturbances, but there was no opposition to strikes on the part of public servants and the Government ownership or operation of railroads, an opposition which included the employee-ownership of the so-called Plumb plan. In this utterance the historic conviction of the Republican party clearly was reflected.

It is a matter of regret that in dealing with foreign affairs, the convention acted in muddled fashion.

The Mexican position actually is meaningless. As for the raising of an international question thru the Canal to American-owned vessels, this safely can be regarded as a concession to the chauvinists of the local type and the providing of material for the campaign rheto-ricians.

The business community will approve the failure to heed those who desired to demand the beneficial Federal Reserve bank system, and will endorse the recommendation that it be shorn of its political features. The same association will regret the decision not to speak with more authority and clearness upon the subject of governmental assistance to the development of our foreign trade.

Practical opponents may find fault with the flamboyant array of claims of good deeds done, but it serves the purpose of epitomizing the legislative and administrative performances of both parties during the last quadrennium.
When the answering declaration shall come from San Francisco every citizen will have before him a miniature and convenient reference library to serve as a guide to voting in November.

Some New Laws.

Following is a synopsis of a few new laws passed by the Kansas Legislature:
Each family is allowed twenty-five domestic fowls as exempt from taxation; the remainder is taxed as live stock and subject to local taxation, but only 10 cents on the one hundred dollars to the State.

Pool table license tax is changed from $20 to $30 for the first table and $5 for each additional table.

Bottling of soft drinks from 25
to $50.
Oleomargarine dealer from $5 to $10.

Restaurants serving meals or lunches from $5 to $10.
Soft drinks and ice cream from
$2.50 to $5.

Theatres, including moving picture shows, twenty cents per seat, the minimum $1.
The County Tax Commissioner or his deputy is required to call once at the residence of a taxpayer outside the county seat and there furnish a schedule and secure the assessment of his property; if he is not at his residence the Commissioner is to leave a written notice and copy of the schedule. The taxpayer shall appear at the office of the Commissioner and list his property within the time prescribed by law.

After January 1st, 1921, all motor trucks upon any roads or highways are required to be equipped with a mirror or glass, or polished substance on the left side, so as to enable the chaffeur to see an approaching machine desiring to pass.

All owners of automobiles shall register with the County Clerk of his respective county, his automobile, on or before January 1st of each year, and pay the annual registration fee of 50 cents, for each horse-power of the vehicle, on the rating of horse power fixed by the Society of Automobile Engineers, and paying 30 cents clerk's fee. Fees for other than passenger automobiles are governed by capacity of pounds.

A tax of one cent on each gallon of gasoline sold at retail, collected by the dealer and paid to the county clerk on the first day of each month, for State highway purposes. Tractors and home consumption are not exempt. This law becomes effective June 17th, 1920, and all dealers must register with the county clerk under a penalty of $50 for failure.

Whenever a County Farm Bureau has been incorporated and the necessary and proper certificates to the Fiscal Court that the organization has 100 members who own or operate farms in the county and that the organization has raised from its members by annual membership dues or otherwise a fund of not less than $500, which fund is in possession of the treasurer, the County Fiscal Court shall appropriate to such organization a sum double the amount of the fund in the hands of the treasurer, not to exceed $50,000. (Governed by the assessed value of the county.)

There's a Special Ingersoll for Each of These Folks

DID YOU ever "get fitted" to a watch? We mean, did you ever figure out exactly your watch needs and then see if you were properly equipped?

There are a dozen or more different Ingersolls—varying in price, varying in purpose—small watches, jeweled watches, radium dial watches for night use, and so on. For instance, if you have an expensive watch, you probably would choose a Radiolite for $3.50. If you haven't a good serviceable watch, you'd be likely to buy a 7-jewel Reliance. The dealer will help you to select just the one for you.

"Ingersoll" has always meant the lowest-priced good timekeeper. Today, with present day costs and the 1920 purchasing value of a dollar, $2.50 is the lowest price at which we can make a watch while keeping up the Ingersoll standard of quality.
"Ingersoll" means "money's worth" whether it's for the $2.50 Yankee or one of the Radiolites that tell time in the dark, or for one of the jeweled watches.

America's Wheat Crop.

As usual, when crops approach their harvest, there now is a much brighter tinge to the outlook for this year than was forecast in the spring. The yield will not be a record one for any of the cereals, according to latest and most reliable reports, but gives every promise of being more than the average for practically all of them.

The extremely favorable weather of May added many millions of bushels to the wheat harvest, and this month sees the crop maturing under ideal conditions. The Department of Agriculture estimates the yield of winter wheat at 781,000,000 bushels, and should this weather continue it may be said safely that fully 800,000,000 bushels will be harvested. This report also contains indications of a 70,000,000 larger spring wheat crop than was harvested last year. Should the winter crop yield prove to be within 200,000,000 bushels of last year's, the whole crop will be only 130,000,000 less.

Recently an estimate of the world's crop was received from the International Institute showing that wheat in all foreign countries promises much larger yield than last year, more than enough to make up for any shortage in the United States. This is gratifying, as it will lighten the world's demands upon this country for foodstuffs and will leave more of the home crop for domestic use.

Thus the foodstuff situation is beginning to show a silver lining to the clouds of the past months. The farmers of the United States, and of the other countries of the world, seem to have done well their share of production, considering the adverse conditions of winter and early spring.

All that remains is to garner the ripening grain. Much help will be needed on the farms this summer. Official measures should be taken to supply it from among those who are not disposed to work at other useful callings. This was a part of the mission of representatives of farmer organizations who recently visited President Wilson. The harvest already has opened in the Southwest and is moving northward. Before the end of June it will be in the Ohio Valley, and will move rapidly on to the Canadian border. This is no time to delay action in sending relief to the grain-growing sections of the country.

FROM PENDLETON COUNTY

Falmouth Outlook

The prevailing price for shearing sheep is 32 cents a head, which includes a shampoo and sacking the wool. In some of our neighboring towns the price of haircuts has been raised to 50 cents, with no discount for bald pates. If man had to be sheared like his ape ancestors, the price of a clip would be almost as prohibitive as rock and rye at $100 per.

Owing to the lateness of the season, some of our farmers have been delayed in getting their ground ready for the tobacco crop. However, some of the early birds have a part of their crop transplanted, while others have the entire acreage out. The recent rains have given all who had the plants a chance to set out their crops. Indications now are that the present year will be a reasonable one for all kinds of crops, although there is not going to be a big acreage this year, owing to the scarcity and high price of labor.

The wool growers of Pendleton county are being discontented from 10 to 50 cents a pound for their wool which is very unsatisfactory. The farmers were obliged to pay excessive prices for feed last winter, and at this price many growers will lose money on their flocks. As soon as the trusts get hold of the wool, the price will go up to perhaps a dollar a pound. There has been no material decline in the price of woolen products, notwithstanding the fact that wool is only bringing about half what it brought last year.

Rocks Do Grow.

On the farm of Mr. Jas. Champion, known as the old home place of his father, John Champion, boys used to meet years ago with the elder Champion, and often tossed a round stone, ball fashion, one to another. The same stone now lies in the yard, at the old place, and men now in their eighties often speak of this rock and identify it as the stone they used to toss about to each other.

Today it will weigh about 300 pounds and lies near the spot where it has lain for nearly a century. Some of the most substantial old men of Mercer county who are now living, will vouch that this rock has grown from a small stone to its present size since their babyhood days. — Wilmore California Enterprise.

BASE BALL.

Burlington Wallpaps Petersburg and Bellevue Gives Hebron a Coat of White Wash.

Burlington and Petersburg ball teams met on the grounds of the former last Saturday afternoon for their first game of the season. A large crowd of fans was present and rooted vigorously for their favorites.

The game made a promising start for Petersburg which scored one run in the first inning off of Keim's three bagger to right field followed by Whites single to the same territory.

Mathews was in the box for Petersburg and blanked Burlington in the first two innings. Huey holding the visitors to the one run lead, when the blow-off came in the third and there was a carnival of trouble let loose for Petersburg. After Huey and Kelly, the first two Burlington men up, had been retired, Mathews gave E. Acra and Beemon each his base on balls, which was followed by Slayback's three bagger to right field, and right there, Mathews was out of the game.

Base hits—E. Acra 2, Slayback 2, H. Acra, 1, Huey 1 White 2, R. Berk 1.

Two base hits—E. Acra, Burns, Mathews.

Three base hits—Slayback, Keim.

Struck out—By Huey 11; by Mathews 4, by Snelling 2.

Base on balls—By Huey, 1, by Mathews, 3; by Snelling 1.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

J. C. Bolen, of Petersburg, believes in the Petersburg team, and was on hand last Saturday afternoon to root for it.

Petersburg rooters are game and never acknowledge defeat but keep up the din until their last man is out.

Some very high and long flies to out field were captured by the fielders on each side.

Keim is a dangerous man to come up when two or three men are on bases as he makes a specialty of three baggers.

Albert Slayback showed up as a 100 per cent ball player at short and was the largest part of the infield where his work was spectacular, while his batting was heavy and timely and his base running sensational Saturday victory was largely due to his fine work.

The game at Bellevue last Saturday afternoon was over in time for the Hebron people to witness several innings of the game played by Burlington and Petersburg.

The Burlington team will play at Petersburg next Saturday afternoon and again on July 5th.

Hebron base ball team and a considerable number of its loyal rooters went to Bellevue last Saturday afternoon where it was defeated 6 to 0—Shinkle for Bellevue and Dye for Hebron did the twirling. Although the score indicates a one-sided game it was a very interesting contest, and the Hebron aggregation is not in the least discouraged at the result and remain ready to tackle any and all comers. It is a game aggregation.

At Verona last Saturday the Rhine-Neiss team of Cincinnati was defeated by the home team 7 to 0.

Butted a Cow Off the Pike.

As Courtney Kelly was returning from the picnic at Harvest Home grounds last Saturday night he was driving a car with a cow on the pike near W. L. Kirkpatrick's residence. The machine was not running very fast but it was damaged by the cow. The cow was being smashed, riding and springing and the front axle bent. The cow, which belonged to Guiley & Pettit, escaped with a few bruises and scratches. Mr. Kelly says he did not discover the cow until he was so close to her he could not avoid hitting her. The lights on his car are supplied by an engine which at the time was running slowly and not furnishing a very strong electric current for the lamps. The cow was put in a pasture but someone had left the gate open and she wandered out onto the pike.

Favor Change in Volstead Act.

Walter W. Vick, of New York, campaign manager for Governor E. J. Edwards, of New Jersey, in Chicago on his way to San Francisco, said in a statement that there would be "not less than seven hundred delegates in the Democratic National Convention in favor of a modification of the Volstead act permitting the use of light wines and beers in such States as wish to do so, with States who make and mature distillate control of regulation under a general and liberal federal act."

"Opposition to the Eighteenth amendment is not today a political issue," Mr. Vick's statement said, "but the Volstead act is open to amendment, as has been pointed out by Governor Edwards and by such distinguished Republican authority as Senator Knox of Pennsylvania."

KICKS ON DEATH

"Body" of Live Soldier To Be Buried.

St. Louis, Mo.—Herman H. Phillips, of Berlin, Ill., formerly of Company E, 16th Infantry, Rainbow Division, is in the position of awaiting the arrival of his own body. The body is coming in a government casket direct from the cemetery at Chateau-Thierry, and Phillips is wondering what he will do with it when it arrives. He is at present on the payroll of the C. & A. Railroad and as a section hand at Berlin and he doesn't want the Railroad Co. to learn this, he is dead.

Phillips' father, Phillips, received official notice two weeks ago that the body of his son was being sent to him and to be prepared to receive it. Later he received a telegram giving further notice of the shipment of the body. The War Department, he says, has been notified specifically that Herman is alive, but the records show he is dead, and the department not only stands on its feet but is determined to deliver the body.

Herman Phillips carries numerous scars that might have been the result of giving him a military funeral, but he survived. At Chateau-Thierry on July 28, 1918, both his legs were broken and he received a bayonet wound along one forearm. A dagger thrust thru the wrist. The scar of another wound is on the top of his head. Phillips states that he was taken to a hospital when it went into action that day, and only four of them returned, but he was one of the four.

One month or two after the Chateau-Thierry engagement, J. Phillips received official notice of his sons' death. Finally after some time, he made out papers to collect Hermann's insurance, and shortly after the son came home. Since then his father repeatedly has had no desire to accept the insurance money.

Cost Farmer $2.15 a Bushel To Grow Wheat In 1910.

The 1919 American wheat crop was produced at an average cost to the grower of $2.15 a bushel, the Department of Agriculture announced in making public its recent cost of production survey. The survey covered 14 districts of the wheat belt, nine in the winter wheat areas of Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, and five in the spring wheat regions of Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

FINE RAIN

All Crops and Garden Truck Greatly Benefitted.

The fine rain that visited this county last Saturday night came at the very best time possible to suit the farmers who had their crops well prepared to receive it. The pastures were not suffering for additional supply of moisture but the rain put them in better condition for a rapid growth and the quantity of grass will be increased greatly thereby.

It will be a benefit to the meadows, causing a heavier growth of the grass which the weeds threaten to smother.

Oats will be helped along considerably and another timely rain will make a fine crop.

The wheat is at a stage it can be benefited much by the rain, and by the way, the small acreage of that cereal in this county is promising a much better yield than was thought possible a few weeks ago.

The early potatoes were at a stage of growth, a few more days delay in the rain would have had very serious material, but the splendid wetting the ground received last Saturday night will insure a pretty good yield of the early crop.

The weather so far has been very favorable to the tobacco set out and the rain last Saturday night gave the growers a splendid opportunity to reset the massing plants in their crops, and many took advantage of it.

A big crop of blackberries ought to be a certainty now as the season all along has been very favorable to them.

Garden truck generally is doing nicely, but it along with other vegetation needs warm weather to hasten its growth.

Bank Robbed

Burglars Blow the Bank at Crittenden and Get Loot Amounting to $20,000.

Burglars blew the bank at Crittenden, Grant county, last Thursday night and got away with about $20,000 in securities, mostly in Liberty Bonds. Blankets and taraulins were used on the safe to deaden the sound of the explosion. The band who did the job are supposed to be the same party who have been operating in and around Covington for several weeks, and they evidently went out from Cincinnati or Covington last Thursday night as they took the tarpaulin of the county road tractor at Kensington as they went up the pike, the tarpaulin being found Friday morning among the wreckage in the bank.

Not many years ago the bank at Crittenden was robbed of several thousand dollars.

Two men were arrested at Milford, Ohio, last Monday, and on them were found papers that bore the names of some of the patrons of the Crittenden bank.

Fell and Broke His Hip.

Last Saturday morning Clifford Hedges received a telephone message from Cold Springs, Campbell county, informing him that his uncle, Cave Clore, fell down a flight of steps that morning and broke one of his hips. Mr. Hedges lost no time reaching the residence of his uncle, and it is feared that the injury will prove a serious matter with Mr. Clore, who is not a robust individual. Mr. Clore has been at Cold Springs only a few months, having come from Bullittsville neighborhood.

Body Identified.

The body of the young man that was found floating in the river at W. W. Tolin's place below Hamilton, this county, was identified last Friday as that of John Sizemore, 19, of Cincinnati, who was drowned June 13 after a bathtub in which and three companions were rowing in the Ohio river at Cincinnati, capsized. The identification was established by means of the pipe and the picture of the young lady found in his pocket.

Thieves at Work.

Someone stole a new tarpaulin from the county tractor one night last week, and the thief was on the side of the Dixie Highway near Richmond. On the tarpaulin is the following in large, black letters: "The property of Boone County." Only recently a large leather belt belonging to the county was stolen from a stone quarry in the neighborhood of Conestoga.

Joe Kirkpatrick has contracted to build a six room bungalow for W. A. Gaines on his farm near Bullittsville. It will be supplied with all the modern improvements. American Legion Convention.

September 3d and 4th has been designated by the State Executive Committee of the American Legion of Kentucky as the time for the Second Annual State Convention of the ex-service men and women of the Great War.

Announcement is made from State Headquarters that representation will be determined by the number of members. Each post will have one representative and one alternate and one additional representative from each one hundred members whose State and National dues have been paid. There are one hundred and thirty-two local posts in the State. Each post will send its delegation with its own transportation. The Executive Committee of the Legion is now facing the big problem of how to get the delegates to the convention. CROP CONDITIONS

Said to Show Necessity of Developing River Transportation.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The necessity of developing our rivers in order to provide adequate transportation facilities for the country, has finally forced itself upon the leaders of both political parties. The San Francisco platform, like that of Chicago, will doubtless contain a waterway development plank.

Development of our rivers will not be accompanied by platform declarations. It will be brought about by a Congress composed of men who realize how vitally important it is to the people of the United States to put their rivers to work. The immediate conditions against the adoption of such a policy are to be found in the crop reports of two Southern states, Texas and Oklahoma.

Despite a season adverse in some respects, Texas reports splendid crop prospects. Cotton, though somewhat backward, is an excellent shape. The corn, wheat and corn. But all lines of agriculture in Texas are suffering from lack of cars, and the situation is causing considerable anxiety. Oklahoma tells a similar story. So far as production and quality are concerned, Oklahoma shows no signs of surpassing anything in her history. As typical of her great wheat belt, Oklahoma points to Grady county, with 30,000 acres, which will yield over 20 bushels per acre, as against 15 bushels last year. Moreover, the quality has advanced a grade. Further, the harvest is well advanced, and might prove costly, has disappeared. There is plenty of labor for the harvest, which is to start early this year. The problem of marketing the grain is worrying the Oklahoma farmers.

A plan now being urged in the building of a temporary storage for holding the wheat until cars may be had. There are no cars available now. There is no assurance as to when they will be available.

Car shortage, or inadequate transportation, is not a new story. For years the country has lived with every harvest season. But the significance of a falling farm production is appreciated now as never before. High prices have raised the demand for only must there be production, but that after the crops are harvested they must be delivered. The obstacles must be removed. They can only be removed by the development of our rivers and the joint operation of river and railroads, which merger alone promises an adequate transportation system.

It is high time that the great parties should seriously consider themselves to this question of river development, but to translate platform pledges into things done it is imperative that we send a Congress men who will champion river development intelligently and insistently.

Given House-Warming.

The town women were noticed trucking towards the residence of G. W. Tolin one afternoon last week, each carrying a package of some useful article in the housewarming line. Upon inquiry it was learned that a housewarming was in progress. Mr. and Mrs. Tolin having gone to housewarming a few days before. The presents consisted of about everything from a rocking chair to a well it is hard telling what.

Sheep Killed by Grub.

It is estimated that two per cent of the sheep in this State is killed annually by grub in the head. This loss can be eliminated by the use of a grub remedy now in use. This operation should be performed from the middle to the last of June, as that is the time when the grub makes its appearance and does much damage. Farmers should give this matter immediate attention and make plans to treat each individual of their flocks.

ARMY WORM

Appearance Reported in Larve, Davies and Henderson Counties.

In some sections of the State corn and timothy are being damaged by the well known army worm. This insect sometimes does its injury by night and thereby, is rather misleading as to its identity. Contrary to what is commonly supposed the army worm does not always march in a single file, but they may feed like the cut worm and only at long intervals assume the marching habit. They are found in small numbers and it is only occasionally that they assume such numbers as to be very destructive to cultivated crops. The Extension Station recommends a few simple means of keeping these insects in check.

Thousands to Be Retired.

Washington.—Between 4,000 and 5,000 Federal employees eligible for retirement on pensions will be formally notified within a week of the automatic termination, on August 20, of their active service with the Government. The recently enacted retirement act provides that retirement must take place 90 days from its signature and that employees coming under the new law must be notified 60 days in advance. The retirement age is 70 for clerical workers and 65 for mechanics. It is estimated that the District of Columbia alone 1,600 Government employees will be retired for age. Secretary John B. Payne and Postmaster A. S. Burleson announced that applicants for reinstatement of employees in their departments would be approved.

Had A Delightful Time.

A considerable crowd of gay young people attended the first picnic of the season at Harvest Home grounds last Saturday afternoon. The grounds were nicely lighted in the evening and the good music that was provided for the occasion made it a very auspicious opening of a popular picnic ground. The dancing was discontinued promptly as stated in the advertisement. It would be although the young people were enjoying the light fantastic at a lively clip.

Crops Destroyed by Pests.

Lansing, Mich.—Little progress is being made against the grasshopper pest, which has caused the destruction of about $100,000 worth of grain and crops in the western part of the State.

Farmers have organized under county farm agents to fight the insects and all available material is being sent into the field. The grasshoppers have reached the traveling size and swarms of them fill the highways.

Another Hold-Up at Stevies.

Five hold-up men entered Stevie's road house at the end of the car line on the Dixie Highway last Friday night as it was being closed up for the day and robbed several waiters and the bar tender, the amount of money and the value of watches taken being in the aggregate several hundred dollars. Some of the supposed robbers were discovered at the La-Tonia race track the next day and were arrested.

Idlewild on the Boom.

Scotchman's new brick business house will be quite an addition to the little hamlet of Idlewild. Mr. Scotchman has engaged in merchandising and his trade has increased very greatly in volume in the last few years and the building that he has secured for a store house there for the last half century is inadequate and to accommodate his business he has to erect a larger and more modern structure.

Cutouts Now Unlawful.

On the 17th inst., the new State law regulating motor vehicles was in effect. One of its provisions makes it unlawful to have a connection in an automobile by which the cutout can be opened from the front seat of the car. It is unlawful not only for an automobilist to be able to open his muffler from the drivers seat, but also unlawful for a dealer to sell a car with such an attachment.

Bought Bu lington Property.

The bungalow in Burlington advertised for sale by A. B. Renaker, who was bought by J. C. Eddins and was purchased by J. C. Eddins. The purchase price was $5,000. Possession is to be given the first of next October, by which time Mr. Eddins hopes to have his residence out on the farm completed and ready to occupy.

Brady-Clore.

A license was issued Tuesday by the county clerk for the marriage of Robert Brady, 25, and Miss Alline Clore, 24, both of Bellevue. The groom is a son of H. D. Brady and is a popular young man and has been mail carrier on Bellevue rural route for several years. The bride is a most amiable young lady, the daughter of Henry Clore, retired farmer. The young couple have the best wishes of a host of friends. They will make their home in Bellevue.

It seems from this distance that Gov. Cox, of Ohio, has the inside track in the contest for the Democratic nomination for the presidency, which will be made at San Francisco, next week. If the Democrats can not win with Gov. Cox as their candidate, they will not win at all. He is their only hope.

The weather so far this week has not suited the farmers other than those who had considerable tobacco to plant. They had a big lot of plowing cut out for the week, none of which they have been able to do on account of the rains.

For Sale—One ton Ford truck in good condition—one 141 Maxwell touring car—has been run just enough to make it run good; also twenty head of black faced two-year-old Hampshire ewes. W. L. Kirkpatrick, Burlington, Ky.

The new schedule on which it is proposed to have the mail carried on the Burlington and Bellevue route is not at all satisfactory to the carrier. A combination of darkness and bad roads is not to his liking.

Relative Cost of Crop Production Investigated.

Investigation into the cost of production of barley tobacco made by the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture show that the 1919 crop cost the grower an average of 26 cents a pound. Investigations were begun last March under the supervision of W. D. Nicholls, University of Kentucky, and F. W. Peck, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Fifty-three farms in the typically barley district—Payette, Jessamine, Woodford and Scott counties, and twenty-eight farms in Christian county, the typically dark tobacco belt, were investigated and the range of principal factors of cost of production was discovered.

The report emphasized the fact that a fixed price for farm products based on average cost of production would tend to decrease the supply. It also showed that the cost of production varies on every farm on which tobacco is grown, and it shows the relationship among the other farm crops, together with production of live stock.

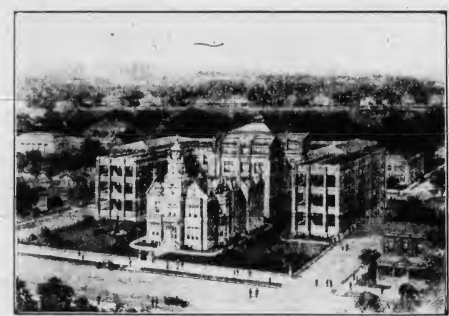

Jones Falls in a Cistern.

Arthur Jones, of Locust Grove neighborhood, had an experience one night last week that he has no desire whatever to repeat. He had attended a party given the young folks at the home of his neighbor, Thos. Adams, and when he started home he stumbled over the cistern box out in the yard and fell feet foremost into the cistern, the water in which was several feet deep. James Pettit, who left the room with young Jones hastened back into the house and informed the other people of what had happened, and a party was soon at work trying to rescue young Jones, who was finally hauled to the top of the ground by means of a rope, but not before he was chilled almost to death. Great excitement prevailed among the crowd while the rescue work was in progress.

BOOTH MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.

Because of its great past record in humanitarian and religious work and the services which it has rendered both at home and abroad, the Salvation Army has come into a new conception of its work—the of enlargement and improvement.

In Kentucky, the Salvation Army maintains seven centers. They are but the pivots of its wide circulation which extends through rural districts. From records it has come to light that of the many men and women helped materially, and spiritually, in this state, 75 per cent originated in the small communities outside the large cities.

During the past year the Salvation Army in Kentucky, has cared for over two hundred girls and young mothers who would have had no place to turn to in their trouble. It has rescued thousands of men and placed them on their feet, and never has it been known to turn from the plea of a needy person.

To carry on and extend this work, the Salvation Army authorities have considered it essential that the present Booth Memorial Hospital be enlarged to meet the increased hospital demands. Hospital connection in such that hundreds of cases are turned away daily, and medical authorities have endorsed this movement as a way to alleviate present conditions.

The first gun fired will be on July 11th, when canvassers will tour this county in an endeavor to raise the required amount. Organizations have been affected in all counties and it is expected that this one will show its appreciation for the Army's work by giving liberally and substantially.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

WHY LIBERTY BONDS ARE LOW.

Those Who Bought Do Not Feel Like Working, Saving and Paying For Them.

Why Liberty Bonds are low and prices of commodities are high was authoritatively explained recently before the Academy of Political Science by R. C. Leffingwell, assistant secretary of the Treasury.

At this critical moment, he said, many of our people have turned gamblers and wasters. For plain living and high thinking we have substituted wasting and bickering. We enjoy high living while we grumble at the high cost of living—silk stockings and shirts for the poor, of automobiles for men of small means, of palaces for the profiteer and the plutocrat.

"For five years," he continued, "the world has been consuming more than it has produced, living upon its capital and the governments of the world have been issuing evidences of indebtedness to represent the wealth destroyed. This has caused world inflation of prices."

"When they were issued, no one could foresee the probable course of the market for Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes in the future with any degree of confidence. A year ago, it was freely predicted that financial authorities that Victory Notes would shortly go to a premium and that Liberty Bonds would be selling at or near par within a year or two."

"Everyone knows that these sanguine expectations have not been realized. With the armistice and still more after the Victory Loan, our people underwent a great reaction. Those who had bought Liberty Bonds as a matter of patriotism but not as investors began to treat their bonds as so much spending money. Those who had obeyed the injunction to borrow and buy Liberty Bonds ignored of the complementary injunction to save and pay for them."

"In my judgment, the present depreciation of Liberty Bonds on the market is due chiefly to the fact that of the 30,000,000 Americans who patriotically subscribed during the period of the war, large numbers have not been willing or able to exercise such restraints over their personal expenditures as would enable them to retain their bonds after the cessation of hostilities. Liberty Bonds, like other bonds, are subject to market influences, including the law of supply and demand, and their market quotations have declined in consequence of the failure of the Treasury to exercise the same in proportion to the enormous expenditures of capital during and since the war."

"Many patriotic people bought Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes under the impulse of patriotism who have been unwilling since the war was over to continue to lend their money to the Government and have forced their holdings on the market more rapidly than others could save funds to invest, their consequent depreciation in market prices. The remedy for this condition is for people to work and save, to keep their holdings of Liberty Bonds and investments in the market, and to purchase additional government securities with their savings."

"As the Treasury views it, the Liberty Bond problem is chiefly a matter of the Government, many holders of Liberty Bonds who patriotically subscribed for and held them during the war have since regarded them as so much spending money and thrown them on the market."

"People generally have been spending money freely and saving relatively little, and there has not been sufficient capital saved to overcome the pressure upon the market from those who bought Liberty Bonds but not as investors. I think most competent judges, however, believe that the equilibrium has about been reached between sales and purchases of Liberty Bonds and that the Liberty Bond market will soon turn upward; government bonds, in fact, could not well be made more attractive than they are at present market prices."

"The reason Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes are depreciated today is not to be found in the terms of the bonds and notes, it is not to be found in the interest rate or in the tax exemptions it is to be found in the fact that a vast amount of capital exceed the supply and the demands exceed the supply because the whole world has been living beyond its income for five years."

Mail Truck Went Bum.

The mail truck went bum at Erlanger last Saturday evening and the mail was considerably behind time in its arrival in Burlington. The delay in arriving at its destination resulted in the loss of about a dozen packages from Burlington on the return trip. They waited as long as they could and then employed Joe Huey to take them to the car line in his truck.

Jersey Gattle Notes

Reports from recent sales show that interest in the popular breed is far from dead.

If the price paid for cattle at the recent Jersey sales in the east are to be taken as a gauge of the popularity of this great breed, the most skeptical must admit that popularity, and that it is well founded and growing by leaps and bounds.

On the May 31st, T. S. Cooper & Sons held their annual Decoration Day Auction and sold 84 head of imported and American bred Jerseys at an average of $293.57.

On June 1st, Rockelyiff-Inderkill Farms held a combined dispersal sale of 77 head, averaging $567.33.

On June 8th, Hood Farm, of Lowell, Mass., held a sale of American bred cattle, the 71 head averaging $577.28.

Practically every one of these animals was bred and raised on this farm. The Jersey Bulletin says, "There is no farm in the world that offers so many Jerseys of its own breeding at auction, year after year, and at such high prices. The Hood Farm as a breeding factory for Jerseys of wonderful producing capacity and show yard winning ability has been herald throughout the world."

On June 4, W. R. Spain & Sons, of Morrisstown, N. J., sold 79 head of imported Jerseys at an average of $348.00.

Mr. Spain is known to nearly every Boone County breeder, having for years been proprietor of Burr Oak Farm, Shelbyville, Ky., and as a breeder and importer was a potent factor in promoting the Jersey breed in Kentucky.

It was he who brought to Kentucky and Boone county the grand old bull, Volunteer of America, 11910, who, at 8 years of age brought $400 at Mr. Ben Weisenberger's sale last March.

At all these sales the bidding was spirited and at no time did the auctioneer have to coax bids.

While these sales are above what Boone County breeders could expect from a sale, they are an index to the popularity of the breed and the demand for good stock, and should be an incentive to us, as breeders, to produce the best we can, and as a club, to do all in our power to build up and promote the breed interests in the county. O. C. HAFFER.

Figuring the Value of Pure Bred Jersey Bull.

If the value of a pure bred sire, in a grade herd of dairy cows, was fully appreciated by the average dairyman the dairy situation in this country would be comparatively short time be on a much higher plane than is now the case.

Probably the best way to convince a farmer of the value of a champion from his old beaten path is to show him by figures and facts the increase in hard dollars and cents due to a practical Jersey bull. For that reason the following case is given: Suppose we take a herd of twenty grade cows which have an average milk production of 10 lbs. per day. It is very easy, by the use of a good pure bull to increase this production to 1000 lbs. in the offspring. If this milk is worth $2 per hundred pounds on the farm, which is a conservative estimate, the yearly increase will be $20 per cow over the original cows which produced 100 lbs. Now then, what would be the increase in the value of purchase simply from this standpoint?

The average life of the cows we are talking of is about six years, which they will be giving milk. The rate of interest shall be 5 per cent. If we purchase our bull today, it will be at least a year before all our cows have calved and it will be an additional two years before these heifers are in milk. Thus we see we can not figure our profit before the end of the fourth year.

Value of increased production per cow per year: fourth year, $20; fifth year $41; sixth year, $63.05; seventh year $84.20; eighth year, $105.61; ninth year, $136.04.

This total value of increase per cow at the end of nine years is $436.04. This amount in nine years would only be worth $77.70 today. Thus we see that the cash value increase per cow is $77.70 at the time of the purchase of the bull. In the herd we should expect to get nine heifer calves, and of this number there should be of sufficient merit to raise. So multiply $77.70 by six, we get $466.20, which is the true cash value of the bull at the time of purchase due to the value of increase in milk production in the first generation. The larger the herd the more the bull will be worth.

The dairyman can not make a better investment than to buy a pure bred bull of good stock to head his herd. Join co-operative dairy bull association. See your county agricultural adviser on this—E. M. Clark, Ill.

How Luxury Robs the Land.

Fifty-eight of the more than 1,100 cities, towns and villages in the country whose 1920 census has been announced more than doubled their population in ten years. These places thirty-three were in the North, which includes New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the States north of the Ohio River; 17 were in the South, which includes all States South of those enumerated, and eight were in the West, which includes all States west of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

The foregoing statement, based on figures from the Census Bureau, furnishes a subject worthy of the reflection of every thinking person. There can be little doubt that the preponderant proportion of this increase in the town population comes from the farms. When one considers the heavy falling off in immigration since the beginning of the World War in 1914, there can be little room for doubt that it was the countryside that sent this great influx of population to the village, town and city. To be sure, the drift of youth from the farm has been going on apace for four or five decades, but never in such great numbers as in the last ten years.

There are many reasons for it and on these reasons economists, theorists and politicians have turned out thousands of tons of "literature." But the old farm gate continues to swing out on its creaky hinges and stand behind the boy who is headed for town; with never a look over his shoulder.

What is the lure that tempts the rising generation away from the freedom and independence of the land, away from a heritage of proprietorship of genuine liberty? It can all be summed up in one word—LUXURY. The demand of the American people for luxury of every kind is the lodestone that robs the land of its vigor and independence. The country boy can get in helping city folks to gratify their thirst for luxury, coupled with his own anxiety for shorter hours of labor, for companionship, and amusement, are too much for the lad of the countryside and so he goes to town.

And his kind will keep on swelling the city population until the American people get it into their heads that there are other things quite as worth while as one's own luxury—Commercial Tribune.

A good sized crowd attended W. C. Weaver's sale last Saturday afternoon and the sales well pleased with prices realized. Cows sold from 75 to $118; corn sold as high as $2.36 a bushel.

ROAD BUILDING

BENEFITS OF COUNTRY ROADS

Among Other Things They Cheapen Cost of Transportation of Farm Products to Market.

Good roads promote self-respect in a community. They make possible social intercourse. They bring the benefits of churches and schools within the reach of all. They help to keep the boys on the farm. They cheapen the cost of transportation of farm products to the markets and thus add to the farm profits. They add to the value of farm lands much more than they cost. They mark the degree of civilization of the rural community. This, in short, is the value of good roads as seen by the extension service of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture.

The building of good roads is of the greatest importance to a community. What kind of a road should be built? Of what should it be constructed?

Good Roads Like This Bring Farmers Nearer to City Markets.

What are the things to be considered in locating the road? What "grade" should be maintained? How should the road be drained? What are the laws governing highway construction? There are a few questions answered in extension circular 68 dealing with country roads.

Matters of prime consideration in locating a road are: Easy grades, good drainage, exposure to sunshine, elimination of culverts and bridges by avoiding unnecessary creek crossings, directness and the number of farms to be served for a given length of road. Whenever possible to avoid it, a good location should not be rejected merely because a certain roadway has been in use for some time. If the location of a road is bad it should be changed if possible. In locating roads avoid railroad crossings at grades.

The grade of the road is important for on this depends the weight of the load which can be hauled economically. By grade is meant the rise or fall in feet for each 100 feet in horizontal length of road, usually expressed in percentage. A 5 per cent grade means that the road rises or falls 5 feet each 100 feet along its center line. It has been calculated that on a smooth country road the load that one horse could pull on a level would require two on a 5 per cent grade, three on a 10 per cent grade and four on a 15 per cent grade. Engineers usually figure a 6 per cent grade as a maximum.

Road work in Missouri has not been as well managed as other public work. Projects have been too narrowly limited to localities, resulting in fragmentary effort. Skilled locating and supervision of construction have been generally lacking. The remedies are: First, a wider cooperation and the adoption of broad schemes of improvement, preferably with units no smaller than counties. Second, the absolute elimination of political considerations in the spending of money. Third, securing good engineering advice in the preparation of plans and requiring careful engineering supervision of construction.

ENGLAND SPENDS 50 MILLION

Grants to That Amount Will Be Distributed for Reconstruction of Roads and Bridges.

Grants amounting to $50,000,000 will be distributed by the British road board for the reconstruction of roads and bridges in England in 1935. The mobilized army units will be used to do the labor. Local highway authorities will be required to match this appropriation by at least as large a program of road work as they carried out in the year before the war. Area taken into consideration, England's program is thus far in excess of that of the United States, including both federal aid and state funds.

POOR ROADS ARE EXPENSIVE

Congressional Report Places Annual Loss at $904,000,000 for Transportation Alone.

The congressional report of 1914 placed the economic loss of the United States through poor roads at an annual figure of $504,000,000 for transportation costs alone. The heavy increase in tonnage since that time probably makes the loss today close to $1,000,000,000.

DAIRY

FOUNDATION FOR DAIRY HERD

Excellent Results Obtained in Starting With Grade Calves From Good Producers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Young calves from good dairy cows are a satisfactory foundation for starting a dairy herd. Ordinarily the method advocated is to grade up common cows with a pure-bred bull, requiring a number of years of patient selection and breeding—a process sometimes disconcerting to an energetic dairyman. Frequently this causes farmers, who want results too quickly, to change breeds.

It is expensive to buy mature dairy cows that are free from disease, that have good breeding and show desirable productive ability. Often, especially in new dairy sections, a farmer buys mature stock without being properly prepared to care for it, and many discouragements follow. To a great extent most of this difficulty can be avoided by buying good grade heifer calves from herds of well-established milk production. In some dairy regions it is a common practice to sell the heifer calves for veal. These calves, while only grades, are usually from good producing ancestors and carry a productive ability much greater than common cows.

The buying of such calves to start dairy herds has been tried in several states, with excellent results. Of course the cost of small calves is much less than mature animals and the danger of disease is also greatly lessened. In general, shipping is simpler. Calves may be shipped by express at from two to four weeks old, depending upon the distance, with good results, if they are properly cared for upon arrival.

In buying it is important to deal only with dairymen. Do not buy from men who purchase calves at stock yards to ship back to the farmers, because it is not always possible to determine the breeding of the calves, and calves that are physically unfit may be shipped.

In some cases shipments are made C. O. D., which enables the buyer to see the calves before paying for them. A man who sells calves in this way makes a special effort to please his customers. It seems desirable, especially in sparsely settled sections, that more attention be given to perfecting a satisfactory system of distributing dairy calves to farmers.

Advantages in buying small calves as a foundation for a dairy herd are summarized as follows:

Small investment.
Better breeding.
Greater freedom from disease.
In case of accident loss is smaller.
Raising calves stimulates interest and in consequence causes better care of live stock.

A satisfactory herd can be established more rapidly than by grading up common cows.

SOLUTION OF FOOD PROBLEM

Dairymen Should Make What They Have Go Further—Not Necessary to Slaughter Cows.

Dairymen can solve the food shortage by the same method that people are using to solve the food shortage: They can make what they have go farther. If food economies can result in feeding more people, the same feed can feed more cows.

No one advocates the killing of part of the people in order to provide an abundance of food for the rest. It is not more necessary to kill large numbers of dairy cows because of a short feed supply. Such action, moreover, taken in the face of our national need for dairy products, would be calamitous.

BABCOCK TEST VERY USEFUL

By Its Use Together With Lactometer Composition of Milk Can Be Determined for Solids.

The Babcock test is a device for determining the fat content of milk or cream. With this test and a milk scale one can determine the best cows in the herd. By using the Babcock test and the lactometer together the composition of the milk can be determined for total solids.

By the end of May, 1920, the "O. K." province will have spent more than a million and a half dollars. More than $100,000 was set aside to take up mortgages and more than a half million was required for new buildings, etc., demanded by the increased work of the province.

Support of corps activities in the province calls for nearly $3,000,000. Nearly a half million is required for provincial and divisional activities, a considerable part of which is devoted to fresh air camps and relief work. About $50,000 was taken for the national pension fund for officers grown old in the service and the special work for women totalling nearly $40,000.

NEW QUEEN AT BELTSVILLE

Calamity Wayne Pauline II Completes Year-Test, Producing Eleven Tons of Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A new queen reigns in the herd of Holsteins on the government experiment farm at Beltsville, Md. She is as unassuming and peace loving as any of her subjects, although she bears the name Calamity Wayne Pauline II, and has just completed a test in which she produced in a year more than 11 tons of milk. In 365 days she produced 22,547.8 pounds of milk which averaged 3.805 per cent butter fat, the total fat being 855.4 pounds.

This animal was selected by dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture from a Michigan herd in July, 1917. She was brought to the Beltsville farm, where she produced a heifer calf, and was started on her test December 7, 1917, at the age of eight years. The test was run through the coldest winter that section had experienced in 40 years, and a summer that was extremely hot. The test for advanced registry was conducted under the rules of the Holstein-Friesian association. During the year the animal was handled by two different herdsmen.

A son of Calamity Wayne Pauline II has been placed at one of the government substations, and one of her half-sisters is making a fine record at the Michigan Agricultural college. Calamity's 365-day record was 10,250.6 pounds of milk, averaging 3.7 per cent butter fat, making a total of 718.13 pounds of fat.

All the dairy cattle on the Beltsville farm are used for experimental purposes, and will be given at least two advanced registry tests to determine their capacity for production.

SUPERVISE PURITY OF MILK

List of Equipment Necessary to Furnish Laboratory to Set Out by Dairy Division.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A letter has been sent by the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture to 1,500 health officers in cities having over 5,000 population urging the city governments to supply the health officers with proper laboratory equipment so they can adequately guard the city milk supply. A health department without a laboratory equipment is as helpless as a soldier without arms, says the letter. A city government has no right to hold its health department responsible for the health of the community unless it has provided the department with the equipment necessary to wage the fight against disease.

The work of supervising the safety, cleanliness and purity of its city milk supply is one of the most important duties of the modern health department. Bacteria, dirt, added water and preservatives in milk cannot be determined without chemical and bacteriological apparatus. The letter gives a list of the equipment necessary to furnish a laboratory for milk analysis.

DAIRY COW MOST PROFITABLE

Animal Never Fails to Return Profit for Feed and Care—Keep Her Comfortable.

The dairy cow is the most profitable animal on the farm if rightly managed, as, under ordinary conditions, she never fails to return a profit for her care and feed. If she is given the right kind of food and just the right quantity. If she is underfed, her product will be correspondingly small, and if she is overfed, she will be unhealthy. Feed the cow just right, keep her quiet and comfortable, and she will be of value to the goose that laid golden eggs.

COOKING GRAINS FOR COWS

Act Does Not Ordinarily Add Much to Palatability—May Decrease Digestibility.

While some unpalatable feeds may be consumed by dairy cows in larger quantities if they are cooked, the cooking does not ordinarily add much to the palatability of the grains and may even decrease their digestibility.

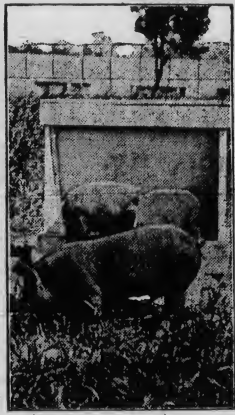

LIVE STOCK

SELF-FEEDER IS ECONOMICAL

One of Best Labor Savers and Efficient Means of Feeding Hogs—More Fencing Urged.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the best labor savers and one of the most economical and efficient means of feeding hogs is the self-feeder. Experiments comparing the self-feeder with feeding by hand have been made at a number of experiment stations, and most of them have shown not only that the self-feeder is a time-saver, but that more pounds of pork will be produced with a given number of pounds of grain by using the self-feeder. This applies not only to the use of corn, but to ground and mill feeds such as tankage, shorts, middlings, peanut meal, soy-bean meal, etc. By using the self-feeder in feeding the ground and mill feeds one does away with the laborious work of feeding sows to hogs. No definite experiments have been made along the line of comparing feeds of this kind fed dry against sows yet some work of this kind has been done and results were very satisfactory with the self-feeder plan. Many farmers and hog growers have tried feeding these feeds in a self-feeder, and the results were fully as good or better than those obtained by the system of sowing feeding.

It is highly desirable that feeds used in feeding hogs, especially corn, be fed as near as possible to the crib or granary. Feeding floors should be built adjoining corncrib or granaries holding shelled corn.

Another means of saving labor in hog growing is the more extended use of woven-wire fence. If the hog grower has all his fields and lots fenced with hog-tight fencing, he can save the waste in these fields after harvest, and can also follow the method of hogging down corn, which is highly desirable and economical.

Probably the best use to which woven-wire fencing can be put is in making possible the use of forage crops. Our best hog growers have become convinced that feeding hogs in dry lots is no longer the best method. In nearly every part of the country where hogs are grown some kind of forage crops can be successfully used, and they offer three distinct advantages: First, the saving of grain by allowing hogs to get all the green feed they want; second, the building up of the soil through the use of manure obtained from hogs continuously on these pastures; and, third, the much more sanitary conditions under which the hogs live, plus the exercise which the hogs get in pastures, both of which are necessities in successful hog growing. In some parts of the hog-growing country farmers are able to pasture their hogs 10 or 11 months in the year. In almost all parts of the country hogs can be pastured at least six or seven months.

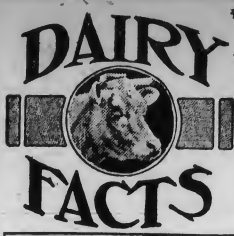

All these practices save labor in feeding, and in addition save a considerable amount of labor in hauling out and scattering manure that accumulates when feeding under the dry-lot plan.

Many hog feeders dip or spray their hogs to keep down the lice. Many commercial hog owners on the market are practical and effective in keeping hogs from becoming infested with lice. The general practice of growing hogs and feeding them the grains raised on the farms has a tendency to distribute the labor throughout the year.

NEW PURE-BRED CALF CLUBS

Distinction of Having Largest Organization in United States Claimed by Wisconsin.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Wisconsin claims the distinction of having the largest boys and girls' calf club in the United States. The Winnebago County Calf Club, organized by the county agent, already has 100 members.

It is being backed by the banks, the county superintendent of schools, the county agent, the secretaries of the breeders' associations, the officials of the County Fair association and the state leaders of young people's clubs. Any boy or girl can become a member of the club by owning and caring for a pure-bred or high-grade heifer calf or a pure-bred bull calf. The banks are furnishing credit to any of the juniors who need funds with which to purchase their calves.

The new calf club project is being promoted in conjunction with the pure-bred sire campaign. The 100 calves now being fed by the boys and girls were secured from Winnebago county breeders.

DEMAND FOR DAIRY PRODUCE

Bureau of Markets Will Furnish Plans for Stimulating Greater Consumption.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The bureau of markets of the department of agriculture announces that it is prepared to furnish local organizations complete plans for campaigns to stimulate the consumption of dairy products in cities. A campaign at Sedalia, Mo., was conducted in February through the co-operation of the chamber of commerce, the women's division of the council of national defense, the state college of agriculture and other local organizations. Last year campaigns conducted by the department to encourage the use of dairy products were held in Boston, Detroit, Des Moines, Minneapolis and St. Paul. At Des Moines after a week's campaign the demand for milk became greater than dealers were able to meet. At another city a dealer who was marketing about 850 pounds of cottage cheese each week increased his sales to 850 a day, and in other cases much skinned milk that had been going to waste was converted into cottage cheese and found a ready market.

INDIGESTION CAUSES SCOURS

Calf Affected Has Been Overfed, Been Given Milk That Was Sour, or Pails Were Dirty.

When the calf gets scours it is an indication that something is wrong with the feeding. It has either been overfed, been given milk that is sour or cold, been fed sweet milk one meal and sour the next, or the pails or troughs are dirty. Indigestion is the cause of scours, so in treating the trouble the first thing to do is to correct the conditions that brought on indigestion. Then give a dose of castor oil in milk and follow with the formalin treatment. This consists in giving one tablespoonful of formalin solution, made by adding one-half ounce of formalin to 15½ quarts of water, in each pint of milk fed. Only half the usual amount of milk should be given at a feed for a few days, when the amount can be increased to normal again. There are other remedies but this has been highly recommended.

TEST COW FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Law Makes It Compulsory in District of Columbia—Big Decrease of Disease Noted.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the District of Columbia it is compulsory to test dairy cattle for tuberculosis. The law was passed in 1900. During the year which followed 1,701 cattle in the District were tested, and 39 per cent were found to have tuberculosis. In 1918, 1,384 cattle were tested and less than 1 per cent was found to have the disease. Since 1914 not more than 2 per cent of the dairy cattle in the District have been found to be diseased. This illustrates what systematic effort will do in the tuberculosis fight.

METHODS OF HANDLING HENS

Labor-Saving Appliances Are of Value on Poultry Farm—Orchard Furnishes Range.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In general the simplest methods of handling poultry are best, especially on general farms, where poultry is a side line. On such farms furnish the bulk of the poultry production. Labor-saving appliances are of value on poultry farms, but are not always practical on general farms. Women and children can do most of the poultry work on a general farm and thereby release the labor of the men for other farm work. On general farms, place the poultry house convenient to the dwelling house in order to save steps.

One house holding from 75 to 150 hens can be used to advantage, allowing the hens free range all the time. An excellent arrangement is to have the house near an orchard, which furnishes a good range for the hens. By allowing free range the hens will pick up all the necessary green feed and will also get a considerable amount of their grain feed. Keep large flocks containing dry hens before the hens constantly, so that it will be necessary to feed the scratch grains only once or twice daily. Very little more labor is required in caring for a flock containing from 100 to 150 hens than is required for from 30 to 100 hens, provided all the hens are kept in one house and have a large free range.

A separate shed or a room in the laying house can be utilized to advantage for hatching chickens with hens.

Poultry on Range Requires Less Care.

setting as many hens as possible at one time; this saves labor, as it takes only a little while longer to care for a number of setting hens than for one hen. Confine the setting hens to their nests and allow them all to come off at one time daily. An incubator may be used for hatching the eggs and the chicks may be put under hens for brooding, especially early in the season, when it is difficult to get hens to set as early as is desirable to produce early chickens.

Raise the chickens under hens, putting from 15 to 25 chickens with each hen, and confine the hens to small coops placed on a good green sod, or a field of some growing crop whereby the young chickens will have free range on fresh land. A considerable number of hens with broods of chickens can be kept in a limited space where the hens are confined to the coops.

In sections where commercial hatcheries exist the farmer can have his eggs hatched there and thus save the labor of hatching the chicks. These chickens can be reared with hens, or a stove brooder which will cover from 200 to 400 chicks may be used to good advantage, thereby saving labor in feeding and caring for the chicks and still allowing the young chickens free range. By the use of these commercial hatcheries all the chickens can be hatched at one time and the chickens can be brought out early in the spring, at which time it is most profitable to hatch and raise chickens.

WATCH FOR LICE ON CHICKS

Where Pests Are Found Make Application of Small Amount of Lard—Provide Shade.

Watch for head lice on chicks; if found grease the head of each chick with a small amount of lard. Do not use salt with the lard, as often advised. Allow plenty of shade, as the hot sun's rays are often fatal to freshly greased chicks.

PROPER FEEDING IN SUMMER

Not Advisable to Give Too Rich Food During Extremely Hot Days—Not Easily Handled.

It is best not to feed too heavily, or of too rich food, during the extremely hot days which are experienced occasionally in summer because overloaded digestive systems cannot handle the food as well in the extreme heat.

Wisdom of Good Dressing.

Good clothes make one self-reliant. They are what financiers would call a good risk. Looking successful assists very materially in being successful. Women do not spend enough intelligent thought on dress. The woman who understands the art of good dressing is not vain, she is wise.

One of the first things a woman of moderate income must do is to avoid extremes. Each new fashion trends so rapidly on the heels of the previous one that one must have an unlimited income to be able to keep up the style if they lean toward extremes. Fashionable clothes are not always beautiful because they are fashion able nor are they becoming for the same reason. Every woman should study her own individuality, her defects as well as her good points, her proportions, lines and coloring. She should study herself in the same impersonal manner in which she studies other people, and then after honest criticism of herself, she should choose those clothes which are suited to her in proportion, line, color, and they should be made to emphasize her good points and hide the defects of her person as much as possible. When she has discovered the type of dress exactly suited to her, she should cling to that type no matter what the prevailing fashion may be. This does not mean that she should have all her dresses made exactly alike or to cling to an antiquated style, but she should retain the same lines brought out; retain the essential features and still permit sufficient latitude for fashion. It is also economy to design in the color that most becomes you and make that color the dominant note in your wardrobe. Uniform coloring and style is very essential in the costume of a well-dressed woman. Do not wear a variety of colors or styles so that there will be no danger of your looking like one of those suitors who "bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany and his behavior everywhere." You wear a tailored dress do not spoil its effect by a fluffy hat or have your shoes, hat, skirt and waist of different colors.

The appropriateness of clothes is another essential feature in good dressing. Who would want to wear a dressy chiton waist, a picture hat, novel shoes, no picnic? She who does is not well-dressed nor are tailored waist and stock and tennis shoes, any more appropriate for the evening call. Fitness for purpose is a mental element of good dressing which needs much emphasis. There is another thing that contributes more largely than anything else to one's looking well-dressed and that is in the care and neatness of one's garments. Perfectly good clothes not only indicate good taste, but preserve their wearing quality. The perfect freshness of one's grooming is an actual asset to a woman, in the home, in business or in social life.

A Wonder of a World.

Enquirer

Belgium, racked and ruined Belgium, rapidly is balancing herself, making ready to plunge dauntlessly into the mainstream of material reconstruction. Much of her huge task even now is accomplished. This irrepressible people, throughout five destructive years by the vandal frenzy of the German army, rises undaunted to the ruins of its former achievement and starts anew to equal, perhaps better than earlier success, Belgium, her homes razed, her industries and her agriculture paralyzed, her farms abandoned in caverns, her unfloored shells, stands today before the world as a bright example of unshaken valor and confidence.

The principle that has lifted the smaller nation out of the ruins and ashes, and the one that will avail to disentangle this land, is on the surface easily discernible by any eye. It is the principle of hard, unflinching work. Belgium's remarkable recovery entirely is due to the fact that her people have taken this truth into their hearts. They have worked indefatigably, enjoyed it, and the power of co-ordinated energy. They realized at the outset that they had no time for strikes, for interminable hickering over short hours, less work and more pay. By reason of this admirable attitude they have succeeded. And by reason of utter lack of it America has failed where Belgium has gained. Just as soon as this nation adopts the same point of view, remembers that not hundreds, but millions of persons abide in this land, just that soon, and not before, will America rise to equal rank with Belgium in the forces of reconstruction and advance.

It remains for every one to get under the burden and lift mightily, lift together. Then the future will turn a cheery face to all.

Will the Nation Hear?

A cry for help rings throughout the nation from the vast agricultural regions. While industrialists are meeting in national assembly, assuming to dictate the nation's policy, the farmers are struggling for wages and fewer hours of toil, praying of liberty while weaving the cord with which to throttle it. American farmers are striving with desperation to care for the crops upon which the nation must depend for food.

There are not, under present conditions enough hours in the day to enable farmers to get this vital work done. Farm labor at this hour is 12 per cent less than in 1918, and 25 per cent less than before the war. Let the men of the mills and the mines, the shops and the railroads pause for a moment in consideration of this ominous fact—Let the idlers in the cities the dupes of strikes, consider that the filling of the nation's bread basket has a meaning for them. The farmers are cutting wheat today in Oklahoma, and in two months they will be cutting wheat in Western Canada. This is the most vital section of the year to the nation and the world.

The farmers are not howling for shorter hours; they are pleading for help. Out in Illinois the farmers are working 15 to 20 hours daily; they are turning night in to day by the aid of search-lights, and fighting desperately to save the crops by working harder than galley slaves. Tractors are running on many of these farms every hour of the twenty-four. The struggle is an epic battle. Meanwhile transportation is tied up, freight rates are advancing, men by tens of thousands in the cities are milling and quarreling over the matter of wages and hours, alleged "inequalities" and "unlabeled rights of slavery."

If the nation fails to hear and heed this widespread cry from the farms, all business, all industry must suffer. The fight to keep America's border filled is of greater importance than the multiple earnings overseas, than political campaigns, and the battles between labor and capital.

American Trade.

Enquirer

This week on the most distinguished expert writers in America, editors in the world, sear at the idea of anything approaching a condition of panic, proximity remote, in this country, and nothing but gratifying promise in the international trade situation. Along with this optimistic view we must contrast the "warning" of the American Chamber of Commerce last week.

We are told by this body that European buyers are avoiding American goods when they can get others. The statement is emphasized in the Weekly Export Bulletin, which holds that every factor favorable to laying the foundations of permanent great exports is present with the exception of one.

Credit—the open sesame! The business of the world is done on credit, must always be done on credit. The report says the American buyer finds itself almost entirely without the credit necessary to finance exports. It peremptorily dismisses the efficiency of the Edge bill and the War Finance Act, and declares agencies of negligible importance. It charges the banks with inability to supply all the loans demanded for domestic business calls at attention to the depreciation of European exchange and the consequent restrictions of the purchasing power of this country.

But we incline to the belief that the volume of the export expert financial writer are nearer the truth. The future of American trade in Europe should be a bright future. Whether it is so, or not will depend, we think upon the intelligence and willing co-operation of American merchants in the work of adjusting the exchange balance. And when has the American business man failed to meet critical conditions?

JUDGE DIRECTS INQUIRY

Into Looting of Freight Cars At Danville, Ky.

Danville, Ky., June 21. — Since March 3 last goods worth more than $100,000 have been stolen from freight cars in the Danville yards and vicinity. Judge George W. Coulter is conducting an inquiry and it is said that between 25 and 50 men and boys will be indicted in the robbery. According to officials sufficient evidence has been obtained to warrant the arrest of a large number of suspects.

Detectives J. A. Coleman, J. E. Wallin and S. S. Morrow, who are brother of Governor Edwin P. Morrow, have been working on the case since the first car was broken into and robbed, but the robbers by a system of signals warned one another of the approach of officers at night and avoided capture.

A member of the gang would enter a car at night and when the train pulled out of town goods were thrown out along the track. Later confederates in trucks and automobiles hauled the goods away.

A car load of sugar was stolen. Cigarettes, shoes, brooms, raincoats, silk shirts and various other articles were included in the loot.

John C. Miller, of Walton; Dr. J. O. Slater and wife, Charles A. Slater and wife, and Dr. L. E. Boone and wife of Lindlow, form a gay outfit party that are enjoying a magnificent time fishing in Michigan lakes. They will be gone several weeks.

Christians and Sport.

Enquirer

The four-faced days are passing the gloomy Puritan is receding into the historical shadowland; beauty and buoyancy, mirth and melody no longer are unknown.

In America what we understand as sport became a healthful part of the national life; it has developed logically and rationally along with wider, fuller and more comprehensive advancement in science, literature, art and education. Mental and physical culture now are intimately related. Play is an important factor in the life scheme. But this development has not been accomplished without opposition. The dance, the horse race, the boxing contest still are taboo in the eyes of "the rigidly righteous." But sanity and sense, a broader and more worthy conception of purity, human cleanliness, honesty, moral and physical health are relegating the "conventional objections to the rearward column of civilization's triumphal, irresistible march toward ever higher life conditions.

Corroborative of this view are the statements this week of three distinguished Boston clergymen. A Methodist minister says: "A man who plays base ball, golf, tennis or any other sport is a better citizen than one who stays at home and spends his time reading."

A Congregationalist affirms: "A Christian can not only be a sport—he ought to be one."

Another pastor declares: "Sport leads to fairness and fair play. Therefore sport and Christianity go hand in hand."

There is no reason why they should not. Sportsmanship is an American institution. The frothy zealotry or the soft inefficiency of the Rollo boy never will affect sports appeal to youth and vital adulthood. So dance, row, play ball, box, enjoy a real thrill when a royal-blooded horse sweeps victor under the wire. Play until the Old Gentleman of the Hour Glass calls the end of the game.

DROP IN WOOL PRICES

Results in Conference To Devise Relief Measures For Growers.

Washington, June 21.—Immediate relief for the wool-producing industry was urged before the Federal Reserve Board today by representatives of several wool growers' and dealers' associations, as well as by manufacturers and bank.

The sudden drop in the price of wool, May 20, from 65¢ to about 20¢ a pound, with no buyers even at that figure, has caused a crisis which threatens heavy losses to producers, the board was told.

Cessation of purchasing by the public in protest against the high cost of clothing was cited as the immediate cause of the drop in wool prices, manufacturers immediately cancelling orders for raw stocks to offset the curtailment of their own sales.

Senators King and Smoot, of Utah; Kollogg, of Minnesota, and Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, were present at the conference and advocated a credit plan which would enable banks to assist wool producers over the present emergency.

St. Louis, June 21.—Wool growers of Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky and Indiana, at a meeting here today were advised to hold their wool at higher prices as offered Grease wool; it was quoted out, at present is quoted around 35 cents a pound, as compared with 70 cents a year ago.

Weeds are growing rapidly and too much wet weather will make them very troublesome in a short time.

America's Decoration

Day in France.

Louisville Evening Post.

In a recent issue of Le Matin published in Paris by Stephano Lauzanne, an article appeared concerning the celebration of America's Decoration Day, May 30, in France. In this article occurred the following paragraphs:

Letters come to us from America, from fathers and mothers who have left a dear one forever in France. These letters ask: "You will not forget Decoration Day over there?" We answer: "No, American mothers and fathers, we will not forget Decoration Day. It will be observed here as it is on your side of the ocean. There will not be an American grave in France that will not be decorated with flowers, even if only simple flowers of the fields. There will be even more than flowers on those graves—there will be the loving, warm, grateful remembrance of all France, going out to the mothers and fathers of America, and bending tenderly over those who sleep their last sleep in our ground."

No, we shall not forget. For my part, I shall always remember that October evening when I passed through a little Kentucky city. For the first time in the war an American battalion had been in battle, and there had been heavy losses. Among the killed was a young man whose parents lived in this same city. I made it my duty as a Frenchman to go and offer my sympathy to the father.

The scene rises in my memory. A little cottage with a garden, and an old man sitting on the porch looking calmly and gently into my eyes. At my first words he stopped me: "Don't speak of grief! I am not sad. I am only proud. My son has died for France. Millions of others will take his place."

Millions of others will take his place! What a proud, strong thought! It is such thoughts that have made you, friends of America, the great people that you are. But we have our thoughts too. I never realized it so much as recently when the mayor of San Quentin took me to see the cemeteries that surround that ravaged, tortured city. We saw the old cemetery that was profaned by the enemy, and the German cemetery with its heavy monument designed by the Kaiser, and the military cemetery where rest side by side the allied soldiers who fell for the cause of right. American graves were there—over each floated a tiny stars and stripes. The mayor said:

"The Americans will never know how much they meant to us. It is not the material help they gave us so much as the moral support. At the front and behind the front, in the zone of destruction and further back, when we saw those big, laughing, self-confident boys, it was like a sunbeam thru our fog. They brought back to us the love of life and the love of strife. They taught us how to smile again."

There is a thought of joy and gentleness. Those are our thoughts and they have made us the people that we are—a people whose heart is easily won, easily lost. Surely the French and the Americans are not alike, and no doubt we do not always understand each other. But there is something that will always bind us together, something that neither time nor difference of temperament will ever take away; those little graves, alongside our great graves—those little graves on which every Decoration Day we will lay the flower of a great memory.

This is a long quotation, but every word of it is eloquent. The friendship of France and the U. S. has been traditional. Trouble mongers must not be allowed to mar it. It is a friendship unique among nations—a friendship in which sacrifice rather than national ambition has been the dominant element. The article we have quoted above shows that in France the gratitude aroused by our participation in the war has not abated. And France should know that, however much differences of opinion may lead to fervid argument, the friendship for France will remain.

What About Liberty Bonds?

Enquirer.

Strengthening of the market for Liberty Bonds is attracting much attention to these issues. The reason for this stability, unusual in view of the late uncertainties, is not clear. Bankers, even, are not unanimous in their explanations. The only evident thing is that selling is less urgent, demand more so, and that prices are stronger.

For several months these securities have been selling on a basis to yield exceedingly high returns to investors. Last week Victory 4½s sold to yield 6½ per cent. No doubt many of these bonds were sacrificed to protect stock market commitments, and others to secure funds for industrial operations where deflationary measures of the Federal reserve banks produced restriction of credits. Conversely, the present relaxation of the money market and the curtailment of operations in the stock market naturally should affect Liberty bonds favorably.

There are no evidences, and have been none for some time, that the Government is supporting the Liberty bond market. On the contrary, the successive advances of the redoubt of the Federal banks would be expected to operate adversely on Government issues of all kinds. And yet, late buying of these issues has seemed to be in disregard of the higher discount rate, and points to some other influence.

It is likely that the dominant reason for the better market for Liberty bonds is to be found in the near approach of the date July 1, on which the 2½ per cent sinking fund may become operative. This is a provision of law under which there may be created a fund for the open market purchase of Liberty bonds by the United States Treasury. Such purchases, particularly if on a liberal scale, should greatly stabilize the market. Therefore, it is probable that well-informed investors realize that present opportunities for buying Liberty bonds on a large yield basis soon may pass, and that a more stable market at a higher level will follow whatever action the Treasury may take under this provision for a Liberty bond sinking fund.

The National Democratic Convention is in session in San Francisco this week, and it is to be seen if it will be as industrious at dodging issues as was the Republican convention at Chicago.

Local Happenings.

A fine Collie dog belonging to William Craddock, who lives on Geo. Kroylich's farm out on the Petersburg pike went mad one day last week, but was killed before it bit any person or stock. Mrs. Craddock's son had gone for the cows when the dog was seen to have a fit after which it acted very strangely. The boy hastened back home and told how the dog was acting and Mr. Craddock knew what the trouble was but before he could get his gun the dog had returned to the house and was running through closed screen doors as though they were made of thin paper. Following several minutes intense excitement at the house Mr. Craddock succeeded in getting a crack at the dog with his gun and killed it. He says he would rather have lost a horse as the dog was so valuable about the farm.

Last week's weather was very favorable for transplanting tobacco and practically the entire crop was set out and has started off growing nicely. Many growers were not only getting their crops set out but were able to get them plowed over. The young plants have started off unusually well. Grant county acreage this year is unusually heavy. Judging from appearances the crop is one of the largest ever set out in this county. An estimate of 600 acres for the county would probably not be too large. This is fully 50 per cent heavier than the average acreage of the county.—News.

BASE BALL.

Petersburg Walloped Burlington 10 to 2.

Bellevue Defeats Big Bone 5 to 4.

Verona Takes Hebron's Scalp 11 to 2.

Burlington's ball team went to Petersburg last Saturday afternoon where it went down in defeat to the tune of 10 to 2. Petersburg gave Burlington a chance to score in the first inning by passing the first man up, but he could not be put over. In the second inning Burlington scored one run under the same conditions. In the third inning, Beemon went out on a fly to Mathews, Acra taking second on the throw in. Corner made a hit and Acra scored. Nothing more was doing until the fifth when Kelly got first on Klapp's error, and scored when Mont Slayback made a two bagger. This ended the scoring so far as Burlington was concerned. McWehty, the first man up for Petersburg, made a single in the first inning. The ball was muffed in center field. The next three men were put out but the first three batters had scored and the game was securely sewed up. Just to keep up the fun Petersburg scored one run in the second, third and seventh innings, but the big doings came in the eighth inning, when on a base on balls to Keim, a two bagger by Snelling, errors at first and in the left field and a single by Mathews, Petersburg scored four runs. If Petersburg had batted in the ninth inning there is no telling how many runs would have been scored, as the team seemed to be getting down to real ball playing.

Following is the score by innings: Petersburg 3 11 0 0 0 1 4 x—10 Burlington 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 2 Base hits—Mont Slayback, Corner 2; Keim, White, 2; Mathews, 2. Two base hits—Mont Slayback, Elbert Slayback, Snelling. Three base hits—Elbert Slayback 2. Errors—Burlington 3, Petersburg 2.

Struck out—Huey 10, Snelling 5. Base on balls—Huey 2, Snelling 2.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Mont Slayback could not withstand the temptation to get into the game and he was behind the bat last Saturday with his regular old pep.

The Petersburg team puts up a good strong game at all points, and that is what Burlington can not do with its present lineup.

Elbert Slayback was there with his bat last Saturday and also put up his usual star game at short. Nine like him would be invincible.

Burlington and Petersburg will play again at Petersburg next Monday afternoon.

Verona defeated Hebron at Verona 11 to 2 last Saturday afternoon.

Verona will play Burlington next Saturday afternoon at Burlington. The score of their last game was 5 to 4 in favor of Verona.

Verona and Walton have a series of five games to play, the first of which will be played at Verona next Monday morning and the second at Walton in the afternoon.

The Bellevue and Big Bone game went eleven innings at Bellevue last Saturday afternoon, the score being five to four in favor of Bellevue.

Securities Found in a Ditch.

Securities estimated to be worth several thousand dollars, stolen from the Tobacco Growers Bank & Trust Co., of Crittenden, Grant county, on the night of June 17th, 1919, were found in a ditch near Covington, last Saturday afternoon. The lost recovered include bank notes, insurance policies, liberty bonds, deeds for property and the wills of prominent farmers in the vicinity of Crittenden. They were tied in a typewriter cover taken from the Crittenden bank, and were lying about fifty feet from the road. The detectives working on the case expect to recover other property belonging to the bank.

Doing the Farming Act.

County Attorney B. H. Riley was circulating a petition in Burlington one day the past week securing signatures protesting against the pardoning of Henry Kruse, C. B. Schenberg and Henry Feltman, who, several months ago were sentenced to the U. S. Court at Covington for disloyalty to the country during the war with Germany. About everyone to whom the petition was presented signed it. It is said the President will be appealed to pardon these men.

Ancients Did Good Work.

Montezuma's well, a natural lake fed by artesian flow at Camp Verde, Arizona, which has been offered for sale to the federal government, is one of the geological features of that neighborhood. Surrounded, as it is, by high natural walls, it seems from a distance to be in excess of 600 feet. The outside of these walls was pierced in a prehistoric age by cliff-dwellers. The well is a great spring and has been used for irrigation purposes for many years. Its depth has never been absolutely ascertained, but is known to be in excess of 600 feet. The water is highly charged with lime, and moss removed from the inside walls and exposed to the air soon petrifies, making the water clearly discernible in the composition. That the "well" supplied the original, and now unobtainable, inhabitants of the valley with water for domestic and agricultural purposes is established by the tracing of a system of irrigation ditches, which, according to geologists, must have been constructed more than a thousand years ago. The water they carried deposited lime along the entire system, and the result was that the well, as we see it, is a solid mass of stone, resembling concrete of this day. The walls of the ditches, in places, measure from three to five feet thick. The builders performed an engineering feat which could not be improved upon in this modern day.

ANOTHER SON OF BOONE COUNTY GONE

James D. Parker was Successful in Business and Lived to Ripe Old Age.

James D. Parker was born in the Gasburg community in this county on August 30, 1848. The Parker family had been settling in that part of Boone county in 1793. He was married Nov. 25, 1863 to Abigail Steedman in Aurora, Indiana. On Feb. 17, 1888 his wife died, and on June 11th inst. he followed into the Great Beyond. Three children, all of whom survive, were born to him. His wife, Mrs. Julia Foster, whose husband was well known in this county; Mrs. Fanny Terrill, widow of Dr. Luther Terrill and Frank F. Terrill, all of whom have made their home for some time in California, where Captain Parker died. The body was cremated in Los Angeles, Cal. and the ashes sent to Spring Grove Cemetery where his wife was buried.

Up until about twelve years ago Captain Parker lived in Avondale and was a very active business man of Cincinnati. He was at one time the largest stockholder in the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Co. In 1886 he was Vice President of the Third National Bank and the following year he was made President of the bank. Little of Captain Parker's title as Captain. His estate is estimated to be worth from two to four hundred thousand dollars. He was a man of many requests to his sister Mrs. Louise Berkshire, of Petersburg, and to his brothers, Richard and Elijah, of the same place, to his brother-in-law, who is now dead and the Parker farm to Mrs. Elijah Parker and her heirs. These gifts were made in addition to what he gave to his children. Captain Parker was of the type of the old Kentuckian. One of the most polite men we ever knew. Even after weakness came upon him and he lost much of his mental faculty he was exceedingly polite and gentlemanly. In late years Boone county people have known a little of Captain Parker, but he always remembered his playmates and incidents of our county. In politics he was an ardent Democrat. He was a generous man and was thrown with men of the other parties but when politics was mentioned Captain Parker was a Democrat. He has left his children in good circumstances and more than that he has left them a heritage in an honored name of a successful man.

Putting Machinery in Order.

Farmers began putting their harvesting machinery in order at about the same time last week. The new ones are full of white-top but they will be cut closely on account of the high price of feed. Alfalfa is yielding very nicely, and oats promise a good crop while wheat will make a very much better yield than was figured on a few weeks ago. All the farmers are in a favorable position for harvesting and cleaning out their tobacco and corn fields.

Seven Are Found Guilty in Whiskey Theft Case—Jury Disagrees as to Other Two.

After several hours of deliberation the jury which heard the evidence in United States District Court at Covington, last week on indictments returned against ten Covington men who were accused by the Government of having removed, and of conspiracy in the removal of 15 barrels of whisky from a Government Warehouse at Latonia, on January 31 last, returned its verdict. It was unable to agree on the guilt or innocence of E. E. Black, Commissioner of Public Safety and Chief of Police of Covington, and Logan Goodson, Covington detective.

The jurors returned a verdict of guilty against R. E. Goodnoh, former Field Agent of the Internal Revenue Department, and six other men under indictment. Goodnoh, Harry F. Donnelly, Covington undertaker; J. J. Geisen, former Covington saloon keeper; Richard Edmonds, Expressman, and William Sloner and Rossman, two of the defendants, each was held to be guilty on all three counts in each of the two indictments.

James J. Gates, proprietor of a small dairy on Laurel street, Covington, was held to be guilty on the second count in the first indictment and the third count in the second indictment, which charged him of having concealed the liquor. Testimony of witnesses was given to the effect the whisky was removed from barrels to jugs in Gates house, after Alexander Skilken, fruit dealer, of Dayton, Ohio, had purchased it. Gates was held to be guilty of having concealed the liquor. Property Valuation.

The tax decision of the State Tax Commission raises the assessment from 85 to 90 per cent of a fair cash value will increase the tax rate and the amount of tax. The commission has decided that the value of property should be assessed at 90 per cent of its fair cash value. This decision will increase the tax rate and the amount of tax. The commission has decided that the value of property should be assessed at 90 per cent of its fair cash value.

The value of a piece of property is usually gauged by what the property would bring if put through the ordinary channels of trade. The value of realty has not changed hands for a considerable length of time, and is not to be put on the market, there is no way apparently to find its actual value. To say that similar property is worth a certain amount is not always a just way to arrive at a conclusion. Every piece of property stands on its own merit in the eyes of the holder as well as in the opinion of the purchaser.

Strikes it is not possible for an actual sale to fix definitely the value of a house. In a recent sale in Louisville a residence was sold for $7,500. The buyer refused within a few days to sell the house for $7,500, holding that he could not find a house which suited him as well for what was offered. The house was assessed at the sale price its valuation would be $7,500. If it were assessed at what was offered, its valuation would be $9,000. If it were assessed at what the owner would take for it the valuation might be $12,000.

The board of experts recommended that a valuation on real estate might be able to approximate actual valuation. But the findings of the board would be of little use if the experts' opinion since opinions differ valuations would be too high, or too low, according to the point of view.

The idea that property should be assessed 5 per cent closer to actual value may be good in theory. But the fact remains that it will be as hard to find the proper valuation for 90 per cent of actual value as it is to find the actual value of 85 per cent or 100 per cent.—Louisville Times.

Very Narrow Escape.

Omer Porter, who operates the county road roller, had a very narrow escape last Saturday as he was taking the roller from Walton to Richmond. He reached the point where the Dixie Highway crosses the L. & N. Railroad at the Walton tobacco warehouse, when he got off his engine and looked to see if a train was approaching, but discovered none. He mounted the engine again and started on his way, when he heard when Charles Westby, who was a short distance behind with the water wagon, heard a train coming and began yelling at Porter to stop. Porter, who heard him and reversed his engine, pulling it off the railroad just in time and far enough for a fast train to pass him. It was a very close call from a wreck that would have probably cost a large number of lives, and it was a narrow escape for Porter and Westby returned to their normal condition, their nerves having received a complete shaking up by the incident.

Rouse's Campaign.

Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, of Burlington, spent the first of the week in Falmouth and Pendleton county in the interest of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district, at the general primary election, on Saturday, August 7th. Congressman Rouse was enthusiastically received by his constituents in Pendleton. He has hundreds of personal friends in this county. During his ten years incumbency in office, Congressman Rouse has been very close to the masses, and has never failed to look after the best interests of the people. The county as a whole has been greatly benefited by his activities in Congress. Mr. Rouse is not appealing to the voters on a long line of curb-stone politicians, but goes direct to the masses himself and solicits their support. Being really on the farm, Mr. Rouse is justly popular with the country people.—Falmouth Outlook.

Congressman A. B. Rouse arrived here Wednesday and is spending a few days in the county this week scouting around among his constituents. That is where the big game will be made. Congressman Rouse seems to be quite well satisfied with the situation relative to his own campaign. He does not think that he is in any danger of defeat. He has served the Sixth District for the past twenty years. That is where the big game will be made. He has served the Sixth District for the past twenty years.

Arthur B. Rouse, candidate for Congress, has been making a swing around the county this week. He has been in the interest of his candidacy and reports things in fine shape. Mr. Rouse believes he will carry every vote in the district. The indications at present are that the severest opposition he will encounter is in Kenton county. That is where the big game will be made. Congressman Rouse seems to be quite well satisfied with the situation relative to his own campaign. He does not think that he is in any danger of defeat. He has served the Sixth District for the past twenty years.

It looks like he should carry the county almost solidly at this stage of the race and we can see no reason why there should be any change in the sentiment for the county prior to the election. At that it would be well for the Rouse supporters not to be lulled by over confidences into a false sense of security regarding the chances of their candidate. We have read the history of many candidates who were defeated by the over confidence of their friends—and, some times of themselves, as well. The danger of over confidence does not reside in the head, but in the heart. It is more votes for the other man, but that it will paint the situation in such hopeful, glowing colors that it will keep many voters at home because they think the whole matter is such a cinch it is not necessary for them to go to the trouble of going to the polls.—Warren Independent.

Oblique Reasoning.

To denounce regulation of strikes as an attempt to introduce slavery is merely an abuse of reason and words. The right to strike exists simply because it is tolerated by an over-zealous public. It must be made subject to restraint whenever found to be incompatible with the welfare of the people, to whom all rights are subordinate. It is not an act of wanton arbitrariness that led to the denunciation of strikes and to the provision of further safeguards against an abuse which menaces the foundations of property. When those to whom the safety of life and property is intrusted organized with the intent to desert their duty it was felt that society could not be maintained with such a danger hanging, like the sword of Damocles, over its head. The right to strike cannot be recognized in this instance.

The same revelation as to the dangerous character strikes might assume came through the attempt to block the traffic in the line of transportation. In a country of such immense extent, where most states are larger than whole European nations, and where food and raw materials must be transported many hundreds of miles, the right to suspend traffic at will would be a right to subject the nation to hardship, oppression and commercial death by those who maintain that to exercise such power is their inalienable, natural, God-given privilege.

A nation which agrees to such conditions truly may be said to have sold its soul to the devil. Being dependent for its opportunity to eat, to work and to live upon irresponsible rulers. There can be no freedom where such irresponsible power is not kept within bounds.

It is after foolishness to say that the President is making an attempt to introduce slavery.—Emquirer.

Why be jealous of Ohio—she has had no President since Taft—Los Angeles Times.

PROPERTY

In Kentucky Should be Assessed at Five Billion Dollars Says M. M. Logan.

"The total assessment of Kentucky is no more than fifty per cent of the actual value of the property and it should be raised to about five billion dollars."

The above was one of the statements of M. M. Logan, former chairman of the State Tax Commission in his speech before the meeting of the county tax commissioners held at Frankfort last week. He said under the new law the total assessment of Kentucky has been raised from a little more than ninety million dollars to two billion dollars.

"The value is raised to $5,000,000,000," he said, "the roads and schools of Kentucky can be properly financed."

In discussing the classification of property he said there was a marked difference between tangible and intangible. The latter is not property. While a $10,000 farm may be increased in value directly by good roads and good schools, a $10,000 bond or note or stock certificate is worth no more and no less by reason of expenditures on the part of the government. Consequently, it is the same rate of taxation as an equivalent amount of farm land or any other character of tangible property. It is carrying an unequal share of the burden, because it does not receive a commensurate benefit from the tax paid by both.

Again, he pointed out, intangible assets, such as notes and bonds, pay a fixed return in interest and have a relatively fixed value, while tangible property yields variable returns and is subject to increase and reductions in value for assessment to offset their earnings.

As to classification of raw material in process of manufacture and manufacturing machinery, he explained that these are put at a lower rate to encourage industry in Kentucky so that Kentucky's raw material may be converted into finished products. He said that the state, creating more wealth and bringing more people into the state to help share the burden of taxation, should be encouraged to produce the products of the farms. In other words, the law contemplates that by encouraging manufacturing all taxpayers of the state are benefited.

He said the county commissioners the compliment of saying that but for their efforts the work of the three years Kentucky would have been practically bankrupt.

He was applauded when he urged repeal of the act of 1918 requiring county tax commissioners to visit taxpayers in making assessments and again when he said commissioners instead of the county clerk should make the assessments and keep the tax records in their own offices.

The first step in exalting the county's position, he reminded them, was when the law required the fiscal courts to furnish them offices. Now, he said, the law requires the county clerk to keep an office, but makes them occur the bushes for taxpayers. The result is that whereas at the office of the county clerk, trained in justice and responsible for their performance, could make the assessments, now, it must be made by deputies, many of them incompetent.

Caught Robbing Bank.

Shelbyville, June 26.—A woman prevented robbery of the bank of Shelbyville when she fired her awakening citizens, it was disclosed Saturday.

A chisel, hammer, saw, drill and two sticks of dynamite were found near the main safe of the bank.

The combination had been knocked off and preparations were being made to drill into the safe.

The Future of the Republic.

George B. McLean, U. S. Senator from Connecticut, recently declared that the next 20 years will be the critical period in the life of this republic, and he urges the importance of the universities of the country to stress their efforts in making good and useful citizens.

The president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation has no misgivings. He says: "I am just as confident of the future as I ever was in the past. America has the fundamental principles for prosperity."

So most normal minds will face the future. We believe with Lincoln that this republic will live forever or die by its own hand. We believe that within two decades business and industry will be in harmony; that autocracy either will have become a rejected policy; that cooperation will replace antagonism; that fair play and justice will rule.

Dr. Gonsalus, of Chicago, also is of the optimists. His vision assures him that the entire world of tomorrow is going to be a better world.

In spite of war and conflicts (30 years are now in progress); in spite of bloodshed and devastation, the tomorrow of the world will be grander than that of yesterday or today.

All human progress has been made by the path of pain and all advance by atonement. But there surely must come a time when error, so-called, shall not seem to dominate the destinies of mortals; a time when love shall have healed all bleeding feet of earthly innumerable pilgrims.

So far as this republic is concerned, its foundation principles are indestructible. We shall compose all racial, industrial and political divisions. We have passed the period when the victories of might were determinative. "If," as Van Dyke has said, "right made might, this was the golden age." May not the reburnt of that splendid, dreamed of age illuminate the life of this republic and the nations of the world within the next two decades? The answer is on the knees of the gods, but we believe that within that period we may be in the way of winning the "long campaign."

Spirit of the Times.

In no other country of the world can be witnessed what now is transpiring in the U. S. One great convention has finished its labors, proposed its platform of principles; another is about to do likewise. All this is done peacefully, in order. No soldiers fence the deliberations of our national gatherings with bayonets. This is America. We are free. The mass of our people are inspired by the spirit of the times, which is Americanism. We shall make our free choice of men and issues, but whatever we do as citizens, back of that action are the compelling influences—loyalty, love of country, reverence for the Constitution.

More than ever, especially during the past several years, we have come to understand Americanism in a higher, nobler sense. We have more intimately realized the duty and necessity of taking care of America first; of preserving free speech, schools and seats of learning divorced from politics and created for supporting the majesty of the laws as interpreted by the Courts; of enlarging tolerance in matters of faith; of building an army and navy adequate to our needs of bringing capital and labor into closer relations of amity; of checking the tendency toward zealotry on the part of reformers who would replace the tolerance and liberty guaranteed by the Constitution with the bigotry of the ages of ignorance and cruelty. In a word, the Americanism of today means that love of country is akin to the love of God for flowers, the dew in the heart of roses, the dawns and sunsets, order, virtue in womanhood and the laughter of innocent children at play.

Body Cremated.

In compliance with his request the remains of Captain James D. Parker, who died at his home in Los Angeles, California, June 11th, were cremated and the ashes returned to Cincinnati and interred in Spring Grove cemetery by the side of those of his wife who has been dead several years. Capt. Parker's will was offered for probate in the Cincinnati Probate Court last week, and the estate was estimated at $175,000. Capt. Parker was a brother of Elijah and Richard Parker, of Petersburg. His wife was Miss Abigail Steadman, of Aurora.

Rogers-McGlasston

A Kentucky romance was disclosed last Thursday, June 24, when Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McGlasston announced the marriage of their daughter, Frances, to Mr. Ray Randolph Rogers, of the law firm of Lunnsford & Rogers of Covington, Ky. Mr. Rogers is a graduate of Lebanon University and studied law in law colleges of Indiana and Ohio State Universities. He taught school in this county several years. He is a veteran of the American Expeditionary Forces, having served with the famous 8th Regiment of the U. S. Marine Corps participating in the American offensive at Belleau Woods and Chateau Thierry, and was wounded during the second battle of the Marne, and being unfit for further service on the front was placed in the Court-martial Department at Paris, where he served until close of the war. Upon his return to the United States, he refused a discharge until he had assisted putting over the Victory Loan.

He and Miss McGlasston had planned their marriage when war broke out but their plans ended when he left for camp. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will reside at 22 "The Roslyn Apt." Clifton Heights, Cincinnati, Ohio. x x x

A Boone County Girl.

Miss Martha Elizabeth Williams, of Florence, who has officiated so efficiently for three terms in the capacity of president of the Y. W. C. A., at Eastern Normal, will be succeeded at the close of the present term by Miss Maude Teaster and Miss Mildred Long, newly elected officers for the organization. Miss Teaster will officiate during the summer term, and Miss Long will take up the work of the regular yearly term.

Miss Williams, who is a graduate this year, will return to her home in Florence in the near future. Her work during her extended reign at the head of the Y. W. C. A., has been one of the chief factors in placing the task upon a more solid foundation, the establishment of more system and the introduction of a number of improvements in the work generally. Miss Williams is recognized as a tireless worker, and the responsibilities of the office have been met in a most creditable manner, as well as those of the courses she has mastered, and her departure from the school will be regrettable. Since she had charge of the work much has been accomplished along various lines. She is recognized as a leader, and one of the best and most important matters of her origin and promotion, will be the establishment of an independent constitution, something never before in existence here. Hereafter the operation of the department has been along regular lines followed here and there. Now, it is her intention to draft a constitution along new and original lines, embracing additional and more important work, and to follow this closely. This measure is now here, as well as elsewhere, and its importance will soon be recognized. It is said, since the plans under promulgation are said to be very beneficial. x

CARROLL COUNTY.

The wheat crop has come out wonderfully within the past week. Many a field that barely escaped being plowed under bid fair to make a fine yield, the stalks stand thinly on the ground.

Every farmer has had a rare opportunity of getting out a big acreage in tobacco, and as reports come in from nearly every section of Carroll county, an increased acreage over last year; and with reasonable conditions favor there will be a bumper tobacco crop. Many acres have been planted in this line and we are fearful that the same conditions that existed last year as regards low prices will again confront the growers this winter.

MEAT SCRAP IS EGG-LAYING AID

Result of Recent Experiments Conducted by the Department of Agriculture.

NORMAL CONDITIONS GIVEN

Average Farmer Feeds Very Little Animal Protein Feed of Any Kind—Milk Products or Fish Also Are Favored.

Hens given meat, fish, or milk products in their diet will lay from 38 to 66 per cent more eggs than those which have only grain food and what bugs and worms they can pick up on free range; recent experiments made by the United States department of agriculture show.

The birds used in the experiments were given conditions as nearly like those on a normal farm as possible. The experiments were repeated under different conditions and in different years to avoid, as far as possible, any error due to the varied characteristics of the birds.

Little Animal Protein Feed. The average farmer feeds very little meat, fish, or animal protein feed of any kind to his poultry, and consequently gets few eggs during the late fall and winter when eggs are selling at the highest prices.

In the experiments conducted on the government poultry farm, pens of pullets on free range were fed a mash of corn meal, bran, and middlings and a scratch mixture of wheat, oats, and corn. This is greater variety of grains than is used by many farmers. In addition the birds had absolutely free range on land where bugs, green feed, and worms were plentiful. Other pens were given the same ration, with 1 pound of commercial meat scrap added to every 4 pounds of mash.

Results Obtained. The pullets without the meat scrap laid only 90 eggs apiece (which is more eggs per hen than the average farm flock lays), while those receiving meat scrap averaged from 125 to 150 eggs apiece.

Meat scrap is not produced on most farms, and has to be bought at a higher price than grain. It produces eggs, though, several cents a dozen cheaper than where no middlings are used. Milk products or fish give as good results as meat in increasing egg production.

REDUCE COST IN MARKETING

Price Margin Between Producer and Consumer Can Be Cut by Working Together.

A. D. Wilson, chief of the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota, holds that the price margin between the producer and consumer can be cut down if the producers in every community will work together sufficiently to produce a standard product of good quality and in quantities large enough to let it be marketed in car lots. "Improvement in marketing," he says, "must be along the line of reducing the labor and expense required in getting the products from the farm to the consumer. One of the things which tends to reduce this cost is to have produced in a community a large quantity of a uniform product." The marketing of co-operative creamery butter is cited by Mr. Wilson as an illuminating illustration of the truth of his premises.

GEESSE ARE QUITE PECULIAR

Fowls Are Partial to Their Mates and It Is Not Best to Separate Them Each Year.

Unlike other farm poultry, geese are partial to their mates and it is best not to try to separate them each year. An old gander is not a good breeder and he ought not to be kept more than three or four years. On the other hand, the older females lay more eggs than do young ones and as a rule the eggs are more fertile. Females may be kept for eight or ten years or even longer.

FEED FOR FINISHING SHOATS

Whey Fed With Barley or Corn Is Excellent—Pigs on Trial Made Big Gains.

Whey fed with barley or corn makes an excellent feed for finishing weanling pigs. Pigs fed on trial made a gain of 150 pounds on only 35.3 pounds of barley and 85.4 pounds of corn.

POULTRY FACTS

PRODUCTION OF DUCKS' EGGS

Demand at Good Prices Is Limited Except Around Easter—Indian Runner Is Favored.

The demand for ducks' eggs at a good price is limited and not nearly as general as the demand for hens' eggs. The quality of the Southern and Western duck eggs on the average market was poor until people began to keep Indian Runner ducks and to build up a trade in first-class eggs. A good demand for ducks' eggs exists about Easter time at prices usually several cents a dozen higher than for hens' eggs. Most buyers make no quotations for ducks' eggs except early in the spring. Since three ducks' eggs weigh about the same as four hens' eggs, ducks are not as profitable for the production of market eggs as fowls, unless a higher price is secured for the ducks' eggs.

A trade is gradually being established in some markets for fancy near-by ducks' eggs, which bring higher prices than hens' eggs, and the demand seems to be increasing. Pure white eggs are preferred and usually bring the highest price. These eggs should be marketed frequently, as they depreciate in quality more rapidly than hens' eggs, especially during hot weather. The market for eggs must be carefully investigated by those who intend to raise breeds of the early-laying type of ducks, such as the Indian Runner, especially for the production of eggs, say poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

PROVIDE FOWLS CLEAN FEED

Carelessness on Part of Poultryman in Cleaning Utensils Will Cause Much Trouble.

Fowls that are fed grain are pretty sure to receive pure feed, as all one has to watch is to make sure the grains are sweet and clean, and not moldy or decayed. However, it is seldom advisable to make grain the sole ration of the poultry.

Soft feeds (or mashes) will have to be fed to some extent and troughs must be used for the kind of feed. Where the residue is left to sour, the fowls will show the effects in time. Fermented feeds do not appear to be readily digested by poultry and may also spread disease germs.

Carelessness in the matter of cleaning the troughs has brought disaster to many a poultryman. The same thing is true of the drinking vessels. It requires only a little effort to have the feeding and watering vessels always clean, and it certainly is the thing to do.

PLENTY OF RANGE ESSENTIAL

Discouraging Results Have Come From Attempting to Raise Turkeys Under Confinement.

Given plenty of range, turkeys will rustle for grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation, weed and grass seed, waste grain, waste nuts, and convert them into delicious meat at a minimum expense. Plenty of range is essential to success in turkey raising, and usually the discouraging results have come from attempts to raise the fowls under close confinement.

Be sure chicks do not become crowded.

Ship or deliver eggs twice or three times weekly.

Market white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in separate packages.

Overgrown fowls are no better in any particular than those of normal size.

Cull the flock so as to eliminate the early mottled and other unprofitable producers.

The important thing in getting started in turkey raising is to be careful to get healthy stock.

Uniform poultry products command the best prices. Pure bred fowls produce uniform products.

When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer, insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.

POULTRY FACTS

BEST FEED FOR LAYING HENS

Composition of Ration Rather Than Method of Feeding Influences Egg Production.

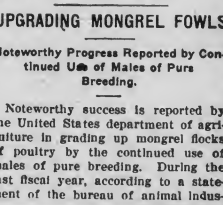

Experiments in the methods of feeding laying hens show that the composition of the ration rather than the method of feeding has the greater influence upon egg production. The tests were made at the Ohio experiment station.

Rations for laying hens should contain from 10 to 12 per cent of meat scrap or a good grade of digested tankage, or their equivalent in skim milk.

The wet mash has some disadvantages, it is found, as it requires some time each day to prepare and give the mash and may cause digestive disturbances in the fowls if too much is fed. A satisfactory ration consists in feeding a grain mixture of corn, three parts; oats, one part, by weight, and for the dry mash ration, ground corn seven parts, bran 3 parts, meat scrap five parts. About twice as much grain as mash should be consumed.

Upgrading mongrel fowls is a noteworthy progress reported by continued use of Males of Pure Breeding.

Noteworthy success is reported by the United States department of agriculture in grading up mongrel flocks of poultry by the continued use of males of pure breeding. During the last fiscal year, according to a statement of the bureau of animal industry, the third generation of Barred Plymouth Rock grades showed marked uniformity in color and type, and White Plymouth Rock grades showed much improvement, but did not all come pure white in color. In both kinds of grades individuals occurred which so closely resembled stock of pure breeding that it was impossible to tell the difference by their appearance.

PRESERVING EGGS IN BRINE

Good After Eight Months If Simple Measures Are Taken—Lime Good as Water Glass.

Eggs laid during April and May are of better quality for preserving than are those laid later in the summer. One pound of air slaked lime added to a cooled, boiled water is equally as good a preservative for eggs as water glass.

Only clean, fresh eggs with sound shells should be "put down." Use an earthen jar. Stir the lime thoroughly into the water and drop the eggs in as gathered. Some lime settles to the bottom of the jar but does no harm. Two or three inches of the solution should cover the eggs to allow for evaporation. Keep in a cool place, preferably in a cellar.

Eggs preserved by this method may be safely kept for eight months. When ready for use, remove only the eggs that are necessary.

CARE FOR CONFINED CHICKS

Much Greater Attention Needed Along All Lines Than Those Given Free Range.

Growing chicks that are kept closely confined need much greater attention along all lines than those that have range. See that they have plenty of green feeds that have not wilted down to almost the decaying point and that the yards are kept sweet. Culling also is more essential when chicks are closely confined.

DO NOT MAKE GOOD MOTHERS

Best to Use Incubators and Brooders With Leghorns, Minorcas and Similar Breeds.

Leghorns, Minorcas, and similar breeds, while having many qualities to recommend them, do not make satisfactory mothers and the work of hatching and brooding the chicks may be done more satisfactorily with incubators and brooders.

HANDS, ARMS,

And Was Run-Down, Weak and Nervous, Says Florida Lady.

Five Bottles of Cardui

Made Her Well.

Kathleen, Fla.—Mrs. Dallas Prine of this place, says: "After the birth of my last child...I got very much run-down and weakened, so much that I could hardly do anything at all. I was so awfully nervous that I could scarcely endure the least noise. My condition was getting worse all the time."

I knew I must have some relief or I would soon be in the bed and in a serious condition for I felt so badly and was so nervous and weak I could hardly live. My husband asked Dr. about my taking Cardui. He said, "It's a good medicine, and good for that trouble," so he got me 5 bottles. After about the second bottle I felt greatly improved. Before taking it my limbs and hands and arms would go to sleep. After taking it, however, this poor circulation disappeared. My strength came back to me and I was soon on the road to health. After the use of about 5 bottles I could do all my house-work and attend to my six children besides."

You can feel safe in giving Cardui a thorough trial for your troubles. It contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs, but is composed of mild, vegetable, medicinal ingredients with no bad after-effects. Thousands of women have voluntarily written, telling of the good Cardui has done for them. It should help you, too. Try it.

HIGH-CLASS HORSES NEEDED

No Provision Made for Future by Many Farmers Who Are Using Up Their Work Stock.

The thing most needed in the production of work horses for American farms is greater care in the selection of the stallion and the brood mare, say animal husbandry experts of the United States department of agriculture, who have been studying the present situation with respect to horses. Not only was there a net decrease of approximately $78,000 in the number of horses on farms on January 1, compared with a year ago, but the experts are of the opinion that there has been an even more marked decrease in the number of mares bred during 1919. The extent of this decrease cannot be accurately determined until the crop of 1920 is estimated. However, if the decline in breeding is as great as conditions now indicate, the country will be confronted with a seriously depleted supply of good horses within the next few years.

Many farmers are using up their work stock without making any provision for the future. Such a policy is short-sighted and will have serious results, according to department of agriculture representatives. The present need is to increase the percentage of efficient horses by careful selection of parents. One of the principal factors from which the market is suffering is the breeding of too many low-grade work animals. There is a strong demand for high-class horses, at good prices, the department says.

Tuberculosis ravages big. Information shows that 59,547 carcasses of cattle were condemned on inspection. Tuberculosis was responsible for the condemnation of more cattle, slaughtered under federal meat inspection last year, than all other diseases combined. Information from the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, shows that 59,547 carcasses of cattle were condemned on post-mortem inspection and of that number 37,600 were the result of tuberculosis. In addition 53,652 parts of cattle carcasses were condemned for the same cause. The bureau points out that tuberculosis in cattle and hog cholera in swine are the two most serious contagious diseases affecting meat animals, and there is evidence that a heavy loss occurs on farms in addition to condemnations at establishments where government inspection is maintained. The department of agriculture is prepared to give information on the best methods of reducing the losses.

MORE HOGS WERE IMMUNIZED

Chief Purpose of Immunization Is to Permit Reshipment to Farms and Feed Yards.

An outstanding feature of federal activities for the control of hog cholera during the last year was the great increase in the number of swine immunized so that they might be distributed from public stockyards for purposes other than slaughter. The last report of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, gives the number of feed hogs immunized as 614,673. This is a large increase over the preceding year. The chief purpose of the immunization and inoculation is to permit reshipment to farms and feeding yards for further growth or fattening without danger to herds in which they are introduced.

SHEEP DOGS IN QUARANTINE

Examination Showed Many of Imported Animals Were Infested With Various Parasites.

Because of the danger to live stock, especially sheep, of the gird tapeworm, imported sheep dogs are subjected to federal quarantine. Sheep dogs have been found to harbor that parasite. During the last fiscal year representatives of the United States department of agriculture examined 131 imported sheep dogs for the presence of parasites transmitted to live stock, and 69 were found to be infested with parasites of various kinds. Twenty-two showed the presence of tapeworms, and one of the tapeworms was found to be infested with a parasite which is dangerous to the health of the dog.

IMPROVE QUALITY OF STOCK

Tennessee Department of Agriculture Urges Breeders to Join Better Sires Crusade.

"Better sires—better stock. A nation-wide crusade to improve the quality of cattle, horses, mules, swine, sheep, goats, and poultry in the United States.

"Every Tennesseean who believes in better live stock should join this movement, begun by the United States department of agriculture."

That is the first thing seen by the readers of the current issue of the Monthly Bulletin of the Tennessee department of agriculture.

"It means greater success in live-stock production and consequently greater prosperity for the people."

"Good-bred stock will outsell the scrub every time."

"If you want better stock consult the county agent in your own county or else write to the division of extension, Knoxville, Tenn."

"Now is the time to put Tennessee on the live-stock map."

"If you believe in better live stock and poultry join this movement. Tennessee has natural advantages for wonderful live-stock development, but the 'better sires' crusade will do much to hurry along this development."

PUBLIC ROADS

TO JOIN WORLD'S CONGRESS

Secretary Meredith Favors Acceptance of Invitation of International Association.

That the United States should accept the invitation of foreign countries to join the Permanent International Association of Road Congresses is the recommendation of the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials to the secretary of agriculture.

The committee, which held a two-days' conference in Washington, D. C., considered at the suggestion of Secretary Meredith, the invitation to the United States which had been received through the state department from the American consul general at Paris. Secretary Meredith concurred in the action of the highway officials and told them he would recommend to the state department that congress be asked to authorize acceptance. The highway officials also recommended that the international association be invited to the United States for its next meeting.

In advising the secretary of the action of the state highway officials, Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, who is also a member of the executive committee, said that the United States is the only civilized nation not now a member of the international association. He saw many advantages in the United States becoming a member, and he believed the other nations in the association would welcome an invitation to meet in this country next year.

The roads congress, he said, constituted an international tribunal for bringing together the best experience of the world. It is a place where the best ideas of the world are brought together and where the best experience of the world is shared.

HOW CHINAMEN

LOOK ON CUSTOMS OF THE BEST OF THE WORLD.—A Chinese is variously observed as an object of curiosity or an object of universal sympathy, because his skin is yellow and he hails from the dark and mystical East, and he is just "nothingness" to others who claim to be neutral.

But, among newcomers, the Chinese is as equal; the Chinese is as good as an American, the American as good as the Chinese, and, strange to say, this attitude is quite often honest.

Wrote "The L. I." in the Far Eastern Republic. Yet, still, there are some who think they understand or know the Chinese and they feel that in him is an antique, grand, and noble culture, with much learning of rare value, even though, very fine, and almost sacred.

These are all most interesting; they are delightful. Do not misunderstand us. We are close observers. We see how you act, hear how you talk, understand how you think, and how you feel. "Terrible," you say? Well—it is, if you don't act just right; it isn't, if you do. Why? Because you do not yet understand us when you should.

However simple a Chinese may appear to be, you who might not, when placed in an environment and civilization equally as good, perhaps, but wholly different from his own—do not imagine that he does not observe and think, for he does, and he has been doing this for thousands of years. Even though uneducated—and when educated even more so—he must analyze things, and in a way all his own, although probably not scientifically like the westerner's, but yet using a philosophy that counts and means things. It really makes for understanding on the part of the Chinese, at least.

Fighting Against Deflation

It is not difficult to understand the reluctance of those who have profited by the high prices incident to the late war to realize that lower prices and smaller profits are inevitable in the process of deflation. The abnormal level of the war period cannot be maintained. Any producer of raw material, any manufacturer of it and any distributor of a product, who does not recognize and accept the coming of that readjustment sooner or later, is blind to all lessons that have been given to the business world by the operation of economic forces after like periods of inflation and high prices.

The law of supply and demand is almost as hard and fast as the laws of nature. It can be diverted from its ordinary operation only for a time by artificial means that may be applied to abnormal situations to meet the exigencies of a great calamity, such as the late war. When this has passed the inevitable reaction restores the law of supply and demand to full operation.

This might as well be recognized, for instance, by the wool growers, who recently visited in pooling their product over the present period of slackness in demand following the wide-spread protest, amounting almost to boycott, of the public against the high prices of clothing. It is well that the movement was not approved by the Federal Reserve Board, the petitioners being referred back to their respective banks for such assistance as could be granted, but to be conditioned on credit extension of not unreasonable duration.

Wool growers and manufacturers of wool have had high prices for a number of years. Their products have carried liberal profits. The interest of the consumer has been far from their thoughts, so long as they could find a market for their goods at whatever price they chose to ask. Now a reaction has set in. Buying power of consumers is being restricted closer to actual needs. The conservation of clothing by wearers is being felt by the producers and manufacturers of wool. And they will continue to feel it until the price of clothing has been lowered. They might as well recognize this now as later.

And the lesson pointed above also has its direct application to the workers in the woolen mills, who recently struck for higher wages, and closely following a partial concession to their demands by the manufacturers were reduced from six to four days' work a week because of the curtailed demand for cloth. Thus the public protest against the high price of clothing reaches them with as telling effect as it does the wool grower and the manufacturer.—Enquirer.

Drop the Compulsory Feature.

The Indianapolis Star says that "the compulsory primary for naming party nominations should be made effective, or it should be dropped," this being apropos of certain reflections concerning the failure of the preferential Presidential primary.

But how can the compulsory primary be made "effective"? The theory behind the compulsory primary was that the people would always be as much interested in party nominations as in regular elections. That theory has been proven to be faulty. Few primaries attract as much as 50 percent of the possible vote; frequently primary nominations are made by a mere handful of professionals. And the primary is wasteful and exhausting.

One point may be made here. Why not try to settle the question by striking out that little word "compulsory"? This would leave the political parties free to make their nominations in the way most agreeable to public opinion. Certainly there are times when public opinion demands a primary; nine times out of ten, under such circumstances, the political parties will call primaries. In many other cases, conventions afford the best system for making nominations. The whole idea behind the primary law is vicious; the State should not undertake to fetter by law the freedom of political parties.

In Kentucky, our Republican friends are pledged by law to repeal the compulsory primary. But that pledge was not fulfilled at the recent legislative session. Why? For the simple reason that last year the Republicans found, thru the medium of the "unofficial convention," a way of circumventing the primary law; the Democrats used the primary, and lost the election because they did. Some of the Republican managers wish to retain the compulsory primary as an instrument with which to torture the Democrats, while they evade its evil consequences by the "unofficial convention."—Post.

WHAT THE CENSUS SHOWS.

Of this country's five first cities, three—Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland—are Great Lakes ports. New York, with its great inland trade and its unrivaled position for cornering ocean-borne commerce, of course, stands, and will always stand, as our greatest city. Philadelphia surrendered the second place to Chicago some years ago, but she still holds third place, although doubtless somewhat alarmed by the meteoric rise of Detroit. The other large cities of the Atlantic seaboard, including the historic city of Boston, have been passed in the race by the thriving cities of the Great Lakes.

It is easily possible, however, to fall into certain errors in regard to this distribution of population. We see it stated, for instance, that Cleveland has passed Pittsburgh as an iron and steel center. We do not think this is correct. Many of the greatest industrial plants, really dependent upon Pittsburgh in a commercial way, are located some miles outside of that city's boundaries, but they form, nevertheless, a part of Pittsburgh's metropolitan system. Again, it is interesting to speculate if Detroit can sustain that tremendous rate of growth that has marked her progress during the last two decades. There are many now living in America who can remember how the tremendous growth of Chicago during the twenty years or so immediately following the Civil war gave rise to an almost universal belief that Chicago was destined to outstrip even New York. The latter city, indeed, saved her position by uniting with Brooklyn, and then a change came. Chicago continued to grow, but New York grew more rapidly.

It is hardly to be doubted, indeed, that the other lake cities—Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Toledo—have grown during the past twenty years at the expense of Chicago. It seemed for a time that Chicago would gather to itself the lion's share of that immense commerce that was evidently forming in the great basin bordered on the North by the Great Lakes, and drained toward the South by the Mississippi. But it has not turned out that way. There are certain commercial advantages in the great city and certain disadvantages. The labor problem in Chicago grew to be very difficult. And real estate values jumped, and with them the rate of local taxation. Detroit was made, of course, by the automobile industry, but Chicago at one time hoped to corner that industry and did not succeed.

Perhaps the clearest lesson in the census figures is that a number of cities in the United States are growing satisfactorily, and the danger of urban commerce being largely confined to a small group of monster cities is passing. In the European countries the tendency to concentrate in one giant capital is deplored by the shrewdest of European observers.

The last twenty years in America have seen the rise of the lake cities. In the meantime not a single river city—Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Memphis, or New Orleans—has fulfilled its promise in the matter of population growth. But the river cities will have their day; perhaps their day is now upon them.

A brass band will regale the crowd with music at the Petersburg celebration next Monday. Everybody who visits the old town that day can depend on having a good time.

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

We have suspected it for some time, but now we have it on authority as it were. The limit of life has been reached. That is the consensus of opinion in trade as interpreted by the Federal Reserve Bank in its monthly review just available. There is, of course, possibility that the somewhat received confidential returns from the coal barons, who have manifested a lack of faith of late in this consensus, as witness the current boom in black as well as white diamonds, and the propensity to, and prophesy that, will soon lift them a little bit higher.

But as the Federal Reserve Bank was speaking in the main of trade in its limitation to textiles, groceries, hardware and drugs the bit of oversight in the matter of coal can be let pass. The really enjoyable phase of the report is that price cutting has had the somewhat unsettling influence among wholesalers and retailers, with the wholesome effect of lowering the price of coal at least among the retailers. But while the wholesalers have not caught the price-cutting contagion so as the Reserve Bank would have it, the reduction in balance has been maintained. It is noted by the fact that retailers are cancelling high-priced orders and will never replace returning high-priced goods.

There is food for thought in the added statement that little or no speculative tendency exists, and that the market is not overdone and will be until production is increased, and that there is little buying except for immediate requirements.

EASY TO JUDGE CHARACTER.

Make a Study of the Handwriting of Those of Whom Doubt is Entertained.

Handwriting indicates a good deal more than appears on the surface, if what Louise Rice says in People's Magazine is true. "Want a good, kind woman to live in your wildest home and take care of Willy and your bulldog?" she asks. "Look at her capital 'A' and her small 'y'! I she makes them in a certain way she will devote herself to you, for she is the gentle, tender, mother type, and will be contented with little, so long as she may love and care for the weak and small. I said, she's that type of mother, because there are many different kinds of mothers, good in their way. I have often thought that if life were well regulated we'd have special mothers for infants, for half-grown children, for lads and lasses, and some wonderful mothers for our grown-up children, who really need them most of all.

"Hopeful people slant their writing upward just as their cheerful smiles keep the corners of their mouths up-tilted. Gloomy Gus lets his hand run downhill when he writes, to match his cynical mouth. Old 'Ironface' Jones, just and severe, honest and stingy, writes a line across the page as straight and thin as a ruler, a twin to the slit that he cuts his mouth. Susy, who hasn't a thought in her head which her mirror doesn't reflect, writes every which way. A pencil carefully drawn beneath her writing will give a faithful representation of the channel on a stormy day.

"And the size of writing—that tells you so much, just at a glance. You know that curious contradiction which makes a painter with enormous hands do miniature? And a fellow with little, dainty paws take to mural decoration? It shows in writing, too, does that tendency. The smaller the letter the more profound the brain. Proof? Oh, look at the writing of statesmen and diplomats, writers, scientists, inventors, composers, naturalists, and philosophers. I know that the rule does not hold good for all business men, but those men themselves will acknowledge I think, that they are not in the same mental class as those just mentioned."

Highway Improvement

ROADS STAND TRUCK TRAVEL

Comprehensive Experiments and Tests Now Being Made by Bureau of Public Roads.

State highway departments are vitally interested in the successful outcome of comprehensive experiments and tests now being made by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. One state engineer recently declared that millions of dollars in his state are involved in the proper design of road surfaces, which make up one of the problems being investigated by the federal engineers.

The coming into general use of the heavy motor truck has practically revolutionized the science of road building. His new problems come when loads weighing 10 to 15 tons took the place of vehicles that placed a weight of one-fourth as much or less. The roads built ten years ago were constructed before this fact could be realized.

Constructing Road Sections for Impact Tests.

ized—which is one of the reasons why many "permanent" roads have proved to be impervious.

One of the testing experiments being made by the federal bureau involves the use of a 40-section roadway in the Arlington farm, owned by the department of agriculture. Each section was built from a different type of material, or with a different method of construction. The same use is given to each section, so that eventually the type of construction best suited to heavy traffic will prove itself.

TREE PLANTING BY ROADSIDE

Shade Is Great Help in Keeping Pavement in Prime Condition—Beauty Is Added.

There is a newly discovered benefit in tree planting by the roadside. It has been learned of late that the shade or partial shade of roadside trees is a great aid in keeping the pavement in prime condition. The authorities tell us that during the hot days of summer improved roadbeds are injured by the direct rays of the sun and that the partial shade of trees planted by the roadside enables the cement or other pavements to stand much longer unimpaired. Roadside trees will far more than pay for themselves by assisting in preserving good roads. Then there is the beauty of shade trees, and if fruit trees are planted think of the abundance of peach, plum, pear, cherry, apple and other fruit trees growing by the roadside which in the aggregate would amount to millions of dollars if generally planted through the fruit growing sections of the United States.

URGE CHANGE IN ROAD RULES

British Columbia Favors Alteration to Encourage Motorists From Other Sections.

Changes in the highway regulations now in force in British Columbia are being urged by local automobile and trade associations as a means of inducing motorists from other parts of Canada, and from the United States, to travel in the province. The present rules, which differ considerably from those followed elsewhere on the continent, are declared to deter tourists from including the region in their itineraries. Legislation intended to remedy this condition is being considered by provincial government officials.

INCONSISTENCY IN FARMING

Roadside Often Neglected by Farmer Who Is Provided With Most Modern Equipment.

Often a farm is seen provided with the best of equipment, good fences, fine premises and well painted buildings, yet the roadside is wholly neglected. Such inconsistency is like putting a dirty collar on a clean shirt.

DEPENDENT ON GOOD ROADS

Many Farm Crops Must Be Hauled Some Distance to Railroad Stations and Markets.

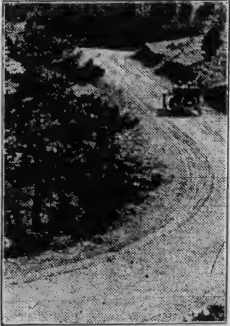

Farming is essentially dependent on the condition of country roads; for whatever is not produced on the farm must be hauled to the farm, and many crops of the farm must be hauled away to the railroad stations and local markets.

GOOD ROADS

ROADS IN NATIONAL FORESTS

Thirty Thousand Miles Will Be Needed in Next Ten Years for Proper Development.

Thirty thousand miles of road, estimated to cost not less than $150,000,000, will be needed for the proper protection and development of the national forests, and the near-by communities during the next ten years, according to comprehensive road plans which have been prepared. The secretary of agriculture has already approved the construction of 5,152 miles, estimated to cost $20,463,000, contingent upon federal and co-operative funds becoming available. Government ment expenditures of $15,740,000 have been authorized for this purpose.

The roads comprised in the comprehensive road plans form the basis of the ultimate national forest road system. They are used as main highways, either in connection with through routes or to serve important local needs. The construction of feeder roads is being largely postponed until the primary road system of the national forests is completed. It is expected that the present estimate cost will be largely exceeded when surveys are made of the projects now on the list, since in many cases the only available estimates are based upon incomplete data.

FARMER AND GOOD HIGHWAYS

Has Become Hard Working and Voling Enthusiast for Improved Road Because of Many Benefits.

The biggest booster for good roads in the country today is the farmer. A few years ago he felt that the portion of his taxes used in the construction of permanent highways represented a benefit only to the motoring tourist and the city automobile owner, writes H. W. Slawson in Leslie's. The farmer argued that he was paying for their pleasures, and the result was a superintention against the good roads movement.

Now, however, when the farmer finds that his land has trebled in value; when the merchandise for which he has telephoned in the morning can be delivered by noon of the same day; when the market for his own produce is brought hours nearer; when the winter and its following spring thaw possess no terrors for him—all this because of the improved highway which makes his farm only a suburb, as it were, of the nearest city—he naturally becomes a hardworking and hard-voting enthusiast for good roads.

GRAVEL GOOD FOR HIGHWAYS

When Properly Handled It Can Be Traveled Over All Year—Dirt Road Is Different.

While gravel, as a rule, does not make the best type of road, that is not so much the fault of the gravel as of the way it is put on. It is usually not evenly spread or leveled down, nor are the holes kept filled. If properly handled a gravel road can at least be traveled on any time of the year, which cannot be said of a dirt road.

FARM ROADS MADE OF EARTH

No Good Reason Why They Should Not Be Graded Up and Maintained in Good Condition.

The vast majority of the farm roads must necessarily be of earth. However, there is no reason why they cannot be graded up somewhat after the fashion of a public highway and maintained in that condition.

FARM ROADS ARE ESSENTIAL

Just as Important as Public Thoroughfares in Hauling Various Kinds of Crops.

Many of us know the value of good public roads, but how many of us know the value of good roads on the farm? Experience has taught that good roads on the private farm are just as essential and important as good public roads.

The KITCHEN CABINET

"Women are far more conservative than men, and this fact, to which most close observers bear witness, has very plain reasons for its existence—being due absolutely to the narrow, unvarying range of the duties in which they are held."

THE FAMILY FOOD.

Here is a salad combination a little out of the ordinary, but very tasty:

—Cream two neutricel cheeses and beat in one pint of cream. Add a small bottleful of olives chopped, a few broken nut-meats and one cupful of diced chicken. Mix well and pack in a mold. Cover with ice and salt to make firm.

Dates Cake.—Wash one package of dates and remove the stones, cut in half and cover with one cupful of boiling water. After standing a few minutes add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of sugar, and one and one-half cupfuls of flour mixed with one cupful of pecan meats. Bake in a one-half bread pan forty-five minutes. This makes a nice pudding for the second day. Serve it with a hard sauce.

Love Knots.—Take one egg, beaten light, four tablespoonfuls of thick cream, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt, vanilla to flavor and flour to roll. Knead very stiff. Roll out, cut in narrow strips, tie in knots and fry in deep fat. Roll in sugar while hot.

Date Strips.—Beat the whites and yolks separately of two eggs. Add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one cupful each of chopped dates and nuts, then add the whites of the eggs folded in lightly. Spread very thin in a buttered pan and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Let cool in the pan. Cut in strips.

Cake Tart.—Bake angel food cake in muffin rings or in gem pans. Cut the cakes when cool and scoop out the center. Fill with whipped cream and crushed sweetened strawberries or chopped nuts.

Tripe With Chili.—Have the tripe cooked until well done. Cut in fine strips three or four inches long. Heat some sweet fat in a frying pan. Add a small onion cut fine, fry until a light brown, then add two heaping teaspoonfuls of chili powder. Let simmer for a few minutes to season and serve hot.

Nellie Maxwell The KITCHEN CABINET

"I take it that knowledge is a pretty poor commodity of itself and by itself a stick won't sell by its cargo. The truths that are not transcribed into lives are dead truths."

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS.

A good dish of well-made hash is a most acceptable food, in spite of the so-called boarding house hash.

Corned Beef Hash.—Take two cupfuls of corned beef chopped, one cupful of boiled potatoes chopped, one small onion minced, salt and pepper to taste. Melt one tablespoonful of fat in a frying pan, add the onion and when soft add the meat and potatoes with a little of the broth left from cooking the meat. Cook over a slow fire until a crust is formed on the bottom. Fold like an omelet on a hot platter. Garnish with parsley.

Corn Flake Drops.—Beat the yolks of two eggs and add one cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one-third of a teaspoonful of salt; add the stiffly beaten whites, one-half cupful of coconut and four cupfuls of corn flakes. Drop on greased baking sheets and bake in a moderate oven.

Blitz Kuchen.—Cream one-half cupful of sugar, the yolks of four eggs well beaten, four tablespoonfuls of milk and one cupful of flour sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat well and pour in two per cake pans. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff; add one-half cupful of sugar. Spread this over the cake dough; sprinkle almonds, cut in thin slices. Bake in a very slow oven. When cool put the layers together with an orange cream or with the following:

Pastry Cream.—Beat the yolk of one egg, mix one-half cupful of sugar with three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, add to the egg one tablespoonful of butter, a pinch of salt and one pint of boiling milk. Cook until the cornstarch is well cooked. Cool and use for cake filling. Flavor with vanilla.

Chicken Pie.—Take the portions left from a stewed or roasted fowl, add gravy and broth to half fill a deep baking dish. If there is not enough chicken use a little veal and veal broth. Season well and cover with small baking powder biscuits. Bake in a hot oven and have the chicken boiling hot before putting on the biscuits. Bake until the biscuits are brown.

Ohio Governor Wins Victory on 44th Ballot--After Palmer Withdraws From the Race.

Good Happenings.

Mrs. O'Gorman, nee Foy, of California, was a caller at this office last Friday. Mrs. O'Gorman was a niece of the late Willis Calvert, a prominent citizen of Burlington about 75 years ago. She was visiting relatives in this county, having spent several days in Petersburg, being a relative of Dr. J. M. Grant's wife. Mrs. O'Gorman was anxious to acquire information in regard to the Calvert family, who were pioneer citizens of this part of the county, but she was unable to learn much as the present citizens of Burlington are two or three generations removed from the period when the Calverts were among the most prominent people here.

Congressman A. B. Rouse was in Burlington last Monday meeting the voters of the county. He has been pretty well over the district and finds that the people are in excellent repair, and the indications are he will receive a very handsome majority over his opponent, if there is anything like a full vote polled at the primary, the first Saturday in next month. The people in the district appreciate the work of a faithful servant and will be glad to testify as to their appreciation by going to the polls and casting their ballots for the best member they have had in Congress in many years.

Card of Thanks--We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to all those who were so kind to attend the fatal illness of our little son, Thomas. Especially do we thank Miss Artie Ryle, the nurse, for her untiring services, Revs. Edgar C. Riley and R. H. Carter for the very feeling and comforting manner in which they conducted the services at the grave, and undertaker Philip Taliaferro for the efficient manner in which he handled the funeral. The kindness shown us will never be forgotten. Omer Porter and wife.

Of the eighteen applicants for teachers' certificates who were examined recently, eight received first-class and nine second-class certificates, while one failed. Said Gordon received the report from the State Superintendent one day the past week, and he feels very much encouraged over the result of the examination and now expects that Boone county will furnish enough teachers for the schools the coming year, unless there is a very bad fall-down in future examinations.

Solon B. Ryle, one of the county's most interested Jersey cattle breeders sold three fine registered heifers last week, two to Orville Kelly and one to T. W. Rice and daughter. Mr. Ryle keeps the best and is a master hand at raising calves, and he backs his sales with his guarantee as to their breeding.

W. L. Kirkpatrick after having used his International truck two years, could not stand the tempting price offered him by an Ohio party one day last week and sold it and invested in an later improved one of the same make. He leaves in keeping up with improve ments.

Judges Lassing and Gaines celebrated the fourth of July by applying the exterminating process to some objectionable weeds that infest their lots in the northern part of the county. They observed the fourth on the fifth it must be remembered.

One appearance of Geo. Hewitt's advertisement in the Recorder did the work and he sold his threshing outfit in a day or two after the paper was issued, a Mr. Bolander, of near Clevelo, Ohio, being the purchaser.

B. H. Berkshire, of Petersburg, returned home Monday from Bowling Green, Warren county, where he had been in the interest of the Boone county stockholders in some oil wells in the vicinity of Bowling Green.

John P. Ryle, of Frankfort, passed through Burlington last Saturday, enroute to the East, where he is here to visit friends and relatives. Mr. Ryle is on the shady side of life but is holding his own well.

The Recorder committed almost an unpardonable error last week when it omitted to announce the birth of that little girl to Joseph Walton and wife on the Bellevue pike on the 23th ult.

A very small crowd attended court last Monday.

BASE BALL.

Petersburg Beats Burlington, Bellevue Wins from Hebron Verona Wallops Walton

The game of ball at Petersburg last Monday afternoon between the Petersburg and Burlington resulted in a score of 8 to 4 in favor of Petersburg, Petersburg winning the game in the first and second innings scoring four runs in the first by a combination of two singles, one double, three errors and one batter being hit by the pitcher. In the second Petersburg scored three runs off of a two bager, a base on balls, a single and an error. Having made their opponents certain winners the Burlington team got down to work and out played Petersburg from that on and succeeded in putting four runs across but it was too late. The Petersburg boys were alert at all points and cut down many drives that looked like they could result in hits. If Burlington could play the first two or three innings of her games like she plays the last she would win more. Burlington made eight hits, Petersburg six; they struck out nine and Snelling four; Burlington had four errors and Petersburg three. Two base hits, Snelling, Slayback, Ruch; three base hits, Acra.

Verona took both games from Walton last Monday, 4 to 3 at Verona in the morning and 9 to 5 at Walton in the afternoon.

Bellevue defeated Hebron at Hebron last Monday afternoon 15 to 3. The morning game and some team that can interest her.

Hebron team will come over next Saturday afternoon and confident they can clean up the Burlington team. A considerable number of rooters will accompany the visitors.

Freight Cars Needed.
The New York evening Post publishes an informative article about crop conditions west of the Mississippi river, and the facts given seem to establish the fact that the crop is good. The information is that farm labor is hard to get in Kentucky and Tennessee, and similar complaints come from the three States across the Ohio. But for some reason or other there was a great exodus of farm labor to the West a few weeks ago, and now more and more farm labor than they can use, and the surplus is crowding north to take care of the wheat in the Northwest.

The real pinch does come in the shortage of freight cars. It is a serious menace. There are not enough freight cars in operation to move the freight at the beginning of July; things are likely to be worse when the crop movement period comes a few weeks later. And the shortage of freight cars is certain to disastrously influence business all through the coming winter. Particularly will this be true with coal. The railroads are certainly not building them. We hope they are building them.

Bought Jersey Heifers.

Circuit Clerk Maurer, who is very much of an admirer of the Jersey breed of cattle, spent one day last week with Joseph Scott, near Florence, looking over Mr. Scott's excellent herd of Jerseys, and now Mr. Maurer is thoroughly satisfied that those who desire to improve the breed of their Jersey cattle need go no further than Mr. Scott's to get what they want. He believes Mr. Scott has as well bred herd of Jerseys as there are in this State, and he knows the pedigree of each individual as well as he knows his own name. Mr. Scott has spent large sums of money in bringing his herd up to the perfection it has attained. He is a factor in the improvement of the Jersey cattle in this county as well as being largely instrumental in the advancement of the country's interests. He is one of the best judges in this State of Jersey cattle, and his herd is known much more extensively than the people of Boone county imagine. Mr. Maurer was so pleased with the Scott's cattle that he invested in two handsome heifers.

The Democratic Platform.

The Democratic platform displays a little more courage and conviction on leading issues before the country than is found in that presented by the Republicans. It is not without suggestion, however, that the million of the farmers were not exactly clear on the sentiment of the country on a few issues, and even the convention as a whole, required considerable time to determine how far it was best to go in various directions. It is no wonder, the delegates were not able to see clearly and promptly through the cloud of contentions projected by the factional appeals, but on most of the proposals they have displayed a stronger vision, and have been much less evasive than was the Chicago convention. The most conspicuous result shown in the platform is the defeat of President Wilson and his cabal on two of their pet fads--the peace treaty and the Armenian mandate. The personal praise of the President and commendation of his "achievements" and of his conduct of the war, may be taken as only mild expressions of the wholesale arrangement of his Administration by the Republicans. At the same time, there are enough qualifications in individual planks for the party to escape full responsibility for many of his mistakes.

The 23 "Willful" Senators who voted for the Lodge reservations against an unqualified support of the treaty in its verbal entirety, and a decided victory in attaching to the indentment of the treaty the clause: "But we do not oppose reservations making clearer or more specific the obligations of the United States to the league associates."

In the labor plank there is full recognition of all meritorious claims presented on behalf of labor, but there is no outspoken denunciation of lawless activities of radicals in leadership or rank and file. There is no reservation against strikes and lockouts which imperil public interests. Mr. Gompers fared better than he at Chicago, and he was able to inject what he was able to into the platform.

Rural Carriers Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for county of Boone, to be held at the courthouse, July 24, 1920, to fill the position of rural carrier at Burlington and vacancies that may later occur on the routes in the above mentioned office in the above mentioned county. The examination will be open only to citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of a post office in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in Form No. 1977. Both men and women, if qualified, may enter the examination, but appointing officers have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles. Women will not be considered for rural carrier appointment unless they are the widow of U. S. soldiers, sailors, or marines, or the widow of a disabled soldier or sailor, or are physically disqualified for examination by reason of injuries received in the line of military duty. No application for appointment may be obtained from the offices mentioned above or from the United States Civil Service Commission, unless the U. S. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington at the earliest practicable date.

Chautauqua a Success.

A large number of Burlington people attended the Chautauqua at Walton, the past week and were delighted with the entertainment. Some excitement was created at the afternoon session last Saturday during a storm when a portion of the large tent was blown down. No person was injured but some were badly frightened that they preferred taking a thorough wetting to remaining in the portion of the tent that was left standing. The storm elements, and hustled to the outside. The very liberal attendance during the session evidently put the factor in the minds of the side of the ledger of those who promoted the entertainment and it can be said now that Walton will have a chautauqua in 1921.

DELIGHTFUL

Was the Pinnic at Harvest Home Grounds Last Monday and Monday Night.

The pinnic at Harvest Home grounds last Monday afternoon and evening was a most delightful affair and a credit to the Legion boys. It was attended by a very large crowd and the dance hall was occupied every minute of the time, the young people who delight to indulge in the dance being given the chance of their lives. The music was of a high order and those who did not take part in the dance enjoyed it. It was just such an occasion as the young folks like to participate in, and for which Harvest Home grounds have long been famous. Another pinnic is advertised for same place on the 24th of this month.

Mercenaries of War.

Movement for the demobilization of the swivel-chair division of the service engaged in a war long since ended is just getting under way. It is a movement in economy that might well have been in motion long ago with benefit to the people and some reduction of Congressional appropriation. Yet it has provoked protest.

The boys who went overseas and over the top, enduring horrors and encountering constant dangers of death, at the modest stipend of thirty per month and some a little bit better, made no protest when they were mustered out. They seemed as patriotic and returned as deliverers, glad they were alive and eager to resume private station and the old job. That seems a perfectly natural situation. And the same applies to the girls who went into the service of mercy and help from motives of patriotism and the mercy and help. It was an essential service, and it was a patriotic endeavor. It offered attractive phases over service at the front. That it paid no money was far safer and entailed no physical discomforts or spiritual depressions. But these differences did not dishonor it. If the severer were actually by disinterested devotion to the wars objectives.

The war being over, naturally the military branches as well as the military branches of the army were dissolved. That is, they should have been. Actually the military forces were demobilized, but the civil branches were not. For months that have run into years these servers of their country in safety, comfort and good pay have been left in the luxurious positions, with little to do and no power to earn their pay. Why? Politics. At last that which should long ago have been done is in part being done. And among these "what-ifs" for pay there is much protest.

Those of them who served really in front lines, in the trenches, realizing that patriotism prompts the relief of the country from the unjust burden of this added tax. For the others there is a scant sympathy and small respect. Commercial Tribune.

A Delightful Day.
Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hay, of Lawrenceburg, entertained last Sunday with a birthday dinner in honor of Mrs. Sarah White, of Petersburg. Those present were William White and wife, of Grant county; John Kelly and wife, of Columbus, Indiana; J. W. White and wife, of Burlington; L. E. Cook and wife, of Covington; Misses Romina, Loue, Carrie, Harvey, and Mary, of Lawrenceburg; and William and Adeline Goble, of Lawrenceburg, and Glenn and William Kelly, of Columbus. All had a very enjoyable day.

A Narrow Escape.

Jerry Fowler had a very narrow escape from a serious injury last Friday morning. He was unloading a moving machine from a truck when it fell on him in such a manner that he was pinned to the ground and sustained several flesh wounds and bruises.

GORGE OF MIGHTY CATARACT FOUND.

Rochester.--An interesting geological discovery has been made in Ontario, Canada, in connection with the excavations for the new Welland ship canal. This is the gorge of a mighty cataract over which water once found its way from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario.

The course of the river which followed an irregular declivity from the Niagara Falls to Lake Ontario. The first step of the falls was found after the contractors had dug 20 feet through an irregular step for a distance of thirteen feet, with a total drop of twenty-five feet. Beyond this there is a perpetual fall for an unknown distance, the excavation not yet having reached the rock bottom, but which is at least 75 feet. Some thousands of years ago, there was a Niagara Falls of a mighty river, or else the cataract whose course is now being traced was the original Niagara. It is a very interesting discovery, and we are familiar name into existence through some mighty convulsion of nature that closed up one channel and opened another.

Notice, American Legion.

All members of the American Legion who are not receiving their Legion Weekly should send their correct address to the adjutant long before Post. It is the duty of the adjutant to forward it to the publisher and see that they are mailed to the proper address. By investigation it is found that many of the members who do not receive their paper have given the wrong address, and we desire to have this corrected as soon as possible. L. T. UTE.

Had A Busy Day.

The Boone County Farmers Insurance Company, had a considerable volume of business before it last Monday.

Mr. Elmore, whose barn was burnt by lightning a few weeks ago, has decided to insure the $200 on his loss. Mr. Elmore had an old barn which he had insured for $200. This barn he tore down and erected the material in the construction of a much larger building without the consent of the insurance company. He thought several hundred of tobacco in the new building of tobacco in the company, which he just to apply for him consequently the new barn was not insured. Mr. Elmore had forfeited his right to any insurance, but the company decided it was just to pay him the amount of insurance on the old building, $200.

Destroying Tobacco.

A black worm about two inches long has been very destructive to tobacco in the Boone county locality. They cut the plant off close to the top of the ground and will fell plants the stalks of which are a quarter of an inch in diameter. The worm cuts corn also. Having done its work the worm goes into the ground and works beneath the surface, throwing up a ridge which makes it easy to locate and capture. Some say they are the army worm. Be that as it may, it does not take them long to destroy a patch of tobacco after they have once begun their work on it.

Ready for Business.

County Tax Commissioner H. W. Riley is making the annual assessment of the county for taxing purposes. Be ready to give in your list when he calls on you. He is going to make the assessment at the residence of the taxpayer, and if he is not at home he will leave a blank schedule which you will fill up and forward to him. He is required to make the one call and if he does not get your list then, it then becomes your duty to see that your list is made and filed upon your failure you will be subject to a considerable fine.

Heavy Loss.

The report reached here one day the past week announcing a big loss which S. P. Tilly, of Clearwater, Fla., sustained from his jewelry store being robbed of a value of thousands of dollars worth of diamonds. The job was pulled off in the day time and Mr. Tilly thinks the thief or thieves entered his store through a window and the way in was his safe unobserved. The friends of Mr. Tilly will be sorry to hear of his loss.

Will Build a Bungalow.

She will make her home in Burlington, her son, Earl Smith and wife moved into the residence she occupies at present, and which was the home of her and her husband, the late Jas. E. Smith, for so many years.

Another Oil Meeting.

A meeting was held at Hebron last Saturday to organize a company to bore for oil. It is proposed to organize a company of 100 stockholders, each to take $100 worth of stock. A good part of the stock was subscribed at the meeting. The next meeting will be held at Burlington, Saturday, July 10, at 2 o'clock p.m. Everybody is invited.

FROM SCOTT COUNTY.

Georgetown Times.

Nearly two score citizens of the Sadleville, Porter, and Sonewall precincts abandoned their businesses Friday and spent the day working the roads that they were to be improved. The Road Department of the county cooperated with the citizens by furnishing machinery and tools. Much improvement is noted after the day's work since the roads were in a very bad condition.

Threshermen here are demanding a bushel for a bushel for threshing wheat and will doubtless get that price, farmers believe. Threshing men all over the state are charging a uniform price of one bushel a bushel. The price paid for wheat delivered here will be fixed Friday and will be something less than $1.30 a bushel, according to one elevator owner.

SHEEP RAISERS

WITHDRAW WOOL

Kentuckians, Indignant at Low Bids, Will Ship to Chicago Market.

Committees representing 21 counties in the state turned down every bid that was made at the State central wool auction held at the Central Tobacco Warehouse in Lexington. The wool was offered thru samples shown on the tobacco floor, and the buyers went past the samples after the manner of tobacco buyers on the breakers.

After the bids had been made, the sheep growers committees said the bids were "unreasonably low" and withdrew the whole offering. More than 600,000 pounds were offered for sale.

Following the withdrawal of the wool offerings from the auction pool, a committee formed of one man representing each of the wool-growing counties met, and after the meeting it was stated that the 600,000 pounds of wool offered, with an additional 400,000 lbs. of the states clip not yet pooled, will be concentrated at some point in Kentucky under supervision of the state central committee, of which Dr. R. H. Stevenson, of Lexington, is chairman, and Walter Meng, of Bourbon county, and Lymann Yancey, of Owen county, are members, and will be shipped to one of the big wool markets of the country, probably Chicago.

TAX MEASURE ATTACKED

Louisville Man Denounces Acts of Kentucky Legislature.

Frankfort, June 23.--Acts of the last Legislature, exempting certain classes of property under the tax laws, have been bitterly attacked by M. M. Logan, of Louisville, in a speech today made at the convention of County Tax Commissioners.

The entire system now in vogue, Logan said, will be endangered and is being rendered unpopular by such unconstitutional acts, as he termed them. "The last session of the Legislature," he said, undertook, at the instance of certain tobacco companies, to place agricultural products not in the hands of the producer in a class by themselves and reduced the tax on that class. If this practice is continued Logan believes that the time will come when only real estate will be left for taxation. He is opposed to any such classification of property, believing that it will eventually destroy the entire tax ing system.

First Visit in 45 Years.

Jno. C. Bolen and daughter, Miss Helen, of Petersburg, and his brother, Charles A. Bolen, of Pittsboro, Penn., motored thru Burlington last Sunday afternoon, planning to visit the Bolen family. Bolen's first visit to Burlington in 45 years, he having gone to Pittsburg many years ago, being associated with the Fleischmann Yeast Co., and having charge of the home office in that city at a salary commensurate with the great responsibility attached to the position. The Fleischmann Co. also had in its employ John C. Bolen, who gave it the greater part of his life in loyal and efficient service.

CELEBRATION

Of the Fourth at Petersburg
a Big Surprise to The Citizens of the Town.

One thousand or twelve hundred people were in Petersburg last Monday to enjoy the fourth of July celebration to which the citizens had gone to considerable trouble and labor to prepare. The program was carried out to the dot in a most satisfactory manner. It was the credit of the committee who had charge of the days proceedings and the large crowd enjoyed every minute. A brass band was on hand and furnished music, adding much to the pleasure of the day. Athletics were indulged in largely and the young men who participated in the amusements showed how well they had been trained in the many sports. High jumping, pole vaulting, foot races and throwing were accorded much time, while the band discoursed music at frequent intervals. The automobile parade and pony show were leading features, the afternoon's program closing with a game of ball by the Petersburg and Burlington teams. It was one of the biggest days in the history of the town and surprised some of the oldest citizens who did not believe such a thing could be "did" in Petersburg. If you were not there you missed a very live fourth of July celebration.

Fashions in Brief.

The newest thing in furs is the paragon of fur to go with wraps.

Figured materials lend themselves best to the simplest of style designs.

The craze of the moment is the brown veil as a garniture for the black hat.

The short velvet sport coats not only come in black, but in the most brilliant of colors.

Kentucky News Gullins

Hopkinsville.—The oil excitement throughout this section of the State is on the increase, and about the liveliest business just now is the scramble to secure leases on land. It has gotten to the point where it doesn't matter much about where the land lays, or its topography. Somebody will lease it if the owner only shows an inclination. Some companies formed for the purpose, now have thousands of acres under lease and are holding it purely for speculation, hoping that the striking of oil in their locality will cause them to sell their holdings at a good profit without even having done any development work at all. Leases in the neighborhoods where more or less development has been done with favorable findings, are already soaring into fancy figures, while it is not infrequent to find a lease that cannot be bought.

Hopkinsville.—Complete figures have been announced by the Christian County Strawberry Growers' Association, of Pembroke, on the season which has just closed. The 1920 season was by far the biggest and most profitable the association has ever had, despite the fact that the supply of pickers was always short of the demand, and that heavy rains came just in the midst of the picking season, which did large damage to the ripened fruit. The berries sold from $4 to $8 per crate of six gallons each, or an average for the season, including all grades marketed, of $5.25. The yield per acre ranged from $500 to $1,100, the difference being due to the care and attention given the plants by the grower, the time of the picking as the berries ripened, etc.

COX AND ROOSEVELT

Named as Democratic Presidential Standard-Bearers.

The national Democratic convention concluded its labors last Tuesday by nominating Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, for President, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy, for Vice President. Gov. Cox has been three times elected Governor of Ohio. It is as strong a ticket as it was possible to select, and the only trouble is the wet and dry question, but the Republican party has the same trouble in their camp. Roosevelt is a cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

James M. Cox, of Ohio, Enquirer.

The Democratic convention has set Ohio in the very center of the political stage. With the nominees of the two leading parties Ohio men, the Buckeye state is certain to add another to its lists of Presidents.

Selection of Governor James M. Cox at San Francisco is the last thing the Republicans wished. Their hope was that a straight-out Administration man; that is, one tied up with the Administration, would be chosen. They had begun to feel that developments at San Francisco were working that way, and that their fight in Ohio would be easy. The nomination of Governor Cox puts the state in the debatable, if not doubtful, column.

The Governor has carried his state three times over opposition of unusual concentration, and it was no bragadocio, no mere assumption, on the part of his champions at San Francisco when they exploited him as the most popular man in Ohio the convention could name.

As Governor he has faced many new problems in Government. He went about their solution courageously, and worked them out successfully. Whether the taxation, or other phases of state finances, there is nothing to criticize in his handling of them. Controversies between capital and labor have been disposed of with general satisfaction to both factions, and with regard for the public interests. The application and enforcement of the new state constitution, which went into effect the day of his first inauguration as Governor, was a severe test of his practical statesmanship, and he met it without faltering. He has participated in the establishment of a new system of taxation, of a workmen's compensation law, of a budget system, and of many other needed laws bearing on the economic life of the state. Throughout the way, his stand was that of vigorous Americanism. If elected, the interests of this country will be safe in his hands.

The Tobacco Crop.

In Maryland a full crop has been set out and a good stand secured.

Transplanting is over in Bracken county, and the crop is growing rapidly.

Late wet spring hindered the growth of plants in Pennsylvania. Only a small part of the crop was in the fields by June 15, the plants being so small.

In Fleming county the crop is probably as far advanced as was ever known for this time of the year. There never was a better prospect for the crop in that section.

Bourbon county growers are happy in having secured a 90 per cent. stand. The crop is growing very rapidly and gives excellent prospect of a great crop.

The recent rains in Madison county, have caused the plants to make rapid growth. There is a wonderful improvement in this crop since the rains. Quite a quantity of tobacco had to be replanted.

Rain at the end of the week, in which most of the transplanting was done in Massachusetts, helped the root growth very noticeably. That which was transplanted at that time is looking fine and it was expected that the entire crop would be in the field by the first of this month.

The crop of Fayette county is in the field and prospects are for a banner crop. Farmers are somewhat fearful about getting the crops in so late but it has made such wonderful growth and the plant seems so strong and healthy that their fears have been allayed, especially when they call to mind the fact that the late planting last year produced the best tobacco grown in Fayette.

As Benjamin Rice and his sister, Elizabeth, of Locust Grove neighborhood, were returning from the picnic at Harves, Home grounds, last Monday evening, a large touring car came very near striking them. They were at the point where the North Bend road intersects the Burlington and Florence pike at Limburg. The driver of the car did not give the signal as is required by law when passing a slow road to avoid a collision. Mr. Rice came very near throwing his head in a few weeks when the Presidential campaign gets under way over there. He will hardly describe the situation.

J. B. SANDERS.

July 11

A Verona ball fan sends the following with request to publish: "Verona took both games of double header with Walton. First game 4 to 3; second game 9 to 4. Walton tried hard to even it up in the second game but Ryan's good pitching was too much for them. He struck out 11 men and allowed six hits."

It is said that W. J. Bryan is in a bad humor over the result of the convention. The Colonel wanted the platform makers to adopt a boneddy plank, which they refused to do and got huffy as a consequence.

Buy the Lee puncture proof tire. They "smile at miles" they last a little more than other tires but they last longer and you have no punctures to bother with. Come and look at them. W. L. Kirkpatrick, Burlington, Ky.

Ohio will be the hottest spot in this country. In a few weeks when the Presidential campaign gets under way over there, hot will hardly describe the situation.

DISEASES CARRIED BY DOGS

Animal Should Be Handled In Such Way as Best to Further Welfare of the Community.

Many diseases of man and domestic animals are carried by dogs. Everybody, of course, knows that the dog is responsible for rabies, but it is not so generally known that the dog is equally responsible for other fatal diseases. Among them may be mentioned hydatid and gid in man and stock, tapeworm in man and especially in children, tongue worm in man and stock, "measles" in sheep, cysticercosis of the liver in stock. Some of these parasites depend so absolutely on dogs as carriers that they would become extinct if dogs were not available as hosts. Dogs probably play a part, also, in the spread of diseases due to fungi, such as ringworm and favus, as they certainly play a part in the spread of diseases that may be carried by fleas and ticks.

The United States department of agriculture, while recognizing the dog as a useful domestic animal, insists that care must be taken to minimize the danger of diseases spread by them. In a general way, say the specialists of the department, there are three kinds of dogs—the ownerless dog, the other person's dog, and your own dog. The stray dog which recognizes no owner, they say, does not fit into the modern scheme of civilization and must be eliminated. A dog that is allowed by the owner to wander at large will have substantially the same habits of life, the same sort of food, and be practically as dangerous as the ownerless dog. You have the right to insist, they point out, that such dogs keep off your premises.

Your own dog should be handled in such a way as best to further the welfare of the dog and the community. He should be kept in restraint and not allowed the full freedom of the house or even of the outside premises. He should not be allowed to be familiar with people, and especially with children. The dog should be kept free from external parasites by frequent baths and, if necessary, other appropriate measures, and should be freed from internal parasites by suitable measures and kept free by adequate attention to his food. He should only be allowed to leave the yard or the kennel in company with some person, and wherever conditions call for it should be kept in leash. When away from home the dog should be muzzled with a reliable metal muzzle, not with a strap muzzle that would be cruel to the dog if tight enough to be effective and there is usually so loose as merely to give a false sense of security, since it permits the dog to bite.

PURE-BRED SIRES SAVE CASH

Texas Breeder Finds Best Is Cheapest Whether With Cattle, Hogs or Other Animals.

"We have been in the cattle business for more than 35 years and have always kept the best pure-bred sires we could buy."

With this remark in a letter to the federal bureau of animal industry, C. H. Falmer, a Texan, applied for enrollment in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign.

"We have always tried to teach the people to use pure-bred sires of all kinds of stock," he added. "Our motto is the 'best is the cheapest' of anything we raise whether it be cattle, horses, mules, sheep, poultry or dogs. We have found this paid as well with dogs as with everything else."—United States Department of Agriculture.

CATTLE SHRINK IN TRANSIT

Owner Loses Considerable by Not Taking Proper Precautions in Shipping Live Stock.

Investigations by the Colorado agricultural college are beginning to show that shrinkage of live stock when shipped to market can be greatly reduced. The most important thing is a comfortable car and not much crowding. The next thing is to have the animals well fed and contented when they are loaded and until they are sold at the terminal market. In other words, plenty of feed and water and comfortable quarters are most important.

"Some farmers," says the college, "live stock specialists for that institution, ship regularly with little or no shrinkage, while others at all times have enormous shrinkage."

BRAND TUBERCULOUS CATTLE

New York Commissioner of Agriculture Orders Letter "T" Put on Affected Animals.

By a recent order of the New York commissioner of agriculture, all practicing veterinarians in that state are required to brand cattle found by them to be affected with tuberculosis. The order specifies that the brand shall be the letter "T" not less than 2 or more than 3 inches high and on the left jaw.

The new regulation, which became effective in March, was issued by Commissioner Charles S. Wilson under authority of the agricultural law. The order applies to all bovine animals within the limits of the state. Veterinary experts of the United States department of agriculture consider it will be of great value to live-stock breeders of New York and also an important step for any state to take in the progress of tuberculosis eradication. Reactors are permanently marked by the branding process and in cases where they are not slaughtered the possibility of their being disposed of or losing their identity is greatly lessened, if not entirely eliminated.

RAISING SHEEP FOR MUTTON

There Are Many Areas, Especially in Hilly Regions, Where Few Animals Could Be Kept.

Sheep are not very generally kept on farms for supplying the home family with meat. There are many areas, especially in hilly or mountainous regions, where nearly every farm could keep a few mutton sheep to advantage, says the United States department of agriculture. Boys' and girls' clubs in some parts of the country have done much to foster home production of mutton.

"Sheep naturally graze over rather wide areas and seek a variety of plants. This habit particularly adapts them to being kept in large numbers on lands of sparse vegetation or furnishing a variety of grasses or other plants. They do better on short and fine grasses than on coarse or high feed. They will eat a good deal of brush and, if confined to small areas, will do a fair job at cleaning up land. When used in this way, or on land producing brush only, they can not be expected to prove very satisfactory in the production of good lambs or good wool."—Farmers' Bulletin 840.

HOW HOG MANGE IS SPREAD

Disease Is Contracted More Rapidly Among Animals of Low Vitality—Cure by Dipping.

Hog mange is spread mainly by direct bodily contact, according to investigations recently conducted by the United States department of agriculture. The disease is contracted most rapidly among hogs of low vitality, especially those kept in small inclosures. It spreads more slowly among vigorous animals kept in pastures or in clean, well-lighted roomy pens or buildings. Failure by swine owners to control hog mange results in heavy losses from shrinkage as well as from a high death rate. The department states that by dips in a lime-sulphur or arsenical solution with intervals of 6 to 7 days between dips.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Each pregnant mare deserves a stall to herself.

Farrowing time often determines profit or loss to the hog grower.

Hurdles mean more sheep to the acre. Hurdles are light, movable panels of fence used for making temporary enclosures.

Indigestion in young lambs is shown by great distress and frothing at the mouth. A tablespoonful of castor oil is a good remedy.

Health, vigor and rapidity of growth are as important as the animal in feed cost. They mean an efficient herd and one in which disease is not liable to gain a foothold.

"MARSE HENRY" WATTERSON SAYS

HENRY WATTERSON

Henry Watterson

The Courier-Journal Louisville

June 16, 1920.

Parties may come and go, politicians may rise and fall; but the education of the youth of the country goes on forever.

Our rural schools have in the past been too often dragged into the mire of local politics, and it is gratifying to know that both parties joined hands at the last session of the legislature and passed laws which will go a long way toward keeping our rural schools out of the political game.

While every voter in Kentucky is interested in the Presidential election, next November, there is one reason why the election of strong men to the new County Boards of Education is neglected. A good, clean board will select a capable superintendent, and keep both his and the schools free from any entanglement which might hurt the children.

THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATIONFARMERS PROSPEROUS
SAYS RETIRED FARMERDeplores Farm Papers' Calamity
Howling--Quotes Current Prices.

"A Retired Farmer" writing to the Kansas City Journal says:

"The fact is that with the greatly increased cost of farm supplies and farm labor farmers have been getting less than cost of production for their main staples, such as wheat, milk, poultry products, pork, and beef."

This is from a farm journal that boasts its 1,000,000 circulation and which cuts a wide swath in the agricultural community.

Other farm papers are giving out the same dope and wandering why the city man don't rush to the farms and aid in raising food for the toiling millions. Are such editorial articles calculated to enhance the value of farm lands or lead people to seek the farm for a livelihood? The man who is making a bare living in the city is in closer contact with the hard of the farmer--let these editors t it.

Many unthinking persons may be deceived by such rot. The wise man knows better. Why should the farmer fail to make a profit on 22.50 wheat, 14-cent milk, 60-cent butter, 40 to 60-cent eggs, and so on down the line of farm production, when he survives, raised a diddly and diddly, and is right along on the farm when butter sold for 16 cents the pound, eggs 12 cents a dozen, wheat at 80 cents a bushel, potatoes 30 cents a bushel, rye at 45 cents, corn at 30 cents, and so on?

I am neither talking through my hat nor telling anything out of the strict line of fact when I assert that never in the history of this country was the farmer as prosperous as he is today. All the fapoodle in the world cannot alter the fact.

The small town banks which are wholly dependent on the farming community for their business were never as prosperous as they are today. Never in the history of the nation were there so many bank depositors among farmers as today. There are many farmers who pay an income tax who a few years ago were making a bare living, with never the expectation of having an income tax or a respectable bank account as they have today. These facts cannot be truthfully gainsaid.

Respectable, decent, genuine farmers who know the truth aren't in any way deceived but rather disgusted over the walls about indignant farm owners. One farmer down East an Aroostook county potato raiser cleaned up nearly $3,000 net profit off of five acres, and his man's experience is recorded by himself in the same farm paper whose editor wrote the stuff heading this article.

Not clearing expenses! There was once a man known to the writer who cleared up a small farm, raised corn, potatoes, hay and small stock, and cared for three persons making a good living, enhancing the value of his farm by five-fold in a few years, with prices less than a third of what they are today. If that man were on the farm now, he could and would be on Easy street inside of three years. The prices he got then are here quoted for the benefit of some discontented ones who fail to pay expenses today:

Potatoes from 15 to 50 cents the bushel, the average being around 30 cents; wheat, 73; oats, 80; corn, rice, hay, $10 a ton; eggs, 8c to 12c; butter from 7c to 10c a pound.

Today what a change has come over the farmer's dream?

The war came on, farm products advanced, and our farmer was happy. He went into cattle, hogs, grain, potatoes, beans, everything in which there was money, and to-day he is on Easy street, with a farm valued at $10,000, with a good bank account; in fact he is one of the income taxpayers of the land, and he made it all off the land. When he came from the wild country, he was poor; today he is wealthy. Now tell this rugged, honest farmer that the "farmers have been getting less than the cost of production," and he'd kick you out the door in short order.

What object is to be gained by continually denying the facts of the day, belittling the farmer's business through his trade papers, the farm journals of the country? Such conduct can have but one effect, that of depressing the farm industry, depreciating the value of farm property, and making a mess of it entirely.

Beautiful Effects of Dew.

A countryside covered with dew is one of the most beautiful sights which the eye of man ever perceived. Hereward Carrington writes in Leaflets: "Dewy Eve" is no mere figment of the poet's imagination, since the dew always "falls" after sundown. As a matter of fact, however, it does not "fall" at all, but is deposited as the sun sets and as the surface of the earth, and everything upon it, begins to cool. It is very curious and interesting--this precipitation, for the pearly dew-drops form upon the leaves of trees, the blades of grass, the fine hairs on the caterpillar and on everything which is fine and pointed. The reason why we sometimes have a deposit of dew in the evening, at the end of a perfect summer day, is that on these days the humidity is high--or the amount of moisture in the atmosphere excessive. If it is dry, there is no dew, but if there is much moisture in the air, we have this phenomenon. During the day, when the sun is shining, its rays keep the tiny particles of moisture dancing about at high speed; but when the sun goes down, the "heat" anywhere; they are in constant agitation, like boiling water. But when the sun has set, this dance of the atoms (of moisture) slows down their agitation becomes less; and they tend to be deposited on vegetation, leaves, grass, etc., everywhere. Especially is this the case with all fine pointed substances, such as a spider's web. Then we have the most beautiful effects. If the weather becomes excessively cold--below the freezing point--during the precipitation of the dew--then the minute drops of water will freeze into tiny crystals of ice, and then we have "hoar frost" covering the leaves, the grass of the countryside. This is one of the most beautiful sights in nature. Fog is caused by somewhat similar atmospheric conditions--when the air is heavily laden with moisture, and a tiny drop of water adheres to each particle of dust which we see in the atmosphere dancing about merrily in the sunbeams. Experiments by Sir Oliver Lodge showed that, up to a certain point, fog could be dispersed by electric waves. If the air be dry, and the electric current very powerful, the dust particles become red-hot and glow with white heat; and this is the cause of the lightning flash which we see in the sky. The "visible" lightning really consists of a series of dust particles in the path of the electric discharge which have been heated to white heat. The moisture in the air is the cause of "humidity," dampness, Scotch mist, and finally rain; and if it is very cold at the time, we have snow, sleet and hail instead--frozen rain.

A Good Woman Gone.

Sarah Elizabeth Coyle was born August 8th, 1846, and passed away at her home in Petersburg, July 1, 1921. She was married to John B. Weindel June 11th, 1872, who preceded her to the heavenly home five years ago. To this union were born four children--Belle, who died in infancy; Dr. W. J. Weindel, of Marion, Va.; Mrs. Elizabeth Keim and Mrs. Anna Arnold, of Petersburg.

She survived by three brothers and one sister, John C. Bolen, of Petersburg; Robert H. Bolen, of New Orleans; Chas. A. Bolen, of Pittsburg, and Mrs. Anna Snyder, of Detroit, and four grandchildren, Weindel and Karl Keim, Helen and Katherine Weindel, with a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She united with the M. E. Church in early childhood under the pastorate of Revs. Robertson and Reeves. She was noted for her kind and genial disposition and her hospitality. She showed with the Christ like spirit in her associations with her people. A choice spirit has gone to its reward. xx

Will Soon Own New-Addition.

Frank Rouse has bought of John M. Lasing the old Morgan Academy lot and the lots in the new addition belonging to Mr. Lasing. On the Academy lot is a large tobacco warehouse. The other lots which are immediately across the road from the warehouse, are vacant.

Western Farm Work.

Scarcely of farm labor has been preached rather persistently as an aftermath of war. Scarcas as to possibilities in production or the lack of it are constant. No doubt there is substance back of these preachments and prophecies. Yet come rebuttal reports which are calculated to convince at least the readily credulous that, as General Hancock once remarked about the tariff, this matter of farm-labor famine is large by a local problem. This is evidenced in a bit of synopsis compiled by The New York Post, which finds in the Middle Western States conditions which controvert the labor lack and, to the contrary, evidence an actual labor glut, so to speak.

For instance, take these few illustrative instances: Enid, Okla., reports that a fortnight ago the central wheat area of the State was flooded with hundreds of hands, who were given work by the employment bureau. More continued to arrive. Early last week, says The Daily Oklahoman, "hundreds loitered around the streets of Enid. Many who were broke held out their hats to passersby, begging for nickels and dimes. At night the yards and basement of the county court house were crowded with hands."

Then again we find that the Wichita and Hutchinson sections of Kansas, states The Kansas City Journal, have "a surplus of men," and new arrivals are being turned back. In Enid, Kan., about 500 men applied to the "federal zone clearance officer, and were told they could not be forwarded until definite calls came in. More casual labor appeared than federal and State agencies supposed available. It is moving north as the wheat ripens.

Take the student volunteer movement westward, he told the colleges that the colleges have sent hundreds--thirty-five students from Indiana University, stranded in Kansas, and the way by concert; former soldiers have come by platoons. Local complaints of a labor shortage will be heard. But if there are men enough for wheat, we may be sure there will be enough for the great staple crops, the harvesting of which spreads over long periods. Where the pinch exists is in cars, is the ultimate conclusion of this resume, once more making the railroads the goat of our get-nowhere-ness--Ex.

Rendered Good Service.

Hubert Rouse, who retired as mail carrier on the Burlington and Covington route with the discontinuance of that route on the first of this month was a very efficient carrier, and was seldom a minute behind his schedule. He worked hard to render good service and was eminently successful. All were sorry to see Mr. Rouse leave the job, but all are certain that his successor, L. R. McNeely will come thru with an excellent record. He was carrier on Burlington R. D. 2 for several years, and proved to be a faithful servant of Uncle Sam.

The Tobacco Crop.

The Recorder was informed the other day by a gentleman who keeps well posted on the tobacco outlook in this part of the State, that the crop is a little later than usual, but it has made a splendid start, which more than offsets the late setting. He says a good quality of plants were used in pitching the crop and the growth began immediately after the setting. The acreage is greater than that of last year, and just now everything is favorable to a larger crop than that produced in 1919.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

PUREBRED PIGS ARE HIGHLY PROFITABLE

Virginia Farmer Gives His Experience With Scrubs.

Used to Raise Scrubs, but Made Very Little Money—Purebreds Go to Market Much Earlier While Prices Are High.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Flow a Virginia farmer, unlettered pigs heavier and more profitable than he had raised in the past is told in a circular, "Better Sires for Virginia," recently issued by the extension division of the Virginia Agricultural and Mechanical college.

"I used to raise scrub pigs," the farmer declares. "I didn't think there was much money in the hog business because I didn't make much. Since using purebred sires I have changed my mind. As a result of using purebred sires my pigs weighed 215 pounds last fall, when the average scrub pig would hardly weigh 150 pounds. Consequently my pigs went to market early, while prices were high, while the man with scrub pigs had to keep his longer and feed them high-priced grain while prices kept going down.

The account is accompanied by a picture of purebred boars which are described as having "in good father, a good mother, and no poor relations."

IMMUTABLE BREEDING LAWS

Use of Good Sires, Care, and Management Are Essential in Building Up Herds.

There is no disputing the absolute fact that the laws of breeding are just as immutable as they have ever been. The use of good sires is necessary in breeding up good herds and this alone will not do; good care, feed and management must be given calves, heifers and cows and where these rules are followed, men usually succeed and prosper with greater certainty than though they depend too largely upon the co-operation of the butcher.

PUREBRED

A purebred animal is one of pure breeding representing a definite, recognized breed and both of whose parents were purebred animals of the same breed. To be considered purebred, live stock must be either registered, eligible to registration, or (in the absence of public registry for that class) have such lineage that its pure breeding can be definitely proved. To be of good type and quality, the animal must be healthy, vigorous, and a creditable specimen of his breed.

MANURE ON CONCRETE FLOOR

That From Steer Valued at $24.85, While on Earth Floor It Is $4.51 Less.

The manure produced by a 1,000 pound steer in six months on a concrete floor has a value of $24.85, while on the earth floor the manure is worth only $20.34, a difference of $4.51 in favor of concrete. In eight months' time this saving is sufficient to pay the animal's share of the cost of a concrete floor. All further saving is clear profit, which amounts to $9 a year for a 1,000 pound steer.

CONTROL OF WEEDS IN CORN

Good Harrowing at Proper Time Is Most Effective Way of Checking Growth of Plants.

A good harrowing at the proper time is often the cheapest and most efficient way of controlling weeds during the first stages of growth of the corn. The harrow or the weeder also can be used to advantage in breaking up a crust caused by a heavy, dashing rain.

PLANT SOY BEANS ANY TIME

For Hay, Pasture, Green Manure or Soiling Crop Sow Any Time Up to August 1.

Soy beans may be planted any time from early spring until midsummer. For a grain crop they should be planted early, but for a hay, pasture, green manure or soiling crop they may be planted as late as August 1. The choice of a variety must be made by the farmer himself.

ROAD BUILDING

WAR MATERIAL DISTRIBUTED
Equipment Turned Over Promises to Be Great Aid in Carrying Out Road Building Plan.

To date the war department has turned over to the United States department of agriculture approximately 24,000 motor vehicles, as provided in congressional legislation empowering the latter department to distribute this war material among the state highway commissioners for use in road building. Allotments of the vehicles to be based on the amount of federal aid for roads which the states receive. This is practically all the vehicles which the war department has to release. Of this total 12,000 have been delivered to the states. The remainder will be distributed as fast as railway cars can be secured for their transportation. Representatives of the bureau of public roads, in charge of the matter, believe that within two or three months all of the vehicles will have been delivered to the states. This equipment promises to be a great aid in carrying the large road building program for 1920.

The state highway commissioners are also interested in securing allotments of tractors, steam shovels, locomotive cranes, automotive cranes, industrial railway track, dump cars and industrial locomotives which remain to be disposed of by the war department. A measure known as the Kninn bill, directing the secretary of war to release this material for the state highway commissioners, has passed the senate and has been reported out of committee in the house.

Type of Motortruck Turned Over to States to Aid in Road Building.

Until the secretary of war has been directed by congress to turn out this equipment it is not likely that it will be available for state distribution.

MAKING ROADS WITH BRAINS

Most of Heavy Work Incident to Highways Is Being Done by Machinery—Cost Is Less.

As help is scarce, and increasing traffic makes good roads a necessity, more and more of the heavy work incident to highways is being done by machinery.

At one time the work of leveling and building had to be done largely with the picket in the hands of workmen, and with shovels and teams. Now gasoline engines, motor trucks, and huge power-propelled cranes do all of the heavy work. In the new method the expense is less than by the old method, for machinery is always cheaper than human labor, in that a material saving of time is effected.

Good roads are an economy to any section of the country, as they permit produce to be hauled to market just when it will bring the most, and property is always worth more which borders well-constructed highways. Try to buy a farm along a concrete road and you will find the location makes a big difference in the price asked.

REDUCE COST OF MARKETING

It Can Be Brought About by Farmers Using More Trucks, Trailers and Automobiles.

The high cost of marketing that is such a factor in the cost of living will be reduced when the roads are improved and farmers use more trucks, trailers and automobiles in reaching city markets with their products.

UNPAVED ROADS UNCERTAIN

When Weather Is Good They May Be Passable If They Have Been Continuously Dragged.

Unpaved roads vary with the weather—paved roads are constant. When the weather is good, dirt roads may be passable if they have been continuously dragged, but they are not roads for truck and automobile traffic, so characteristic of the highways today when properly constructed.

AID NATIONAL FOREST ROADS

Secretary Meredith Favors More Liberal Financial Co-operation in Western States.

Speaking before highway representatives for western states, Edwin T. Meredith, secretary of agriculture, stated his belief that in the western states, where large areas of government lands are located, the federal government should adopt a system of financial co-operation more liberal to the states than is the case in the rest of the country.

"I think we must recognize the fact that the existence of these large areas of government lands places these states in a somewhat different situation from the remainder of the country," said Mr. Meredith, "and that it would be only equitable for the federal government to increase its percentage of co-operation over the present basis. I am also heartily in favor of continuing the appropriations for the building of national forest roads. These forests constitute a great natural resource, and their preservation and development is a national responsibility which ought to be met in full measure.

Mr. Meredith advocated active continuation of present federal and state co-operation in connection with state road systems with the systems of adjoining states in order that the working out of an adequate highway program for the whole United States may proceed in an orderly manner. He also advocated the continuance of work now going forward under the federal aid road act.

"As 1921 is the last year covered by the act," he said, "it would be highly desirable, in my opinion, for congress to make another provision as promptly as possible for the continuation of the work under the present system by an appropriation of at least $100,000,000 for each of the four fiscal years beginning with 1922."

MAINTENANCE COST OF ROADS

Ultimate Economy of Concrete Road Depends on the Small Amount Needed to Keep It Up.

The cost of a road involves not only first cost but the cost of keeping it in continuously usable condition. If this were not so, the cheaply built gravel road would be entirely suitable for our main traveled thoroughfares. The ultimate economy of the concrete road depends upon the extremely small amount of money required to keep it in excellent condition. The only maintenance needed on a well built concrete road is that necessary to keep filled with tar the joints and the cracks that may develop. The 1919 report of the state commissioner of highways of New York gives the average cost of maintenance for the three years 1915, 1916, and 1917 as follows: Maintenance per mile per year for the maintenance of 2,406 miles; gravel, $824.00 per mile per year for the maintenance of 178 miles; first-class concrete, $124.00 per mile per year for the maintenance of 204 miles.

ROADS AS COMMUNITY ASSET

The Better They Are the More Likely They Are to Prove an Investment to Farmers.

The better the roads are, the more likely they are to prove an investment and consequently stand as a community asset. Without roads that can be used, regardless of weather and season, we might as well be living along the trails that our forefathers used when beasts of burden were literally used and marketing meant almost nothing.

BULLETIN IS OF IMPORTANCE

Useful Contribution From United States Department of Agriculture on Weather.

The highway weather bulletin is an important and useful contribution from the United States department of agriculture, made doubly so by recognition of the fact that the state of the roads is more important than the weather, and that you needn't worry about the weather if the roads are paved.

GOOD FOOD FOR THE FAMILY.

For that tired feeling which affects so many at this season of the year, a tonic is good, but take it from dandelion greens, spinach and tender green vegetables. For sleeplessness a hot egg nog will be found most soothing. Beat an egg very light, add one cupful of scalded milk, a pinch of salt and a little sugar if liked, with a grating of nutmeg. Add the milk, a little at a time, beating well. Serve hot. The blood is drawn from the brain to the stomach and the sleepless sleep.

Baked Beans With Sausage and Hamburger.—Take hamburger steak and pork sausage, half and half. Place parboiled beans in the bean pot, with a small onion, cover with a layer of meat, then a layer of beans, another layer of meat and beans. Add salt, mustard, molasses and water as usual to the bean pot and bake all day slowly.

Roast Beef With Onions.—Put a rolled roast of beef in a baking pan and surround it with even-sized onions. Bake, basting as usual, basting the onions as well. Serve with the onions as a garnish to the platter of roast. Potatoes may be added and roasted with the onions, if desired.

Stuffed Calves' Hearts.—Wash two hearts, removing arteries. Parboil in salted water for 20 minutes. Drain, stuff and sew. Season with salt and pepper, roll in flour and brown in a frying pan in any sweet fat. Put into a casserole and add small onions, carrots and new potatoes with broth to cook and bake until the vegetables are tender.

Carrot Salad.—Take one cupful each of cooked carrots and potatoes diced, one-half cupful of celery, one-half cupful of nuts, two hard-cooked eggs; marinate with French dressing for two hours. Serve with a thick cooked dressing.

Escalloped Tomatoes With Eggs.—Prepare escalloped tomatoes using bread crumbs and the usual seasoning. Place in a baking dish and over the top drop as many eggs to poach as there are persons to serve. Put into a hot oven and bake until the eggs are set.

While the kitchen is the stomach of the house it is as essential to have it right as the stomach. Arrange it so it is to have the stomach so cared for.

A FEW NICE CAKES.

Practice makes perfect in cake making as in other things. The best cake-makers are those who are making cakes often.

Prince of Wales Cake.—White Part—Take the whites of three eggs, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of cornstarch, one cupful of flour, one-half cupful of sweet milk, two tablespoonsful of baking powder.

Dark Part—One cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of flour, one-half cupful of sour milk, one tablespoonful of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and the yolks of three eggs. Allspice and cloves may be added to taste. Bake in layers and put together with any filling.

Sham Tartlets.—Beat the whites of three eggs very stiff, add six heaping tablespoonsful of cane sugar, one-half tablespoonful of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and the yolks of three eggs. Allspice and cloves may be added to taste. Bake in layers and put together with any filling.

Coffee Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter and gradually one cupful of sugar and two beaten eggs. Beat well, add one cupful of chopped raisins, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, one-half cupful each of molasses and strong cold coffee, one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one teaspoonful of boiling water and two cupfuls of flour. Bake in a moderate oven.

Blackberry Cake.—Take six eggs, two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of butter, one teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice and cinnamon; add two cupfuls of blackberry jam, four cupfuls of flour and three spoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of milk. Mix as usual and bake in a moderate oven.

Some weeks ago it was announced that France would harvest enough wheat in 1920 to meet her own demands. It is now explained that, in reports, was included the wheat that will be harvested in the colonies of France in Northern Africa. County bank officials ought to scrutinize every stranger that enters their banking house, and regard him as a hold-up man until they are satisfied to the contrary. Keep close to a gun so as to have the drop on the stranger should he make any suspicious move. In these days when bank hold-ups are so frequent it behooves bank officials to be on the alert at all times.

W. F. Bradford, Secretary of the Queen City Milk Producers' Association, was in Burlington last Friday. He reports the association enjoying a steady growth and of great advantage to the producers after whose interest it is looking constantly. The association is a good membership in this county, mainly due to the efforts of Mr. Bradford.

If the weather is favorable from now on there will be a big crop of melons in the Bellevue and Petersburg bottoms this year. Owing to the ravages of the bugs the vines are late and patches but they are coming on with a rush. Too much rain is not good for melons and that is the only thing to fear now.

The mayor of Newport is engaged in an anti-rudder drive in Campbell county. He appears to be very hostile towards the Congressmen, and says the Sixth District has no representation in Congress. The mayor may think so but very few here would agree with his statement. What's got the mayor?

A drove of intoxicated hogs that had been eating swill from a moonshine still gave revenue officers a clue leading to the capture of the outfit and several men in Lecher county. As a matter of fact, drunken hogs have led to the adoption of prohibition in the United States—Cynthia Democat.

The people out on the East Bend road were busy last Saturday putting it in order by dragging and doing such other work as was necessary. Preparatory work for plowing that road is under way, and the contractor is expected to begin work on it at any time.

The many friends of G. W. Sandford, who went to near Phoenix, Arizona, over a year ago, will be sorry to hear that he is in very poor health. He had in which was followed by pleurisy and he is having a serious time recovering, one of his lungs being involved.

It is said that the growing corn in Bellevue bottoms never looked better at this time of the year. It has a fine stalk and splendid color. Just now everything indicates a bumper crop in that neighborhood this fall.

The harvesting of a small acreage of wheat was commenced in this neighborhood the latter part of last week. The grain is good but the stalks are very thin on the acre, consequently the yield per acre will be small.

W. L. Kirkpatrick installed an Sileat Alamo light plant in his residence last week. He is agent for the light and is giving it a thorough tryout. He is calling on the public soliciting trade.

A generous rainfall about the middle of June in South Carolina proved of great benefit to tobacco growers, who rushed the work of transplanting. The prospects for an abundant crop are excellent.

Arch Aera, who lives down on Middle creek, added a stock pen to his farming outfit last week and will now devote his spare time to removing stumps from his pasture and the fields he cultivates.

FOILED

Were Robbers Who Had Planned To Hold-Up Erlanger Deposit Bank.

It is believed a hold-up of Erlanger Deposit Bank was planned for last Friday at noon. About that hour an automobile in which two men were riding drove up in front of the bank and one got out and went in and had a bill changed, and when he got a bill in the car the chauffeur heard him say to his companion, "Nothing doing today here are too many about." When the chauffeur got back to the city he called up the bank and told what had happened, and said a hold-up was what the man went to Erlanger for. At the time the stranger entered the bank he was accompanied by several persons in the Erlanger, assistant cashier, and Rev. C. T. Claunch. The chauffeur also said that the men said they intended to visit the bank at Sadieville, Scott county. That hold-up men would talk so freely to a chauffeur looks a little strange to say the least.

State Dry Leader Is Strong for Cox.

Frankfort.—The Rev. Geo. Waggoner, Representative from Scott county, and leader of the prohibition league in passage of the McClellan enforcement law, is one of the original Cox men. While in the capital he expressed his gratification over the action of the Democratic National Convention. "I was over to Mr. Cox when he spoke in Georgetown," said the Rev. Mr. Waggoner, "and he has been my choice from the start. What I saw of him and heard afterward impressed me with the fact that he was a man of broad vision and a man of action." "Prohibition is an accomplished fact, you know. I don't know anything about a pro-tem, and I don't want to look ahead and go ahead, and he has struck me as a progressive. He must have made a good Governor, and a good Governor ought to make a good President."

Wallace Garrison Dead.

Wallace Garrison, 80 years of age, died at the home of his son, Eliza, in Union neighborhood, last Thursday. He had been suffering from illness. Burial at Highland cemetery last Saturday afternoon. The deceased was a son of the late Eliza Garrison and was born and raised in Big Bone church neighborhood, where he occupied the old Garrison homestead and farmed for many years. He is survived by his wife, who was a Miss Violette, one son, Eliza, and two daughters, Mrs. R. L. Willis and Mrs. John S. Myron.

That Name Roosevelt.

It would seem that the Democrats pulled a pretty shrewd trick when they named Franklin D. Roosevelt for vice president. That name Roosevelt will pull many a vote to the ticket, even though the nominee is not of the "Teddy" kind. He, however, is a cousin of the late colonel. Franklin D. Roosevelt is very similar to that of the colonel, as far as it goes. Both graduated from Harvard, both served in the legation, both were named assistant secretary of the navy when the U. S. was contemplating war, and both were nominated for the vice presidency. They differ, however, in that Colonel Roosevelt went to war; their smiles and teeth, and in saying "delighted." Franklin D. may be just as much delighted with his nomination as was Col. Roosevelt, but he has the teeth to express it so forcibly. The Democrats, too, in the study of geography. Both parties named an Ohioan for first place, but the Republicans named a Massachusetts man for second place, while the Democrats were planting their second place man in a state which is contested ground—Cincinnati Post.

Children Need Guidance.

Kentucky educators are interested in the bulletin recently issued by the Children Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor at Washington on the problem of keeping children in schools.

The bulletin follows: "What next?" is the question that thousands of bewildered children have been asking during the past week as the school doors closed behind them for the last time. An army of over 1,000,000 children between 14 and 18 years old, says the Children Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, marches out of the schools each year to become wage earners. In a pamphlet entitled "Advising Children in Their Choice of Occupation and Supervising the Working Child," the bureau tells what happens to these children and offers suggestions for helping them get the proper start in life.

Only a few children, according to the pamphlet, receive any training from their parents in finding suitable openings because parents do not know what opportunities are open to boys and girls, how to find them, and what is the best thing for a child to do. The children begin an aimless search, making the rounds of factories and offices, and answering advertisements. More than nine-tenths of them go into "blind-alley" jobs that require no skill and no opportunity to get ahead. Many drift from job to job and become incapable of steady work. Some find work that is not only uninteresting, but is physically unhealthful, some times to the permanent injury of their health. Some are without any employment for a time, since in many states the law does not require a child under 16 to have a job before he is excused from school.

These conditions, the bulletin points out, call for some organization in the schools, or in connection with the schools, to tell children what and where the jobs are, and to help them choose. They are required to fill them. While most vocational guidance and placement work in this country has been done by private organizations, it has been taken over by a number of the cities by the schools. England's experience with her juvenile labor exchanges shows that the most successful work is done in close co-operation with the school. In Australia, where vocational guidance is now being carried on by a central bureau, the study is being made of how to link up the work with the school system.

In school placement bureaus the child's aptitudes may be reached before leaving school and in many cases persuaded to remain, or provided with a scholarship to enable him to do so. In one city from 25 to 30 per cent of the children who come to the placement bureau are returned to school. The placement bureau in this school is a connecting link between the schoolroom and the industrial or business world. It keeps in close touch with local industries and opportunities and helps to make school work more practical.

The placement bureau endeavors to place the child in work for which he is fitted, and which offers the most promising future, even if that means persuading him and his parents to give up the idea of a high wage at the beginning. It attempts to keep in constant touch with the child after he has gone to work in order to see whether he has been suitably placed and to help him adjust himself. Although no general schemes have so far been devised in this country for supervising the child at work, the requirement in some states that a child must secure a new employment certificate each time he changes his employer, or that he must have effective supervision.

Any scheme for placement and supervision of the child at work, should, the bulletin states, include provision for further training through compulsory daytime continuation classes.

What's Wrong?

Geo. E. Morse, after more than 40 years of feeding experience on his 500-acre farm, has decided to quit the meat-producing business. For long Morse has been fattening 1,000 steers yearly. That means quite a few beefsteaks and roast beefs for the city. Morse and Ande Morse admits that he made a "fair profit out of the fattening." But that was in former years. The meat business is not so profitable now. He says he has to pay too much for feed and doesn't get enough for the fat that he produces to make the livestock pay.

This is the face of the fact that city consumers are paying the highest prices for beef. Here are millions of meat eaters paying more for beef than they paid before; that they paid in the years Morse admits were profitable for him.

What's wrong?—Ex. Tax Commissioner H. W. Riley received quite a number of callers last week. He is always glad to see a property owner approaching him, giving in his schedule of taxable property.

BASE BALL.

Burlington, Walton and Petersburg Winners in Last Saturday's Games.

Hebron and Burlington met on the grounds of the latter last Saturday afternoon in their second game of the season which was taken by Burlington 10 to 0. Huey and Burns for Burlington and York and Graves for Hebron were the batteries.

Huey caused the Burlington team to grow desperately nervous when he walked Walton the first. Hebron man who faced him, but for Arlor and landowner couple of times and began his head-work. He fanned Garnett, Hogan fanned away, Beemon to Tolin and Hossman was out. Huey to Tolin. For the next three innings it was three up and three down for Hebron. In the fifth inning Burns led the third strike got by Arlor first man up got first, but it was no use as Riley was retired, Slayback to Tolin, Graves struck out, and Huey pitched a wonderfully nice game and was given excellent support at every point, and that one single looked mighty lonely on the score sheet.

York pitched a good game for Hebron but his support was very weak there being nine errors behind him. His control was good and he had an abundance of speed, but he was hit viciously. The sensational play on the part of Hebron was Hogan's long run and capture of a fly just as it was settling in the grass. These two teams will play at Hebron next Saturday afternoon when the tables may be turned.

Burlington 5 2 0 0 1 0 2 x-10
Base hits—Kelly 3, Tolin 2, Slayback, Ryle, Conner 2, Beemon 2, Baker.
Two base hits—Salyback 2.
Struck out—By Huey 10; York five.

Verona ball team came over to Petersburg last Saturday afternoon where it was defeated in an exciting game 8 to 2. Petersburg believed the team had rounded into its season's form and that from now on it will have an unbroken string of victories over the Hebron team. The Petersburg team is full of zip and knows how to play the game all the time, consequently it is a strong aggregation.

The Bellevue team went over to Walton last Saturday afternoon and hooked up with a bunch of bal players who treated them in a one-run while Walton made nine and now Bellevue is very anxious to have another go with the Hebron team. Walton believes it is the best team at any time.

If Burlington will continue to put up the article of ball played last Saturday it will win some more games before the snow flies again.

Only thirty men faced Huey one Hebron man saw third base.

It takes pretty smooth work all around the diamond to hold a team to a single hit, which was all the Hebron team got in Saturday's game.

Manager Ernst is well up on the rules governing the game, and it did not take him long to call Burlington down because of the lanes not being fenced.

Several drives went thru the Hebron infield that fast work should have cut down, but they had to go as hits.

A game will proceed just as well if the routers will refrain from indulging in spiteful epithets. A very selfish manner, allowing it one-run while Walton made nine and now Bellevue is very anxious to have another go with the Hebron team.

The ground had been put in the best possible condition for last Saturday's game.

Graves is a good man behind the bat, and Burns is improving.

It is one and, now, and next Saturday the tie will be played. Here is an offer of five to one that one of the teams will win.

An elimination series in the Spikes League is being held at Talsport next Sunday afternoon. The first game will be with the Odd-Flows team of Newport.

Will Return Some Property.

The amendment to the trading with the enemy act, passed by the recent session of Congress, authorizes the return of $150,000,000 of enemy property, according to estimates of the Alien Property Custodian's office. There will remain more than $350,000,000 in seized property in the hands of that official.

Under the amendment the "A. P. C." as the office is generally known in government circles, will release property of several American hostages who married foreign noblemen, property of the German Embassy, enemy diplomats, all allies who were interned, citizens of new nations and states created by the treaty of peace, and women of allied or neutral countries who married enemy subjects.

Americans who were held in Germany during the war and whose property here was taken over, may now recover it, no matter where they are resident.

The August Primary.

The primary election at which the Democrats in this district will nominate a candidate for Congress is only a few weeks off. There are two candidates between whom to choose, Congressman A. B. Rouse, of this county, and Hon. Charlton B. Thompson, of Covington, both good Democrats. Congressman A. B. Rouse has held the office five terms and has given eminent satisfaction to people of the district. He has a very strong endorsement at the primary election, and from the reports that come in from the other counties in the district it appears that Campbell is the only county in which he has any opposition to amount to anything, and over there he has a very strong organization which will give him a large vote. The Democrats of Boone county owe Mr. Rouse a great deal of service on two grounds. First he is a gentleman of the old school and his ancestors were pioneer citizens in this county, and he has a very strong endorsement at the primary election, and from the reports that come in from the other counties in the district it appears that Campbell is the only county in which he has any opposition to amount to anything, and over there he has a very strong organization which will give him a large vote.

Wear On Ships.

An ocean liner requires a new coat of paint and an overhauling each time it crosses the ocean, according to R. B. Moon, chief painter at the U. S. Navy Recruiting Office.

Beating of the sea against the sides of the ship destroys paint and exposes the structure to the elements. Every time the ship voyages a ship has rust streaks along its sides, where the metal shows through the paint, Moon adds.

A coat of noncorrosive paint is used as a remedy. Salt water and the steel bottom of the ship cause galvanic action that eats away the paint. The battery of the ship's bottom and tends to destroy it, Moon explains, and to counteract this, ships carry zinc plates of zinc.

Every six months ships are dry docked and painted on the bottom. Barnacles collected at sea are scraped off. If they are passed thru fresh water barnacles are killed and fall off, Moon says.

From Missouri.

Renewing his subscription, R. J. Stephens, of the Missouri, writes under date of July 7th: "I have been away so long that everything there is strange to me, but I sure enjoy getting the paper. We had a very backward spring here, so much rain, but crops look fairly good. Had a good time for putting up clover and most everything is up and cutting wheat now. Wheat will not make a very good yield but the quality is fine. Corn is late and slow in growing time. I send best wishes to the Recorder and all old friends and acquaintances."

Mrs. Wm. Tipton Dead.

DRAFT EVADERS

ARE ROUNDED UP

About 5,000 Sentenced and 30,000 Cases Remain to Be Disposed Of.

Washington — Five thousand draft evaders have been convicted in Federal courts and given sentences of from thirty days to one year in prison, according to reports compiled at the Department of Justice. Thirty thousand cases remain to be investigated, law officials say. The progress is being made in rounding up the delinquents. The figures, it was explained, do not include cases of persons who were called in the draft and deserted, as such cases are handled by the military authorities.

So far approximately 275,000 cases of delinquents—men who succeeded in avoiding actual entrance into the service—have been investigated by the department out of a total of 313,414 reported. The result of the investigation shows about 10,000 cases of failure to register, and an equal number of questionnaires.

About 25 per cent of the men listed as delinquents were found by the departments agents to have been in the American or allied armies without the knowledge of their local boards. About 40 per cent of the draft dodgers have been accounted for by the military authorities. The balance on the score of the floating population, with no permanent homes, and some 20 per cent are considered as non-willful delinquents who failed to perform their duty through ignorance. The balance is made up of cripples and willful delinquents, who intentionally avoided service.

Careful attention is being given false questionnaires returns, officials declared, as well as cases where men bought farms before the call came and obtained deferred classification on the ground of necessary industry.

Good Chance to Get Needed Road Material.

A very large quantity of gravel will be removed from the river in the construction of the Government dam at McVie, this county, and the fiscal court might be able to make arrangements by which much of that material can be secured for repairing the public roads in that vicinity. By using the county trucks in handling the gravel a large quantity can be moved in a short time and a great deal of badly needed work done on the roads. The gravel will be taken from the McVie, Waterloo and Rabbit Hash. The RECORDER understands the road authorities in Ohio county, Indiana have made arrangements to use gravel that comes from the dam in repairing their roads. This matter is worth the attention of the fiscal court of this county.

Committed Suicide.

George S. McIntyre, 69, of Hamilton, this county, committed suicide last Saturday morning by hanging. He took a rope and went to a tobacco warehouse near his residence where he ended his life as above stated. He had been in a bad condition men had been made arrangements to use gravel that comes from the dam in repairing their roads. This matter is worth the attention of the fiscal court of this county.

An Attractive Health Resort.

A proposition is now on to make one of the most attractive health resorts in the country at Dry Ridge, Grant county. A very wealthy company has been organized for putting the proposition into effect. They say the favorable to the success of the enterprise. It will require the outlay of several hundred thousand dollars to provide and equip the grounds and buildings according to the designs as made public.

Couldn't Agree.

The case of Mary Schelds vs. Jno. Miskell, on maternity charge, was in excellent condition and growing fast. They say the present prospects point to one of the best crops in years in quality. If good conditions continue, reports indicate that a portion of the county the acreage is short of that of a year ago.

Work-house Abandoned.

After continuous operation more than fifty years during which thousands of prisoners paid their penalty for minor infractions of the law, the old Cincinnati Work-house has been discontinued as a city prison and the inmates, three women and 65 men, will be paroled in the County Jail to serve the remainder of their sentences.

Prior to the advent of prohibition the institution housed an average of 350 prisoners. Since then, however, the average number of inmates has not exceeded 75 daily. As a measure of economy the city administration has arranged to house the prisoners at the County Jail.

Garnett Tolin donned his working garb and spent a half day in his tobacco, and when he returned to the house his dog did not recognize him and was about to attack him for an intruder, but Garnett succeeded in making himself known before his faithful cur had done anything rash. It was a narrow escape from serious results.

Falmouth Outlook.

Both the old parties have held their national conventions and adopted their platforms, but neither one of them gives the public any pledge that the profiteers will be molested or punished. Each party expresses sympathy for the rich, Armenians, Belgians, Filipinos and other peoples, and tribes of the earth, but never a word for the people of this country, who are being criminally robbed of their daily bread by the profiteers. There is not a people on earth that is being oppressed as the people of this great country, of ours, and yet we have no assurance of relief from either one of the great parties. It reminds us of the story in the Second Reader, of the old sailor out in mid-ocean in a big storm and expressing pity for the people on land, Ireland and Armenia may need sympathy, but charity begins at home, and if something is not done to relieve this damnable situation in the near future, something is going to happen that will cause us to prosecute the profiteers had better get busy at once.

Governor Morrow made the people some great promises, such as tightening up on the pardoning power, reduction of taxes and his continuing of a lot of useless offices. He had the chance of a life time, but he has let it go glimmering. He has been in office six months and has turned two criminals out of the penitentiary where Stanley turned one out. Instead of reducing taxes he has increased them, and it seems that where there was no useless jobholder before there is two now. There is not a newspaper in the state that can conscientiously defend such action. Gov. Morrow has been in office six months and the people have lost confidence in him.

DEATHS.Arasmith.

Mrs. Maude Arasmith, wife of James Arasmith, who resides near Hathaway, died last Wednesday morning after a lingering illness of nine years. She was a daughter of Robert and Sallie Sullivan, of this county, where she spent her childhood. She was born January 1st, 1877, consequently was in her 44th year. She was a member of Big Bone Baptist church for 25 years. She is survived by two children, two daughters and two sons. She was a kind and good neighbor and will be greatly missed.

Card of Thanks—We desire to thank all our friends and neighbors for their kindness during the last illness of our dear one, Mrs. Maude Arasmith. Especially do we thank Brother Miller for his consoling remarks, and Mr. Chambers for the tender manner in which he conducted the funeral. The Family.

Garrison.

Thursday, July 8th, Mr. Wallace Garrison quietly passed away in his 80th year at the home of his son, Mr. Garrison was a native of Boone county, having spent about thirty years on his farm in the Big Bone neighborhood, where he was well and favorably known. He was a very prosperous being counted one of the counties most successful farmers. His home which was presided over by his estimable wife was noted for its genuine hospitality. For about thirty years he was a consistent member of Big Bone Baptist church.

After the marriage of his only son, realizing he was getting on the shady side of life, the farm life lost its charm, thus by moving to Walton the community sustained a loss; he was pleasantly located at Walton, remained there about thirteen years. Failing health of both him and his wife caused them to move to Covington.

The past two years he has been a patient, uncomplaining sufferer. In his affliction, he was greatly blessed in having the tender care of his faithful wife, who, with his son, wife and grandbaby were untiring in their efforts in ministering to his wants and needs.

After a brief and impressive service by Dr. Herget at Highland Chapel, Saturday, July 10th, he was buried in that beautiful city of the dead. xx

Prof. A. M. Yenley, of Florence, was a business caller at this office last Monday morning. Prof. Yenley has been instructing the young idea how to shoot at Florence for a period of time so long that there are but few living whose mind runneth to the contrary, and the patrons of the school over there are not inclined to dispense with his services as a teacher, and the years come and go and Prof. Yenley continues to hold the principality of the school. Prof. Yenley had but recently returned from a visit to Ohio, where he says many at white heat, and a fellow can dig up a political scrap any time.

J. B. Sanders, of Covington, was a caller at this office, Tuesday morning, and it will be seen by reference to another column he is hustling for a big lot sales on the pike between Florence and Erlanger.

Bodle, of East Bend neighborhood, were in Burlington, last Thursday, on the hunt for a threshing outfit which they hope to be able to ship to customers to their neighborhood at an early date to thresh a fine crop of wheat that neighborhood has put in the shock. They got no further than Burlington, at Mr. Bodle was caught on a jury that required his presence in town all day, consequently they were very much disappointed in the result of their day's work.

Howard Kirkpatrick, of the Recorder's office, made a trip to Lebanon, Ohio, last Thursday, with his brother Elmer, who took a load of farm implements to that place for a Mr. Carpenter, who had bought them of Mr. Whitehouse, who until recently owned the Chas. Shaw farm on Wooler creek. He says the country through which they traveled is beautiful, the roads broad and crops beautiful. A large and fine crop of wheat was indicated in the shock, while about all the corn had received its last plowing. It looked like prosperity is abroad in that locality.

HOW PERSONS OF WEALTH HAVE MADE AND LOST IMMENSE FORTUNES.—In America, it is said, there are many men who have added a million or two dollars to their "pile" between breakfast and luncheon; and more who have sat down to their breakfasts able to write a check for a million, and have gone to bed without a dollar, remarks a writer in London Answers.

It is not long since Joseph Headley made $250,000 in five minutes by the clock on the New York cotton exchange; and before he sat down to his dinner he was $500,000 richer than when he cracked his morning egg. The late Hardiman once made $400,000 at the rate of $50,000 a minute; and on the same day one of his porters cleared $100,000. Theodore Price, a few years ago, made $100,000 in five minutes gambling in cotton, and doubled his winnings before he went home. J. J. Livermore, who but a few years ago was office boy to a Boston broker, is credited with having added $100,000 to his capital in less time than it takes a man to eat his breakfast; while during a recent week Patton's profits on a speculation in maize totaled $400,000.

And the losses are on an equally magnificent scale. Joseph Leiter in one unhappy hour dropped $200,000 through a 20 cent fall in the price of wheat; Jacob Astor and two of his friends lost $600,000 between breakfast and luncheon; and a slump in Union Pacific cost a few millionaires, including J. J. Astor and Mr. Goetz, the appalling sum of $1,500,000.

WILL MAKE MAPS FROM AIR

How Canadian Government is Planning to Locate Breeding Places of the Mosquito.

At first glance one wouldn't say that airplanes bore much relation to mosquitoes. But they can be made to, and have been made to, up in the Fraser valley of British Columbia, where there are great areas of low, level land, undeveloped and ill-drained.

Mosquitoes have become a great pest in this region, seriously reducing milk production. The Dominion government, accordingly, stationed an expert entomologist there last spring to make a survey on which effective control measures could be based.

Here, where the airplane entered, "Erle Henric, the government entomologist, had spent days in slow compilation of his mosquito map, a device to show the location of breeding places.

He had tolled through marshes, and from mountain tops, with glasses, had taken observations. Then he thought of the airplane.

Aerial observations proved to be the ideal method. "In ten minutes aloft," declared the government entomologist, "I made more progress with my map than I had in weeks on the ground."

Mr. Henric took a big map up with him in the airplane, and as mosquito breeding places were located indicated their position on the map.

British Columbia intends to use hydroplanes to perform another important function. Her forests are the most extensive and valuable in Canada, and they cover an undeveloped empire of thousands of square miles. It is proposed to use a hydroplane patrol system during periods of fire danger.

Hydroplanes are preferred to land machines in order that inland ponds and lakes can be used for landing places.

How Woodpecker Protects Trees.

Among the natural guardians of the trees are the woodpeckers, which gather their food as they creep round the trunks and branches. They have two toes before and two behind for clinging erect to tree trunks, but rarely, if ever, with head downward. Like the anhalches and titmice. As the food of the woodpecker is nearly as abundant in winter as in summer they are seldom migratory. They never forage in flocks, like some of the gnatcatchers whose food is more plentiful, but scatter out over wide areas, and thus better their fare. They take their food from trees, on saplings and woodpeckers bear to thrushes and quails—that is, they bore into the wood as the sapling grows into the tree, and the thrushes and quails seek their sustenance on the surface of the ground.

How Gas Injures Plants.

The injury to plants caused by gas has been a subject of investigation by O. Wolmer, a German. Continuous streams of illuminating gas were passed through soil containing various herbaceous plants as well as window plants three to seven years old. All plants in their period of active growth were soon killed. Trees in late summer and early autumn suffered chiefly from shelling their foliage, and in their dormant winter period they were little affected. Seeds were very sensitive to the gas, both in their cooling stage and after germination had begun. The injury is found to be a result of active poisoning, and not mere exclusion of oxygen.

TUBERCULOSIS IN VARIOUS BREEDS

Relative Freedom From Disease Depends on Kind of Management Herd Receives.

RECORDS OF TUBERCULIN TEST

Percentage of Reactors in Purebred Hereford Herds Was Unusually Low—Eradication Measures Are Encouraged.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The relative freedom of a herd of cattle from tuberculosis depends on the kind of management the herd receives rather than upon a resistance inherent in the cattle themselves. This conclusion, applying to 14 recognized breeds of cattle in the United States, is based on a study of official tuberculosis-test records for nearly half a million animals. As a basis for answering inquiries regarding the prevalence of tuberculosis in various classes and breeds of cattle, the federal bureau of animal industry has compiled all of its test records since the beginning of tuberculosis-eradication work.

Result of Tuberculin Tests.
The results, though capable of receiving many interpretations, fail to show that any breed can be considered safer from tuberculosis than another. Of 30,670 Hereford cattle tested in purebred herds, the percentage of reactors was unusually low—only 0.77 per cent. But in grade herds of the same breed the percentage of reactors was 5.11. In the Aberdeen-Angus breed the experience was reversed. Purebred herds showed 5.79 per cent of reactors, compared with 2.39 in grade herds. Among the Shorthorns 5.75 per cent of tuberculosis was found in purebred herds and 3.74 per cent in grade herds, about 77,000 animals being included in the computations.

Although it has been frequently asserted that dairy cows, by reason of closer housing, have more tuberculosis than beef cattle, the official figures fail to support that assumption. In some dairy breeds the percentages of reactors were relatively high, but in others the percentages were low. Likewise in dairy herds, as with beef cattle, there was little uniformity between the proportion of reactors for purebreds and grades representing the same breed.

Efforts of Owner Count Most.
Briefly, the figures indicate that the freedom of a herd from tuberculosis is influenced chiefly by the efforts of the owner to keep the herd healthy, not by the breed. Some breeders' negotiations have been noticeably active in encouraging their members to adopt tuberculosis-eradication measures. The figures are believed to reflect such activity.

Furthermore, the compilations disprove the assertion, sometimes made, that purebred herds are more susceptible to tuberculosis or have more of it than grade cattle. In fact, the highest percentage of tuberculous cattle in any group was for grades.

PREVENT SEEDING OF WEEDS

Early Plowing Retards Maturity of Many Noxious Plants and Also Benefits Soil.

Early plowing prevents the seeding of many weeds that would mature during the fall. It also covers up many weed seeds and causes them to germinate to be killed in the fall before they can produce more seed. Early fall plowing opens up the soil so that more of the fall rains soak into the land, often a considerable advantage. Early fall plowing also gives time for the ground surface to become somewhat decayed and be available for growing crops the following year.

TANKAGE FOR GROWING PIGS

Formula Given for Balancing Ration for Building Up, Maintaining or Fattening.

In response to an inquiry in regard to the use of tankage in balancing a ration for hogs we quote from Illinois station bulletin:

For young growing pigs, as follows: One part tankage to nine parts corn, bran or middlings; for adult hogs, one part tankage to 11 parts corn, bran or middlings. This balances a ration with the proper proportions of each to build up the hog or maintain or fatten the hog.

HOW MUCH BUSINESS DEPENDS ON FAITH AND CONFIDENCE—The entire social, religious, industrial, commercial and business world is built upon confidence. It is the keystone of the arch, and when that is threatened or lost the entire structure totters, perhaps falls.

In the customary affairs of daily life we live and move on confidence. We are confident that the motorist or the taxi driver will do his duty; confident the policeman on the corner will protect us; confident that nobody will fall or hurt something out of a 10th-story window upon us. We have faith in others, and without that faith we could not perform our daily tasks. In the religious world the whole structure is faith—faith in the promises given us, faith in our fellow men—and faith is confidence.

In the industrial world the employee has confidence in his fellow employee; the employer has confidence in his superintendents and workmen, and workmen begin their day's work with confidence that their safety is assured and that the engineer and fireman are "on the job."

In the commercial world all business is based on confidence. Credit, confidence, business could not be transacted without confidence in the integrity of others. Experience shows that a very large percentage of the men and women in the business world can be trusted. We always hear of the one who goes wrong, but do not give passing thought to the thousands who go right.

When we view the gigantic structure we call business, with its intricate machinery, its delicate parts, its nice adjustments and its army of employees, we suddenly realize what a tremendous part confidence plays. The machine would stop, business would cease, if confidence fled.

SPREADING GOSPEL IN CHINA

How Missionaries Secured Confidence of the People by Aiding the Silk Industry.

A novel means of spreading the gospel is being employed in south China where an association has been formed for the improvement of the silk industry. The first aim of the association is to rid the country of diseased silkworms—a serious undertaking. The Chinese are naturally suspicious of being duped, and are wary of new methods. This is where the missionary's influence comes in. The Chinese know the church is there for no other reason than to help them. Accordingly the missionary pastor posts advertisements of the new method, and Rev. E. C. Howe writes that recently he made a trip, carrying with him 120,000 silkworm eggs which had been microscopically examined, and found that he could create an interest in following instructions, where business men could not get a hearing. Those who bought the healthy eggs were so elated over the results that immediate requests came in to the association for more—what the society desired, but could not bring about.

How a Whale Breathes.

An eminent naturalist says concerning the breathing apparatus of the whale: "The windpipe does not communicate with the mouth; a hole is, as it were, bored right through the back of the head. Passages would do well to copy the action of the valve of the whale's blow; a more perfect piece of structure it is impossible to imagine. Day and night, asleep or awake, the whale works its breathing apparatus in such a manner that not a drop of water ever gets down into the lungs. Again, the whale must of necessity, stay a much longer period under water than this alone might possibly drown it, inasmuch as the lungs cannot have time to fresh air. We find that this difficulty has been anticipated and obviated by a peculiar reservoir in the venous system, which reservoir is situated at the back of the lungs."—Los Angeles Times.

How to Utilize Wood Waste.

The utilization of wood waste is one very recommended to cut down the high cost of living. Here are some articles made from sawdust and shingle waste which the New York College of Forestry is exhibiting in its efforts to show how the waste of the sawmill can be utilized to cheapen the cost of living: "Silk" socks, sausage casings, phonograph records, paper milk bottles and tankard shingles. The "silk" looks like silk and feels like silk, but is much cheaper than silk. The sausage casings are made by treating the wood with chemicals that turn it into viscose, and rolling this into films.

How Spider Builds Home.

In the West Indies there is a species called the "trap-door" spider. It constructs its home with human ingenuity. It digs a straight hole in the ground and builds a door over the top. This door is so made that the spider can open and shut it quite easily. It is built over the tenacious is away from home, but when pursued or threatened, the spider retreats to its dwelling and closes the trap door after it.

POULTRY

RIGHT STOCK FOR BREEDING

Fowls Should Be Healthy and Vigorous for Best Success—Yearling Hens Preferred.

For success in raising chickens it is necessary to have healthy and vigorous breeding stock, for the luck of vigor in the newly hatched chicks is often traceable to weak parents. Only the most vigorous and the best grown birds should be put in the breeding yards. Each bird should be full of life and energy and free from any serious deformity.

Yearling hens are usually better than pullets for breeders, because hens are more mature and do not lay so many eggs during the early winter, and consequently do not reduce their vitality.

Select Only Most Vigorous and Best-Grown Birds for Breeding Pens.

so much before the breeding season. Vigorous hens two to four years old can often be advantageously retained in the breeding yard.

The male bird chosen should be young and active. An early hatched, well-developed cockerel is usually satisfactory, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture affirm, or a good, vigorous yearling or two-year-old cock may be chosen. The hens used for breeding purposes should be given the best care possible; they should be provided with large runs and should not be forced for heavy egg production during the early winter.

DEADLY FOE OF LAZY FOWLS

When Trap Nests Are Used No Amount of Cackling Will Deceive Owner of Poultry Flock.

Trap nests are the deadly foe of the lazy hen. When they are used, no amount of cackling or other form of industry can conceal the fact that she isn't delivering the goods. They are the one accurate way by which the owner of a flock can check up on the laying ability of the individual hens.

Besides being valuable in locating the drones, their use is advisable for the following additional reasons: They help to make the birds tame thereby tending toward increased egg production.

They furnish definite knowledge concerning the egg production of individual fowls.

They furnish the most satisfactory basis for utility or other breeding.

They help to make the birds tame thereby tending toward increased egg production.

YIELD WHITE-SHELLED EGGS

Mediterranean Breeds Are Best Suited for Production—Do Not Make Good Sitters.

Poultry of the Mediterranean or egg breeds are best suited for the production of white-shelled eggs. Representative of these breeds are bred largely for the production of eggs rather than for meat production. Among the popular breeds of this class are: Leghorn, Minorca, Ancona and Andalusian. One of the outstanding characteristics of the egg breeds is the fact that they are classed as nonsitters. That is, as a rule, they do not become broody and hatch their eggs. When fowls of this class are kept, artificial incubation and brooding are usually employed.

DOULTRY NOTES

Small or dirty eggs should be used at home.

Early cockerels are going to bring good prices this spring.

Fed growing chicks a dry mash to which they can help themselves.

Stand by the hen, handle her right, and she will lay eggs with all her might.

Fine cut clover and sprouted oats are beneficial and stimulating to young chicks.

Be sure that growing chicks have plenty of feed so that they will make continuous rapid growth.

Never overfeed chicks by strictly scattering the scratch feed in the litter. Feed small quantities frequently.

Preserve eggs in the spring and summer for use during the fall and winter when eggs are scarce and high in price.

WHY It Is Dangerous to Carry Matches Into Garage

The West Virginia miner who blew himself and finally to pieces out of one end of his home when he carelessly threw some damp powder into his fireplace to see if it was any good was not much more of a fool than the man who gropes around his garage with matches. One feels just as familiar with the matches as the other did with the powder, but fire and explosives are a bad combination under any circumstances. You may think you know how to handle both without danger, but as soon as you mix carelessness with them the results are almost sure to be fatal.

The motorist has no more right to carry lighted matches in his garage than he would in a powder mill. The destructive potentialities of both are about the same, and under the right conditions the open flame is as dangerous in one place as the other. If your garage is not wired for electric lights, the first investment you should make is to put them in. They are more important than keeping the garage warm in winter, because the latter will merely do the car harm, whereas lack of electric lights will cause you to use matches and that is pretty sure to mean bodily harm to yourself and the rest of the family; perhaps not today or tomorrow, perhaps the very next time you do it.

At no time is the danger greater than in winter when the garage is kept snugly closed and the dangerous vapors of gasoline and kerosene have no chance to escape harmlessly into the great outdoors.

But, if you are contemplating suicide, this will no doubt prove valuable, hints Motor Life Magazine, which aims to be helpful in every way possible.

ARE TYRANTS OF THE WILD

Why the Destruction of Fur-Bearing Animals Is Less Cruel Than It Appears.

While the fashions for furs is as imperious as it is now there is but scant reason for saying or writing anything to encourage their wearers. Inclination will be so strong that it will override every consideration except inability to buy them. The exceptions will only put the rule to the test without weakening it.

But many persons with kind hearts and much sympathy for the lower animals may find comfort, none the less, in knowing the greater part of the furs most sought and most valued come from creatures that are themselves extremely destructive and deadly to other forms of animal life. The fur-bearers, as a rule, are fierce slayers of weaker or less courageous and formidable beasts and birds.

How New Photos Are Made.

A snapshot is a photograph taken by a slot machine, and before long these machines may be common features on piers, parks and station platforms. The machine takes your picture, develops it, prints it and delivers it, all in the space of four minutes. This is how it does it. You sit before the machine and drop in your coin. A bell rings and the machine displays this notice: "Now then, turn your head, please, to the right; look at the little cross above the mirror, and smile." Then a lamp lights up the machine. A second warning bell rings, and a new notice appears: "Keep still, please," it says, and you obey. The click of the shutter and the extinguishing of the light inform you that the exposure has been made, but, lest there should be any mistake, a third notice appears, with the following message: "Thank you, the sitting is over, and you can rise from your seat. In four minutes your portrait will be delivered at the bottom of the apparatus." The picture arrives punctually to the second, and if it is not like you that is your fault. The invention is a French one.

Why Tin House Is Probable.

The sound-proof telephone booth is a rarity, but it has been discovered that any booth can be made absolutely sound proof if it is lined with tin. The new idea is applicable in other places where it is desirable to exclude needless sounds, says the Golden Age. One or two layers of tin or aluminum in partitions or between floors are equally effective in shutting out the noise of the neighbor's daughter's piano or the music of the ragtime phonograph in the flat below. Family quarrels can be conducted without risk of the neighbors' listening, the dog can bark to his heart's content and the head of the house can indulge in a man's prerogative of relieving himself with unseemly vocal sounds. The tin-lined house would be fire proof or fire resistant. If the tin manure house can be worked up to the new field for sale of their products and the architects roused to the desirability of getting "expensive sound-proof effects, the era of the tin house may become a reality.

How to Clean Varnished Paper.

Many kitchens and bathrooms are papered in varnished paper. When soiled this paper can be cleaned and made to look like new if this method is followed: To half a bucketful of water add two tablespoons of soda. Wash the walls down with this. Then take half a bucketful of clear water and add half a tablespoonful of soda. Wash the walls a second time with this, and afterward wipe them as dry as possible. You will find that the paper has a brilliant polish and looks like new.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

For the world in general food is prepared and eaten in the home, and no matter how many farmers and butchers and sailors and teamsters and grocers have conspired to provide us with good food, the one cook in the kitchen may vitiate the product in an hour—Helen Campbell.

DISHES WITH CHILL.

For all who like peppery dishes the following will be appreciated:

Mexican Hash.—Take one half pound of boiled beef chopped fine, one tomato and two cloves of garlic, also chopped fine. Cook the tomato and garlic in a little fat for a few minutes, then add the meat and one-half teaspoonful of chili powder, one onion chopped fine, salt and pepper to taste. Then add the broth in which the meat was cooked and cook for twenty minutes.

Boiled Ham.—Cover the ham with water and let it come to a boil. Add half a cupful of brown sugar, one teaspoonful of chili powder and set back to simmer for three hours, then remove the skin. Put the ham in a roasting pan, cover with bread crumbs, stick in it a few cloves and sprinkle with chili powder. Put into a hot oven to brown.

Tripe Mexican Style.—Put tripe to cook in boiling water until tender. Add one clove of garlic, chopped fine, two tablespoonsful of chili powder and one can of hominy. Stir and let cook until well done. Serve hot.

Kidney With Chilli.—Cut up the kidney into small pieces. Add one onion cut fine, put the kidney and onion into a saucepan with hot fat and let them fry. Add salt and pepper, one bay leaf, two tablespoonsful of chili powder and a little flour. When smooth set in broth or hot water for a sauce, with a dash of vinegar.

Carne de Olla.—Brown three or four pounds of rump round in two or three tablespoonsful of oil, then add a teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste, two tablespoonsful of chili powder and one bay leaf. Put all into a casserole with a half cupful each of carrot, turnip, and one onion with three stalks of celery, all cut in bits. Then add two cupfuls of soup stock or water. Cover and cook in a moderate oven three hours. A sauce may be made with the liquor in the pan. Add flour and chili powder to thicken and season.

HURRY-UP DISHES.
Dishes which may be prepared and are ready to serve in a short time are in constant demand. A good plan for the housewife who is subject to a sudden short-order call is to have a list of good dishes in a convenient place where a glance will tell what can be made available for the meal. With the canned soups to be opened and heated in five minutes the soup course is one easy to arrange. With a jar of good mayonnaise always on hand for salads, a salad is not difficult to prepare. A few stewed prunes on leaf lettuce with a good dressing makes a most acceptable combination. Another salad easy of preparation is crushed peanuts. Roll them until like coarse crumbs, sprinkle with finely minced green onion and serve with either French or mayonnaise dressing on lettuce.

Luncheon Dish.—Cut squares of bread from three slices of bread, making one-inch squares. Prepare two cupfuls of white sauce well seasoned with salt and pepper, adding one teaspoonful of curry powder. Cook five eggs in the shell until hard, cut in slices after removing the shells and add the bread and white sauce. Serve hot.

Salmon With Peas.—Heat a fillet of salmon in the can, turn carefully on to a hot chop plate and surround with cooked peas either in a white sauce or simply buttered. Tuna fish, scalloped with hard-cooked eggs cut in slices, baked until well heated through is another good hurry-up dish.

Creamed Meat.—Take cooked meat, roast of beef, ham, pork or chicken, put through the meat grinder and add to a rich white sauce. Serve with toast or on it.

Chocolate Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter with one cupful of sugar, add three beaten eggs, the rind and juice of half a lemon, two squares of grated chocolate, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three-fourths of a cupful of sweet milk. Mix and bake in layers or loaf.

The East me Battle Ground.

The nomination by the Democratic convention at San Francisco of Governor Cox for President changes the whole plan of campaign for both the political parties. This year's fight will be in the East and not in the West, as was the case in 1916, and some of the largest states of the East become automatically doubtful ground.

One of the mysteries of the 1916 campaign between Wilson and Hughes was the strange odds posted in New York all through the campaign. At first odds of as much as 4 to 1 were given in favor of Hughes, and, then, they fell to 10 to 1. In the last week of the campaign, there is no reason to doubt that the men around New York who bet on elections always felt confident that Hughes would win.

Looking back upon that contest we can now understand why they thought so. The tradition was that no Democrat could be elected President without the electoral vote of New York; the New York men possessed accurate information as to the drift of New York. Confident that New York would go Republican, they put their money on Hughes as the winner in the nation.

We all know what happened in 1916. Hughes had a much harder fight in the East than his backers had expected, but he swept the platter clean, carrying not only New York, but New Jersey and all the smaller New England States. Nevertheless Wilson was re-elected President by his astonishing vote West of the Mississippi.

When the Republican Old Guard captured the Republican convention at Chicago, it was believed by the Republican managers that the fight in 1920 would be along the same lines as in 1916, and they, therefore, ignored the West. But the Democrats have nominated for President a man whose campaign will make half the Eastern States doubtful. And the same lines as in 1916, and they, therefore, ignored the West.

It is going to be an exciting campaign. The Republicans have nominated a very weak man, a man whose weakness is understood all over the country. The Democrats have named a candidate whose strength is understood by his home people, but one who many other sections of the country know little. But this will make it all the more possible for Mr. Cox to make votes through the West. At this writing we make one prediction; watch Cox gain in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts—Louisville Post.

All There is to Know.

Miss Edith Strauss, head of the women's activities division of the Department of Justice, high-cost of living campaign, has discovered all there is to know about the problem, and places her feminine finger on the nerve of trouble, and with definite finality points the way toward economic salvation. There can be no mistake about the matter. The lady knows whereof she speaks and she gives us the figures, which, traditionally, do not lie.

Miss Strauss computes a total average expenditure of $8,710,000,000 annually by the people of the United States for luxuries.

Now, every one knows that luxuries are things we might reasonably do without. The lady tabulates and enumerates these superfluous things. We would be healthier, happier, more contented if we refused to yearn after, use and possess such things as tobacco, all the "luxurious" forms. We are spending more than two billions for tobacco.

We are advised that it would be wise if we would do without automobiles, another official luxury. We are spending two billions for these luring chariots. Too, recklessly we are throwing our money away for candy, spending a billion dollars each year. We give up fifty millions for chewing gum; absorb $350,000,000 worth of soft drinks; perfumes and cosmetics cost us $750,000,000; we spend $300,000,000 for furs; we adorn ourselves with rich clothing and walk upon soft carpets to the tune of $1,500,000,000; it is stated that the $400,000,000 worth of soap, and annually waste $250,000,000 on pianos, organs and phonographs.

We gather from this expression of feminine official wisdom that only the wealthy should rejoice in the possession of the things enumerated. The joy of the phonograph, the swell of the organ, the symphony of the sweetness of the piano are not for the sturdy commoners of America! The lady philosopher, we understand, rides in a machine that bears evidence of patrician coat and tastes; she is not averse to the gleam of jewels and the comfort of furs and lovely vesture. She may even be the possessor of a "warming canopy," housed in a gilded cage; possibly she chews gum and dandles with fudge. But she knows whereof the matter with this country. All she has to do is to return to the simple life, the simpler, the poorer. We are glad to have this information. We see the light. How we struggle that no one should have called us to halt ere this!—Ex.

Mr. Hafner, who owns the R. A. Berry place down on Middlebrook, shipped his crop of 7,000 pounds of basket willows to New York over the N. & O. Railroad last Saturday.

Mr. Hafner's willows are a variety of these willows every year, but now only a few there cultivate them. But destroyed the crop many years ago and no one planted very extensively again.

THE NEW STATUE OF LIBERTY

A little sun, a little rain,
A soft wind blowing from the west—
And woods and fields are sweet again,
And the warmth within the mountain's breast.

GOOD THINGS FOR ANY DAY.

A drink which is a full meal and one which is good for you—our old is—

Chocolate Egg Nog.
Beat the white of one egg with two teaspoonfuls of sugar and one teaspoonful of cocoa. Scald two cupfuls of milk and pour over the beaten yolk of egg. Beat half of the first mixture into the second, add a pinch of salt and pile the rest of the white on top of the glass. This makes two glasses.

Cornmeal Muffins.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of cornmeal, add three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt; add six cupfuls of boiling water and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter, cook in a double boiler an hour and a half. Turn into a mixing bowl, cover with a little water to keep the top from hardening and let stand over night.

In the morning add one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one egg well beaten. Bake in muffin pans in a hot oven.

Date Bars.—Take one cupful each of washed dates cut in halves, nut meats broken, sugar and flour, two eggs, half a teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the eggs, add the dates, nuts and sugar, then the flour sifted with the salt and baking powder. If more moisture is needed add a few drops of milk. Bake in a sheet and cut in strips.

Peanut Ramekins.—Take a can of peas or fresh cooked peas, run through a sieve, add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one-fourth of a cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of a cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, two well-buttered ramekins. Set in a pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper and bake until firm.

Strawberry Whip.—Take one quart of juicy berries, stir in one cupful of sugar and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Heap in sherbet glasses and serve with a spoonful of whipped cream on top. This may be served on shortcake or hot baking powder biscuit.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could, some blunders have crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; you shall begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense.—Kierulff.

WHAT FOODS GO TOGETHER

We should avoid in our menu planning to serve today a cream soup, fat meat, sweet potatoes, a vegetable with drawn butter sauce and a salad with mayonnaise dressing and ice cream with chocolate sauce—all dishes very high in fuel value. We must not feast one day and starve the next. Dishes hard to digest should be withheld entirely from children, but dishes well liked but difficult of digestion may be served at a meal which also provides for the children, without an entirely different menu. Concentrated foods should be served with something which will serve to dilute them, hence the custom of serving dry crackers with cheese or combined with white sauce on macaroni mixed with rice, macaroni, hominy, bread and milk in various dishes.

Butter, another concentrated food, is used on bread and potatoes. Small portions of food of various kinds can be digested where large ones would cause trouble.

The most important thing for the housewife to see to each day is that her family has well balanced meals, or if at a tight need one time, make it up in the next so that the daily average is well kept.

The housewife who plans her meals a week or a month ahead has the opportunity to give her family the best of balanced meals.

Condiments add digestion, add flavor and enhance the pleasure of many dishes; however they should be used sparingly and never given to children.

Serving meals in courses helps to enhance the artistic effort, and is often easier than getting the meal all on at once. The last course should be like the last word—one that leaves a sweet and pleasant taste in the mouth and a desire to have more.

The woman who studies food combinations and proper serving of them will enjoy a trip to some tea room or hotel to see some new garnishment or new dish which it will be her pleasure to repeat for her family.

FARM ANIMALS

KILL ALL HARMFUL ANIMALS

Annual Loss Wrought by Predatory Wild Beasts and Rodents Mounts Up Into Millions.

Live stock and wool valued at $20,000,000 are lost annually through the depredations of wild animals. The value of farm produce and forage destroyed each year by rodents is approximately $300,000,000. It is estimated that the households of this country sustain an annual loss from rats and mice of $200,000,000.

These figures sum up certain of the larger losses due to destructive wild life which the biological survey of the United States department of agriculture is engaged in reducing as rapidly as possible. A force of between 400 and 500 experienced hunters was employed by this bureau during the past year to kill predatory animals, many of which were infected with rabies.

Live Stock and Wool Valued at Millions of Dollars Are Destroyed Annually by Predatory Animals, Chief of Which Are Wolves and Coyotes.

this disease often is spread from the wild creatures to domestic animals, and frequently endangers humans. In this work of extermination the states and numerous private organizations have had an important share.

The work of killing rodents—prairie dogs, ground squirrels, jack rabbits and cottontails, pocket gophers, native mice, wood rats, cotton rats, etc.—is also carried on with the co-operation of the states. During the past fiscal year ground squirrels were poisoned on more than 14,000,000 acres. In one Idaho county alone 40,000 rabbits were killed. In the same period from 75 to 85 per cent of the prairie dogs found on a total of 2,200,000 acres were destroyed.

BANK FAVORS BETTER SIRES

Concern at Fond du Lac, Wis., Urges Its Patrons to Improve Quality of Stock.

With the publication of a four-page farm news leaflet, of which a current copy is a "Duroc Sale and Pig Club Number," a bank at Fond du Lac, Wis., is encouraging its patrons to improve their live stock. The editor of the sheet has the unique title of "bank agriculturist," and his activities are devoted largely to financing farmers who wish to acquire well-bred animals or to become joint owners in valuable sires.

In a letter to the United States department of agriculture the bank agriculturist calls attention to the support being given hog-cholera control, pig-club work, and other activities in which the government is active. The leaflet contains a "For Sale and Want Column," relating especially to live stock, gives current news among breeders, and contains discussions ranging from the cure of cattle to the handling of bees. An expressed purpose of the bank's activities is "to make Fond du Lac county a land where milk and honey flows."

RATION OF COTTONSEED MEAL

One Pound Per Day for Each 1,000 Pounds Live Weight Is Most Satisfactory.

One pound of cottonseed meal per day for each 1,000 pounds live weight is the most satisfactory quantity to feed work animals, according to recent experiments conducted by the United States department of agriculture. A test in feeding cottonseed meal to work horses and mules at the government farm, Beltsville, Md., was begun in 1918, and continued last year. When the meal was fed in large quantities harmful effects were apparent, however, indicating that cottonseed meal, like any other high-protein feed must be fed with care to horses and mules.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a carload of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

G. B. POWERS,
 WALTON, KY.

ROAD BUILDING

STANDARDIZING ROAD TESTS

Conference of Engineers Expected to Eliminate Confusion and Other Difficulties.

Confusion and other difficulties that have come from the use in different states of varying tests for materials used in road construction are expected to be eliminated by a recent conference held in the offices of the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture. Highway testing engineers representing most of the states attended. From their suggestions a system of standardized tests is to be evolved.

Manufacturers of road materials, as well as the federal and state highway departments, have been inconvenienced, because materials that would meet the requirements of one state would be rejected in another often because of different interpretations of specifications. Much of this work is done co-operatively by the federal and state governments under the federal aid road net, which is one of the reasons why it has been thought advisable to set up national standards that will be in effect in all states.

The conference was held under the auspices of the National Association of State Highway Officials. This organization will promulgate the standardized tests. It is expected that use of the tests will be generally adopted, although their use by the states will be voluntary.

A number of state highway testing engineers, in addition to a number of engineers of the bureau of public roads, attended the conference.

ADVANTAGES OF GOOD ROADS

Promote Self-Respect in Community and Cheapen Cost of Transportation to Markets.

Good roads promote self-respect in a community. They make possible social intercourse. They bring the benefits of churches and schools within the reach of all. They help to keep the boys on the farm. They cheapen the cost of transportation of farm products to the markets and thus add to the farm profits. They add to the value of farm lands much more than they cost. They mark the degree of civilization of the rural community.

GOOD ROADS AND DRIVEWAYS

As Essential on Farms as Public Highways to Enable Farmer to Handle Produce.

A well-ordered farm should have well-ordered roads and driveways to and around the buildings. In other words, private roads on the farm are as important to the interests they serve as the public roads over which the farmer's produce is marketed. A good road from the farmer's gate to his marketing place should not be depreciated by a poor road from the gate to the barn or packing house.

FEDERAL AID FOR MISSOURI

Bureau of Roads Approves Forty-Nine Projects at an Estimated Cost of $5,948,910.

Forty-nine federal aid road projects, an aggregate of 459.29 miles at an estimated construction cost of $5,948,910, have been approved by the federal bureau of roads. This announcement was made by the state highway board here today. The federal government is to pay $2,000,000, and the state and counties the remainder.

IMPROVED ROADS AID FARMER

Make It Possible to Produce Vegetables and Fruits for Canning and City Markets.

Rich agricultural land limited to cereal crops on unimproved roads may be made to yield a much higher return where with an improved road it is practicable to produce vegetables and fruits for canneries and city markets.

WHY

Collegiate Gowns Differ in Color and Design

Just before the commencement exercises of one of our universities two graduates were standing apart from the crowd of gowned men who were assembled ready to march. The men in gowns were of all grades of distinction from young bachelors of art to doctors of philosophy.

"What is the significance of all those stripes and colors, anyway?" asked one.

"Really, I don't know," was the reply. "And I have seen them every year for nine years."

If college men do not know what the various gowns and hoods stand for the person who is not college bred is likely to know less, and the increase in number of students in our universities make things academic of older and wider importance.

Universities are different in different institutions, but all over the country and indeed all over the English-speaking world certain distinctions hold. Most of these fundamental distinctions may be pointed out as follows:

The ordinary bachelor's gown, the first that the college youth owns, is of unadorned black with pointed sleeves and is usually of serge or some other simple black stuff. The master's gown is like it in that it is plain black, but the sleeves are different, being made with long pendants shaped not unlike fish-tails and hanging from the elbow nearly to the bottom of the gown. It may be made of silk, as also may be the bachelor's gown. It may be worn by a man of long academic standing who has happened to receive no higher degree; but the ordinary youth would not display himself in silk.

Most doctor's gowns, especially in England and Scotland, have hoods which give them distinction and mark in the difference of color one kind of doctorate from another.

Some years ago a commission was formed to establish a regular system in American universities. Their effort was somewhat successful, and this in general is the result of their attempt to codify the different hoods. The department of faculty learning is shown by a tripling of color round the hood, arts and letters are represented by white, theology by scarlet, law by purple, philosophy by blue, science by gold-yellow, fine arts by brown, music by pink, and medicine by green. In some institutions these colors are displayed in bars across the sleeve. This is true at Harvard, where few of the gowns have hoods.—New York Sun and Herald.

PLEA FOR THE HOME GARDEN

Why Every Citizen Should Grow His Own Vegetables, If It Is at All Possible.

Food prices are high, but food grown in home gardens costs comparatively little more than before prices began to ascend. The additional reason for home gardening in 1920 is put forward by Secretary of the United States department of agriculture. They quote a letter from a New York business man. He wrote:

"Food costs today are practically double those of 1914, but the cost to plant and care for a home garden is not increased to any considerable extent. The clerk, salesman or professional man who grows his own vegetables and small fruits reduces the family food bill. More important still, he increases the total food supply of the country. He enters the producing class." To a very appreciable extent the home gardener can solve the high cost of living."

How can the man who never gardened learn to garden? One good way is to write to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, or to his state college of agriculture for a bulletin that describes every step in making a back yard or vacant lot help feed his family.

How Wind Spreads Seeds.

If all the seeds carried about by the wind were to find favorable surroundings and grow to maturity, in a surprisingly short time the earth would be overwhelmed with certain forms of plant life. It has been estimated, for instance, that a single frond of a certain fern turns loose to the wind four thousand million spores. Each spore floats with the slightest breeze, and will produce a whole plant if conditions are favorable. These are enough to cover 2,000,000 acres of land. Few of us realize the productivity of the common mushroom. A thousand acres could be covered by the spores of one single fungus.

Why Birds Should Be Protected.

Human life on this planet is one unending war with the insect world. In this war the birds are our allies. Without their help the insects would win in a very few campaigns. Wherever bird life is diminished a swarm of insect pests arises at once, which all man's spray and powders can barely hold in check. Cut the birds off altogether and it is virtually certain that all our protective devices would not save our crops.

When we kill an insect-eating bird—and that includes nine-tenths of all those we know—we are guilty of base folly and baser ingratitude.

FARM FLOCKS IN CONTESTS

Demonstration to Show How Proper Management Will Increase Egg Production.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Something different in egg-laying contests is being carried on in Missouri this year. Instead of a few selected fowls competing under the care of experts, whole flocks of hens on the home farm and under the care of their owners are matched against similar flocks in all parts of the state. This is not only a contest to see which hens can lay the most eggs, the extension specialists say, but is also a demonstration to show how proper management will increase the egg production and profits of the farm flock.

The plan is to have one poultry keeper in each community of the various counties enter the contest. The contestants agree to care for their entire poultry flock as nearly as possible according to directions furnished by the poultry-extension workers through the office of the farm bureau. At the end of each month each contestant is to report expenses and income from his flock for the month. This plan will stimulate better methods of poultry management by demonstrating on a typical farm in the neighborhood the results which can be secured by proper care of the flock.

According to reports of the extension workers, 37 farm flocks are entered in the contest, with an average of 155 hens to the farm. In February the hens in the contest averaged 8.1 eggs. The value of eggs to the farm amounted to $32.08, the cost of feed per farm $18.17, and the average net profit $13.91. In the four months, November, December, January and February, eggs valued at $100.53 were produced on each farm at a cost for feed of $73.50 for each farm. White Leghorns averaged 25 eggs for the four months and led all breeds in egg yields.

The highest record in a similar contest held in the state last year was made by N. P. Hollar, living near Harding, who secured an average production of 140 eggs from a flock of 430 birds.

POULTRY NOTES

A dust bath is necessary to the health and profitability of the hen.

Skin milk is a very efficient feed for producing eggs.

The laying hen has a bright red comb and a brilliant sheen about the feathers.

An important factor in keeping the chicks growing during hot weather is plenty of shade.

Dust baths for the fowls to wallow in whenever they wish is one way of checking lice.

Disease brought about by filth, malnutrition and neglect is a good way to make a failure in the poultry business.

In marketing turkeys it pays to have them well fattened and well dressed, so they will look better than the average.

Tame, quiet hens of the larger breeds, such as Plymouth Rocks and Orpingtons, make the best turkey mothers.

The poultry breeder should be very sure that the chicks are getting all they need, for trouble and disaster follow faulty feeding.

The poultry house should be built as low as possible without danger of the attendants' bumping their heads against the ceiling. A low house is more easily warmed than a high one.

There are many advantages to a single-pitch roof on the poultry house. This type is most easily built. It gives the highest vertical front exposed to the sun's rays and throws all of the rain water to the rear.

The KITCHEN CABINET

A recipe for proud cooks—When you taste a blueberry pie that you have just made and feel a thrill of pride at its delicious flavor, always remember that you didn't make the blueberries.

MEALS FOR OCCASIONS.

We never lose our desire for something new, and when a combination of a little unusual is heard about we wish to try it.

Squabs Mirabeau.—Prepare squabs as for roasting, broil five minutes in broiler, and then remove them. Sift them over the back, without breaking the breast bone, season with salt and pepper, cover with egg and crumbs and cook in butter fifteen minutes. Garnish with small onions and potatoes browned in butter.

Codfish Bonnet.—Butter a long baking dish and place half a cod, skin side down in the dish, surrounded with potato balls, season with salt and pepper and put butter on top of the fish. Put into the oven to bake, baste frequently, cooking about 15 minutes. Just before serving baste again and brown, then sprinkle with minced parsley and serve.

Raspberries à la Astor.—Take two cups of raspberries, add a little lemon juice and powdered sugar and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix thoroughly with whipped cream and flavor with marmalade. Sprinkle with pistachio nuts finely minced, place on ice to chill for two hours before serving.

Braised Tongue.—Cook a beef tongue slowly for two hours or until tender, skin it and put it in a casserole. Melt three tablespoons of butter, add three of flour and cook until smooth; add a pint of broth in which the tongue was cooked and a pint of stewed and strained tomatoes. Cook until thick, adding one chopped onion and half a carrot finely minced, half a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a few dashes of red pepper and the tongue. Cover and simmer for two hours. Serve from the casserole.

Cherry Olives.—Fill quart jars with the fruit well washed but not dried. Add a level teaspoonful of salt and fill the jar with good vinegar. Seal and put away for later use. The cherries may be eaten from the stems and are a delicious relish, keeping well if the vinegar is good, for two or three years.

If you have a few tablespoonfuls of cooked corn left over, add it to the potato salad; it gives a most appetizing flavor.

I think that I shall never see A poem as lovely as a tree. A tree whose hungry mouth is prest Against the earth's sweet flowing

A tree that India at God all day And lifts her lazy arms to pray; A tree that may in summer wear A nest of robins in her hair; Upon whose bosom snow has lain, Who intimately lives with rain. Poems are made by fools like me, But only God can make a tree. —Joyce Kilmer.

FEEDING THE SICK AND CONVALESCENT

Few families are so fortunate as to escape illness during some time of their history. Good feeding is an important factor in maintaining health, but in spite of good food a sudden chill or strain of overwork or worry will overwhelm even a strong and healthy body.

Since all food must be reduced to fluid form before it can be digested and assimilated, that seems to be the best form to serve to those who are ill. This diet includes soups and clear soups of various kinds, hot juice and beef tea, cereals, gruels, milk plain or modified to make it more digestible, nutritious or more agreeable to the patient, raw eggs in combination with water, milk, fruit juices or cocoa and cream soups of various kinds.

Broths, clear soups and beef tea have little nourishment, but stimulate the appetite, are refreshing when cold or soothing when hot; they also stimulate the flow of gastric juices. By adding eggs, milk or the thickening of cereal flour like barley or rice, they may be quite nutritive.

Cereal gruels are neither stimulating nor irritating and are most useful when the appetite is poor and digestion weak, as they are quickly digested and absorbed.

Like broths, gruels may be enriched by eggs, cream and milk, for one could not drink enough to keep up the body energy without the addition of some more nutritive food.

Milk is one of the most valuable foods for sick people and fortunately most patients like it. It has been called the perfect food. Its value may be increased by changing its flavor, adding cream, or making a drink called koumiss and by adding junket or rennet to partly digest it making it more palatable and adding variety.

ROUSE-THOMPSON IN DEBATE

The Kentucky Post gave the following report of the joint discussion between Congressman A. B. Rouse and Hon. Charlton P. Thompson, his opponent, last Monday night at Peppers' hall, Newport:

Thompson said, in part: "Rouse has been in Congress for years, during which time some very important legislation has been passed, yet there is not one important bill bearing his name."

"Rouse, during his 10 years has never come into the district and spoke in the interest of his party, no matter how hard it was pressed."

"Rouse is not entitled to perpetuate himself in office, as our constitution was so wise that a man could be changed unless he had rendered exceptional service, and certainly the record of the Sixth District congressman could not be pointed to as exceptional."

"The congressman had missed his golden opportunity, for he had been in Congress at a time which gave to every congressman his chance to win fame; that Rouse had heard his president attacked, vilified and almost sent to his grave, without ever raising his voice in his defense."

"Rouse's friends are trying to predict him back into office."

"NEVER EXPLAINED"
"It is unfair to demand that all census enumerators, who after taking a civil examination and working for meager pay, owed that pay to Mr. Rouse and should support him at the polls."

"It is unreasonable for Rouse to expect all of the soldiers' votes and the votes of all of their friends because he was in Congress at a time they were wearing or encouraging the wearing of the uniforms. Thompson claimed it an effort to capitalize patriotism."

"Congressman Rouse was absent or not voting on all three times the Volstead prohibition bill was being considered. That while the congressman explained he was absent the first time because of the illness of his mother, and that he was campaigning in Kentucky when it was up the last time, he never explained where he was the second time it was before the House."

"Id at least be man enough to let the people of my district know how I stood on a bill which has been the talk of more discussion than any other law ever placed on the statute books."

SAYS ROUSE FAILED.

"Rouse failed to vote on six important labor bills, and voted 'no' on three, one of which was the workman's compensation bill."

"Rouse failed to vote on declaring Bergers' sent vacant."

"Rouse failed to vote on the bill creating the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, providing for insurance for soldiers up to $10,000, and failed to vote on final passage of the sundry civil bill providing for vocational education."

On rebuttal, Thompson said: "When I was in the Legislature, a bill came up to give the mothers a chance to vote on educational matters and I, of course, favored the bill believing if any one was interested in education it was the mother."

Rouse said, in part:

"I have been a member of Congress for 10 years and have been elected by majorities from 4417 to 17,329."

"I served on the Labor Committee when the Secretary of Labor Wilson was chairman and always have voted for labor legislation desired by the laboring people."

"I served on the Postoffice Committee the entire time. Went on the committee as ninth member and at present am third member. Two members who preceded me on the committee are Judge Moon of Tennessee, who has served twenty-three years, and Col. Bell of Georgia, who has served 15 years."

"You sent me to Congress to represent you and to tend to your business in Washington and not to endeavor to fill the halls with wind-jamming oratory. You asked for work and for results. My record speaks for itself. I am proud of it. It is as clean as a hound's tooth."

"No district in the United States has better mail facilities than mine and with the completion of the postoffice in the city of Bellevue, very little improvements are requested."

ATTACK ON THOMPSON.

"My opponent has been a chronic candidate for office since 1905. In that year he was appointed a referee in bankruptcy by Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran and served until he was a candidate for commonwealth attorney in 1908. In 1911 he was elected to the Legislature, nominated in a convention. His opponent Lee F. Hanks requested a primary, but Thompson refused. In 1912 he was a candidate for United States District Attorney, and in 1913 was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue and served until office was abolished the latter part of last year when he became a candidate for Congress. He attacks my record in an anonymous circular on some matters that were voted upon in 1913."

"Why didn't he run against me in 1913, 1916, or 1917 in this anonymous circular he refers to my absence on July 2nd of last year?"

"I was not present. I was called home by telegram stating my mother was in a hospital. I left Washington forthwith and remained with her during the five weeks she was in the hospital. He knows this to be a fact and I want to ask any red blooded man in this audience and I will ask him where he would have been under similar circumstances?"

"He attacks me for being absent on Oct. 27 of last year. However, he knows that every member of Congress from the Kentucky delegation was in Kentucky at that time, which was only a week prior to the regular election. He states that he has given so much time to campaigning for his district. I ask him where he would have been on that date had he been a member of Congress?"

"HAS NO LABOR RECORD."
"He attacks my vote against the bill known as the Workmen's Compensation Bill, which was voted upon the first day of March 1913. This bill did not become a law. I did vote against it for many reasons and the principal reason was that the railroad and labor organizations throughout the country opposed the bill. The Workmen's Compensation bill, which is now on the statute books and for which I voted, was approved on the 7th day of September, 1916. The 16 standard railroad labor organizations have endorsed my record and have asked the laboring men of my district to support me in this primary and in the general election. The reason they have given this endorsement is because I voted against the vicious Esch bill and the Esch-Cummins railroad bill, which was vigorously opposed by all railroad organizations."

"My opponent has no labor record. He knows nothing about labor nor the laboring men and no laboring man in this audience has ever had a handshake from him prior to the time he became a candidate. He has no right to claim the labor vote. I admit that he believes in short hours, for while he was collector of internal revenue, he arrived at 10:30 in the morning and left at about 2:30 in the afternoon for the golf links. He has no right to claim the labor vote because he consistently and persistently refused to recommend increase in salary for the employees who served under him as custodian of the Federal Building and these men did not receive an increase in salary until I had him removed as custodian and had the postmaster appointed. He has no right to ask labor for its vote. I hold in my hands two letters which I have recently received from him which do not bear any evidence that he let his letterheads be printed in a union shop."

"He criticizes me for being absent when a vote was being taken on a bill to create the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. I was absent on that date and was looking after government business. The result of my work saved the government at least $15,000,000, because it was my minority report on the infamous pneumatic mail tube steal and my recommendation to the president which prompted him to veto the bill and save the government this enormous amount. No soldier, sailor or marine in this district will criticize my activities in their behalf or my absence on any votes. My record shows that there are 6100 ex-service men in this district, that I have looked after business for more than 1800 of them and that I have collected for the ex-service men and their dependents in the way of bonuses, tax pay and compensation more than $10,000. No request from them has ever been unanswered. No request from any of my constituents have been unanswered and it was my record to answer correspondence upon the day upon which the letter was received. I am willing to allow the ex-service men of my district to pass upon my official record."

"My opponent states he was the author of the primary election law. The Acts of 1912 session of the Legislature on page 3, at the bottom of the page, show that the author on this act was William V. Eaton, a member from McCracken-co., and Mr. Thompson's name is not connected nor printed at any place in connection with this act."

The 16 standard railroad labor organizations have endorsed my record and have asked the laboring men of my district to support me in this primary and in the general election. The reason they have given this endorsement is because I voted against the vicious Esch bill and the Esch-Cummins railroad bill, which was vigorously opposed by all railroad organizations."

"My opponent has no labor record. He knows nothing about labor nor the laboring men and no laboring man in this audience has ever had a handshake from him prior to the time he became a candidate. He has no right to claim the labor vote. I admit that he believes in short hours, for while he was collector of internal revenue, he arrived at 10:30 in the morning and left at about 2:30 in the afternoon for the golf links. He has no right to claim the labor vote because he consistently and persistently refused to recommend increase in salary for the employees who served under him as custodian of the Federal Building and these men did not receive an increase in salary until I had him removed as custodian and had the postmaster appointed. He has no right to ask labor for its vote. I hold in my hands two letters which I have recently received from him which do not bear any evidence that he let his letterheads be printed in a union shop."

Ride on Goodyear Tires in That Sturdy Small Car of Yours

It surprises certain users of small cars to find that they can obtain Goodyear Tires at a first cost ordinarily not greater, and sometimes less, than that of other tires.

This initial value, as well as the very low final cost, results from the application of Goodyear experience and care to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to 30x3-, 30 x 3 1/2- and 31 x 4-inch sizes.

Such facts explain why more cars, using these sizes, were factory-equipped last year with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

If you drive a Ford, Chevrolet, Maxwell, or Dort take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy real Goodyear value and economy; equip your car with Goodyear Tires and Heavy Tourist Tubes at the nearest Service Station.

30 x 3 1/2 Goodyear Double-Cure
Fabric, All-Weather Tread . . . $23.50
30 x 3 1/2 Goodyear Single-Cure
Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread . . . $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? $4.50

George S. McIntyre.

God Called Him, "and Heaven is Deeper than that he's there."

A pall of sadness was thrown over our people Saturday morning, July 10th, when the tidings of the death of George S. McIntyre, caused by committing suicide by hanging himself, flew from tongue to tongue. The day so perfect, no cause can be given for this deed, only a dark cloud seemed to cause all happiness and pleasure to depart and darkness took the place of it.

George S. McIntyre was born August 25th, 1851, and departed this life July 10th, 1920. He united with the South Fork Christian Church in 1881. He was married to Emma Phillips, September 20th, 1872. To this union two children were born, Mrs. William Smith and Mrs. Sam Anderson. Besides these he leaves three sisters, one brother, 7 grandchildren and 4 great grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn his demise.

He was a good man, of good habits and never wronged anyone. Sad was the scene at the church when the family took the farewell look at the one so dear to their hearts, but the assurance that he will exist in the bright beyond is a comfort to the bereaved family.

We cannot understand why one loved so well and used on this earth should be taken away, but to the will of Him who doeth all things for the best, we bow in humble submission. His Wife and Children.

Carrollton — Mrs. E. J. Seppenfield, for many years a teacher in Carrollton's public schools, has been selected by the trustees of the different school districts as county school attendance officer. She will have charge of the entire county.

Carlisle. — Sheriff James Myers, of this county, brought to this office here a freak vegetable, which was found in a garden, which he and Jailer Russell Lawrence, of this county, have near this city. It was a potato vine on which were growing six small green tomatoes, the largest about half as big as a hens egg. Mr. Myers says he found the strange freak when he pulled up a hill of potatoes near which some tomato vines were growing.

Carlisle. — W. I. Dorsey, business man of this city, reports he stopped at Pike's Peak, in Colorado, on his return from Portland, Ore., and while descending the mountain suddenly discovered that his hearing had returned. Mr. Dorsey's hearing had been bad for several years and had been growing worse. He says he can now hear as clearly as any ordinary person.

Frankfort—The state road fund for 1920 will total $2,750,000, is the estimate of Joe Boggs, State Highway Engineer. Of this sum $1,700,000 will be derived from the tax on motor horsepower, $450,000 from the one-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax and $500,000 from the three-cent road tax. These figures show that the automobiles owners of the state will pay $2,150,000 of the road fund, the remainder being derived from the ad valorem tax. The plans of the Highway Commission for next year call for maintenance of about 300 miles of the state highway system designated by the last session of the General Assembly, at a cost of $1,000 a mile.

FOURTH RED CROSS ROLL CALL ANNOUNCED

Announcing the Fourth Red Cross Roll Call, to be held between November 11 and November 25, 1920, Dr. Livingston Farrand, chairman of the Central Committee, made known the fact that as a result of last year's Roll Call, the American Red Cross has ten million members.

The Red Cross has decided to make each anniversary of the ending of the world war the occasion for renewing allegiance to the "Greatest Mother" by means of the roll call membership. Thus the Fourth Roll Call will have for its purpose the maintenance of as nearly universal membership as possible and the support of peace time activities.

These activities are continuation of measures in behalf of the members of the World War, particularly the disabled; service to the peace time Army and Navy, development of a stouter resistance to disease through health centers, increasing of the country's nursing resources, continued preparation for disaster relief, Home Service and community work and completion of relief work among the war-exhausted and diseased peoples overseas.

QUESTIONNAIRE BRINGS MONEY FOR VACATION

In a certain Lake Division town, there's a mother of a former soldier who has nearly $100 extra to spend for herself this summer.

The Red Cross Home Service section in that community sent questionnaires to all ex-service men, asking them if all their war-time affairs had been satisfactorily settled.

The particular soldier in question was discharged soon after the Armistice and had never learned that some travel pay was due him. After he had read over the questionnaire he decided to look up the Home Service secretary and find out about some of the things noted among the queries.

As a result he just received a check for $98.48 that he didn't know he was due him until the Red Cross questionnaire came. He gave the money to his mother for a vacation. This is a typical example of the service given by the Red Cross.

RED CROSS NURSES WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

Nine Red Cross chapters in the Lake Division have given scholarships for a four-months' post graduate course in Public Health Nursing at Western Reserve University, Ohio, to nurses in their communities.

On completion of their study Sept. 1, they will return to their homes and carry on the Public Health Nursing program of the Red Cross, which includes visiting nursing, school nursing, instruction work, and general community service in caring for health.

Chapters which have awarded these scholarships are Richmond, Union County, Ohio; Lagrange, Ind.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Montpelier, Williams County, Ohio; Zanesville, Ohio; Benzil, Ind.; South Bend, Ind.; West Alexandria, Ohio, and Bluffton, Ind.

TRAINING COURSES OPEN FOR TRAINING RED CROSS WORKERS

In the summer session at Ohio State University, Columbus, the Red Cross, in co-operation with the university, is offering a six-weeks' course of training for persons who wish to become Red Cross executive secretaries or chapter managers.

This is designed to meet the demand for trained executives to promote the Red Cross peace time program. Instructors include prominent men on the university faculty, National and Divisional Red Cross leaders and others of national repute.

COMMUNITY INSPIRED TO INCORPORATE TOWN

Coke Otto, a small mining community near Hamilton, Ohio, isn't content to be just a group of people any longer.

Coke Otto wants to be an incorporated town. And it's all the result of community meetings and activities inaugurated by the Rural Extension Secretary of Hamilton Chapter of the Red Cross.

When Hamilton engaged its rural worker, she went among other places to Coke Otto, where perhaps 700 people live. Sanitary conditions were very lax there, so one of the first movements was the organization of a "tin can brigade." This was divided into eight sub-regiments and prizes were offered the group that kept the most rubbish out of the community for a specified length of time.

Subsequent community meetings have shown the people of Coke Otto the need for street clean-ups, flood protection and sanitation. After the third meeting the community decided that better and quicker results could be obtained through united effort. Hence the plan to become an incorporated town.

Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving Day, November 25—the Fourth Red Cross Roll Call.

RIDDING HOUSES OF VERMIN

Outline of Method Recommended by Poultry Specialists of Department of Agriculture.

The following method of ridding hen houses of mites and lice, when the weather conditions are such as to permit of the birds being kept outside the house for five or six hours, is recommended by poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture.

Close all the doors and windows and see that there are no cracks or any other openings to admit air. Set an iron vessel on gravel or sand near the center of the house. Place in the vessel a handful of shavings or straw saturated with kerosene and on these sprinkle sulphur at the rate of about one pound to every 50 or 100 square feet of floor space. Instead of using the shavings and kerosene the sulphur may be saturated with wood alcohol.

When everything else is in readiness, light the material and hastily leave the house. In case any anxiety is felt about fire, a glance through a window will show whether everything is all right. There is very little danger of fire when proper precautions have been taken to have plenty of soil beneath the vessel. After three or four hours, throw all the doors and the windows wide open to drive out the sulphur fumes thoroughly. Then let the fowls in one by one. As each enters, catch it and dust it well with insect powder, which will destroy the lice on the birds. Tobacco dust is also good to use instead of insect powder.

The birds and house have now been freed from vermin for the present, but the eggs of the insects have not been destroyed, and in a week another swarm will be hatched out. Therefore it will be necessary to repeat the operation once or twice before the pests are exterminated. After this care should be used to see that no strange fowl is admitted to the house or yard without having been thoroughly rid of lice, for one lousy hen will contaminate all the rest.

GIVE GROWING CHICKS MILK

Where Supply Can Be Obtained It Should Be Kept Before Them in Open Dish or Pan.

Nothing is better for growing chicks than a liberal supply of sour milk. If it can be obtained it always should be kept before them in an open dish or pan where they can eat and drink it freely. Where sour milk is fed, the amount of beef scrap in the dry mash may be reduced one-half.

Fresh, clean water is absolutely necessary for all growing chicks. In hot weather it should be given twice daily and put into fountain or dishes and placed in the shade so as to keep as cool as possible. Clean the water dish thoroughly each day before filling.

SURPLUS FOWLS PROFITABLE

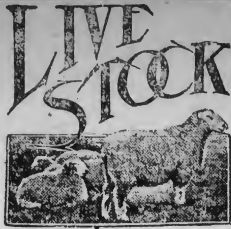

Males and Females That Have Outgrown Their Usefulness Provide Additional Income.

Most farmers find the profit in the commercial end of the poultry business in market eggs, but the surplus males and the females that have outgrown their usefulness provide an additional income which is worth while.

GEESSE MAKE GOOD FORAGERS

Fowls Pick Up Large Portion of Their Ration If Allowed Free Range on Farm.

All geese are good foragers and even when young will pick up a large part of their ration if allowed free range on the farm. They eat grass and fresh vegetable growths of all kinds, as well as bugs and worms.

MEDIUM AND HEAVY HORSES

Market Preferences Are Now for Drafters and Southern Chunks, According to Reports.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although horses on farms slightly decreased in number in the United States in 1918, this general fact is by no means true in all sections. It is true in the North from the Atlantic Ocean to Iowa and Missouri, and on the Pacific coast, but the reverse is the fact in one-half of the South, and in nearly the whole region between the Mississippi river and the coast states, except Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, and Oklahoma.

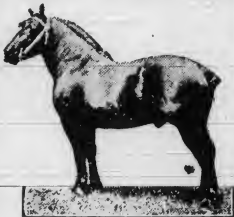

In the North and in the Pacific states the kind of horse that is preferred on and off farms is changing. The automobile owner does not want a driving horse and the farmer with an automobile does not need a dual-purpose horse—a work animal that will also serve as a road horse. Medium and heavy draft horses are the new requirements.

This tendency is reflected in prices. In the Chicago market the mean price of draft horses rose from $171 in the five years, 1901-1905, to $213 in 1914. The mean price declined in the early period of the war to $205 in 1915, but ascended to $252 in 1916, fell to $212 in 1917, and recovered to $230 in 1918 or 20 per cent above the mean price of the five years, 1901-1905. The class of horses known in the Chicago market as "general" had the mean of $143 in the first five years of the century and reached as high a mark as $165 in 1913, but the mean for 1918 was $152, or 6 per cent above that of the five years.

Carriage teams and drivers are small features of the market. There is little demand for them and the supply corresponds. However, showy carriage teams sold for $1,500 to $10,000 in 1918. "Bussers and trimmers" have been fully out of the market for several years.

The active southern demand for the "southern chunks" sent the mean price in Chicago from $81 in the five years, 1901-1905 to $98 in 1913, followed by $88 in 1915, $100 in 1916, $93 in 1917, and $90 in 1918, a gain of 45 per cent in 15 years.

Hence, in the vicissitudes of preference and unpopularity in the various sections of the country, on farms and off, the average price of a horse on farms in the United States, all ages

A Good Type of Draft Horse.

Included, climbed from $55.47 on January 1, 1901-1905, to $111.40 in 1913, after which the decline was irregular to $98.48 on January 1, 1918, according to reports of the Bureau of Crop Estimates, United States Department of Agriculture. The market preferences are now for drafters and southern chunks.

FEED OAT STRAW TO HORSES

Gives Nearly as Good Results in Feeding Animals at Light Work as Timothy Hay.

Oat straw gave nearly as good results in feeding horses at light work as timothy hay, according to an experiment at the Missouri experiment station. In each case 1,400-pound horses were fed 15 pounds corn and cob meal and one and two-thirds pounds oil meal daily. At the North Dakota experiment station it was found that horses when fed oats or bran and shorts needed about a fourth more grain feed when fed oat straw than when given upland prairie hay.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Plenty of exercise for the sow is important if healthy pigs are desired.

Rape will make a good hog pasture earlier than anything else we can sow in the spring.

The outlook for live stock raising is brighter than that of raising crops to be sold before the farmer's profit can be had.

As soon as the pigs will... usually at four or five weeks of age, they should be fed separately from their dam.

TESTING VARIETIES OF MARKET PEANUTS

Experimental Work by the Bureau of Plant Industry.

Selected Strains Are Being Made With a View of Producing Those More Particularly Adaptable for Definite Purposes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most of the so-called varieties of peanuts now to be found in the trade in the United States are merely low-standard varieties with new or local names, and there are only a few distinct varieties grown in this country. This statement is made by the chief of plant industry, in reporting on experimental work with peanuts. This work has included methods of planting, selection of seed, improvement of yield, and cultivation and handling of the crop. Selected strains of some of the varieties are being made with a view to producing those more particularly adaptable for definite purposes, such as the making of high-grade table and cooking oil or an oil that may be used in the manufacture of oleomargarine, and to some extent in making soap. Other purposes for which selections are being made are those adapted for human food in the form of peanut meal, peanut butter, and other products, and high-yielding strains for stock and dairy feeds.

Variety for the Gulf Coast Region.

LOW GRADE WHEAT FOR FEED

Does Not Contain Quite as Much Fattening Material as Corn, But More Protein.

If your wheat grades very low, you should consider whether it is not worth more to you for feeding purposes. At the present prices of feeds, wheat should be worth $1.50 per bushel for feed, particularly if there is some dockage in it. Wheat does not contain quite as much fattening material as corn, but more protein, which is the milk producing and growing substance. For this reason it makes an excellent feed for milk for cows as a part of the grain ration. It also will make a good feed for pigs.

VENTILATION

Ventilation is as important a matter in the barn as in the house, and no barn should be built without care being given to supplying fresh air for the stock. Some sort of a vent should be placed at the top of any reasonably closely enclosed barn, as the foul air will otherwise hang under the roof and eventually make all the air in the barn bad. The cool, pure air will find its way in if there is a way for the warmer foul air to escape.

MAKE START WITH ALFALFA

Easier to Get Stand Where Sweet Clover Has Been Previously Grown—Bacteria Needed.

It seems to be somewhat easier to get alfalfa started where sweet clover has been previously grown, as the sweet clover is more likely to give a better infestation of the proper bacteria to the soil, but it is not necessary to grow sweet clover first, when the alfalfa seed is well inoculated. Even if sweet clover is to be grown first its seed should be inoculated or it may not grow much.

VEGETABLE MATTER FOR SOIL

Grass or Sod Crops Are Most Valuable as Basis for More Humus—Other Good Methods.

There are many well-known methods of supplying the necessary vegetable matter to the soil. Crop residues is usually the basis of more humus. Grass or sod crops are the most valuable in this respect. Stable manure is also of great value in increasing humus. Winter cover crops, such as annual clover, vetch, or rye, are now extensively grown to be turned under in the early spring.

The KITCHEN CABINET

"A little love, a little trust,
A soft impulse, a sudden dream,
And life as dry as desert dust
Is fresher than a mountain stream."

SOME MEXICAN DISHES.

For those who enjoy the spicy, peppery dishes of the South, these dishes will appeal:

Scrambled Eggs With Chili.—Break six eggs, add a tablespoonful of water and a dash of chili powder for each egg; also salt and pepper to taste. Beat lightly until the eggs are well mixed. Pour into a heated pan greased with bacon fat or sweet dripping. Stir until thick and creamy. Serve on hot buttered toast.

Combination Salad.—Use one cucumber, two young onions, three small radishes, four stalks of celery, two firm ripe tomatoes, all cut in pieces; place in a salad bowl lined with lettuce leaves. Prepare a dressing of one-half cupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of bacon, one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of chili powder. Bring to a boil, then cool and pour over the salad.

Tomato Jelly.—Cook one quart of tomatoes for ten minutes, add one teaspoonful of chili powder and cook eight to ten minutes. Strain in one-third of a package of gelatin softened in cold water; stir until well dissolved, strain and add salt to taste, then set away to cool. When the jelly is firm cut in cubes; Serve on lettuce with myronaise.

Chili Con Carni.—Take one pound of beef from the round, one-third of a pound of pork steaks, chop fine. Fry two slices of diced bacon; brown or cook the meat in the bacon fat. Into a kettle put one quart of tomato, add one chopped onion browned in the bacon fat. Putting the tomatoes through a sieve improves the dish. Add meat and simmer one hour. Just a few minutes before serving add one can of red kidney beans. For seasoning, add one tablespoonful of chili powder, salt to taste and one chili pepper dropped into the kettle and cooked with the mixture. The pepper is removed before serving.

Veal Goulish.—Put into a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two minced onions, and a few slices of bacon. Cover and cook until brown, then add one can of milk and chili powder to season. Do not put any water into the dish but cook until tender.

To hear the... brushes some late... When broken, fading shafts of light... To swing along the rugged trail that... and hemlock climb... "The... will be up you come to stand exalted in the sun! Ah, this is summer time."

ORIGINAL DESIGNS IN COOKERY.

To the artist cook who really enjoys mixing ingredients, as a painter does his colors, there is no limit to the tasty, delightful dishes which one may originate or enlarge upon, with the materials at hand. Take for instance a steamed plum pudding. A piece of bread, a half a cupful of cooked oatmeal, a few brand crumbs, a cupful of left-over corn and a few raisins with two egg yolks left from a frosting or dessert will make a most tasty pudding. After some experience in handling foods one may concoct toothsome dishes of bits of left-overs. It is not always wise to tell all one knows as to a dish, for some conscientious objectors will refuse to even try a make-over or re-arranged food.

Savory salads which have some elusive aroma and seasoning which adds to their charm and is hard to determine, makes such a dish "something different." One must follow a few fundamental principles in cookery, and give that let the imagination soar. The cook who wastes nothing, but at the same time serves her food in a dainty, tasty and appetizing manner, is a real genius, and her talents are in constant demand.

Do you throw away the half-cupful, cupful or more of melted ice cream that might make a pudding for the next day or he used in a cake, adding less sugar?

Sandwich filling and salads make a wide field for original designs, as well as flour mixtures. The woman who discovered that a sponge cake could be made more fetching by adding the yolks unbroken, one at a time, and not stirring them very freely, had a cake that attracted much comment because of its streaked gold and white appearance. Accident often is the mother of new things, but the clever cook is looking for new and pleasing effects will find them all the while.

ELECT STRONG COUNTY BOARD

Thinking and Patriotic People In Each County Are Urged To Act

Problem of the Rural School Will Be Well on Its Way Toward Solution When Interest in School Matters Is Manifest.

The editor realizes the crisis in educational matters which Kentucky and the whole country is facing, so he has been giving the readers of this paper a series of articles, statements and cartoons to help put Kentucky on the educational map. The reader recalls, of course, that the last legislature passed some strong new school laws; but with the multiplicity of new laws on the statute books, he or she is quite apt to have a rather hazy idea of the law creating the new County Boards of Education to be elected next November. As the act creating these County Boards of Education is too long to be printed in full, the editor is giving an outline of it below.

The new County Board of Education is to be composed of five members elected from the county at large. The candidates for this office are secured by fifty voters signing a petition to have each name placed on the ballot. Any number of candidates may be placed on this separate ballot which shall carry no party emblem or device, save the words "School Ticket." The five candidates receiving the largest number of votes shall become members of the County Board of Education.

This County Board of Education selects a county superintendent of schools and decides upon the salary which can not, under the law, be less than $1,200 a year. The board will also appoint in each school district a trustee who shall look after the school property; but shall have no voice in the County Board.

This same County Board of Education shall fix the rate of taxation for school purposes in the county; but before doing so shall, with the help of the county superintendent, make an itemized and detailed budget of all school expenses.

This act, also, provides that the County Board of Education shall appoint at least one attendance officer whose duties shall be to compel the regular attendance of all pupil children at school as provided by law.

It is needless for the editor to say in conclusion that this new law will do much toward taking the county schools out of politics. If the thinking and patriotic people of the whole country will interest themselves in the selection and election of a strong County Board of Education, the problem of the rural school in the county will be well on its way toward solution. The fact that the editor is giving this space to a discussion of the school problem when newsprint is both scarce and expensive and the added fact that prominent men are writing strong statements for the press urging the people to get behind their schools, means that we must make our rural schools better if we are to have a contented population in the country, and thus strengthen the nation.

EDUCATION KILLS AGITATION

Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, has the following to say concerning the value of education:

"The best way to meet the evils of ultra-radical agitation is with the reason which proper education applies. I regard education as the best remedy for mistakes or false political conceptions."

LACK OF TEACHERS SERIOUS PROBLEM

Solution At Moment Is Selection of County Boards of Education

Every Real, Fine, True, Red-Blooded Man and Woman in Kentucky Urged to Get Busy at Once and Interest Themselves in School Matters.

Every county in Kentucky was short of rural teachers last year. Every county in Kentucky will be short teachers again this season. This is a serious proposition especially as the number of men and women passing the examinations lately held for teachers' primary certificates was quite small. Of course, the new minimum salary of $75.00 per month for rural teachers will help the situation in the future; but the best possible solution of the problem right at this moment is the selection and election of a strong County Board of Education at the November election.

The reader should not think of this problem as a strictly Kentucky affair for it is a nation wide and extremely serious. Dr. P. P. Claxton, Commissioner of Education of the United States, recently asserted before the National Citizens' Conference at Washington, D. C.:

"The new conditions require that the schools shall be more efficient and more effective than they have been in the past and we are faced with the danger that they may not be as effective as in the past. We are confronted with a great shortage of teachers, and there seems to be little chance of immediate relief. According to the most careful estimates that can be secured, between three hundred and four hundred thousand children were deprived of schooling this past year because of school closed as the result of shortage."

Even more serious is the rapidly growing number of sub-standard teachers. More than half the teachers of the nation—350,000—are not prepared on any reasonable basis for the work of teaching, a reasonable basis being understood to mean the minimum standard that progressive communities have long insisted upon—two years of professional training beyond the four-year high-school course.

"A conservative figure for the number of new teachers that will be required this fall is 110,000. It is more likely to be 150,000, and it may reach 180,000. The graduates of normal schools this year will be 25 per cent fewer than in 1916; they will total about 16,000. If we add to these the largest possible number we can conceive of from other teacher-training institutions, we shall have at the outside 30,000 prepared teachers to fill the vacancies, or a deficit of at least 80,000."

Good County Boards of Education have always been needed in each and every county in the state; but they are today a vital and absolute necessity for the welfare of the county, the state and the nation. "Every real, fine, true, red-blooded man and woman in Kentucky should get busy at once and see to it that the new Boards of Education are composed of citizens who will do big and constructive work for the boys and girls on the farms."

THINK IT OVER

A letter reaching the Bureau of Education at Washington lately from an ordinary citizen contained the following pithy sentence:

"In the city they won't give people with children a house; and in the country they won't give us a school." Think it over carefully.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

DELCO-LIGHT

THE RETURNED SOLDIER

How He Feels About Farm Conveniences.

The boy who has come back to the farm from the army has had a great experience. If he's been over to France, he's come back overflowing with pride in the American way of doing things and particularly in American methods of farming.

When he was billeted in a small French village with the rest of his battalion he saw the crudest kind of farm implements used. He saw the back-breaking toil that is necessitated by the lack of modern farm equipment. And for the first time he realized what it means to have a modern farm. It has really meant to him the comfort and leisure, but from the standpoint of production and profit as well, to have American farm machinery to help with the work.

The army has taught him the value of living conveniences, too. When he first went to camp in this country he missed home cooking and lots of the old-fashioned comforts he had always had. But he found something new—electric lights and running water. Wherever he went in camp—his own quarters, the Y. M. C. A., the camp theater or the visitors' house, he found bright, clean electric light burning, always ready for instant use, on or off at the touch of a button. When he got up in the morning he found running water to wash in, hot and cold. He learned how fine it feels to take a cold shower on turning out in the morning or after the day's drilling is done.

The returning farm boy is mighty glad to get back to the old home and to take up the old life again for the comfort, convenience and health of the whole family. He's going to be a mighty strong advocate of DELCO lights, running water and all the other modern conveniences.

PENDLETON COUNTY

Falmouth Outlook.
Every night during the Chautauq a lot of unnecessary disturbance was caused by people cranking Ford's which had been hitched near the tent. Instead of starting the machines properly, these rules threw the cut-out open at speed. This is a nuisance that should be stopped immediately by the authorities. Not only are Chautauq and public gatherings thus disturbed, but the sanctity of religious worship is often rudely broken in upon by the roaring of a Ford engine. Those who know no other way of starting their Ford's than by this method should be made park their machines on the edge of town, and not allowed to bring them on the city streets. At present, this is the worst nuisance Falmouth has to contend with.

We have made a forty-mile trip through Pendleton county and have never seen the crop prospects brighter than they are at the present time. Crops are free from weeds, have a splendid color and are in good growth. The strangest thing, however, is that we note five women working in the fields to one man. We don't know where the men folk were on the particular day, unless they were taking their regular daily nap or doing the family washing. But we do know that the women folks are not letting any grass grow under their feet nor weeds in the tobacco patch. Next winter we expect to observe that the women are selling fifty per cent of the tobacco on the loose leaf market.

The American Press, a newspaper, made publication recently conducted a sweeping investigation of the paper trust and their findings tally exactly with our views which we have expressed from time to time in the Outlook. This newspaper trust, headed by the daily newspapers, is buying the newspaper as fast as it can be manufactured at a price around five cents and what they can not use themselves they place on the market and bid against the smaller users for their purchase, thereby boosting the price to where it is almost prohibitive. If the government does not prosecute these rascals, the country weekly will be a thing of the past in a few more years.

There has not been a great deal of activity in real estate transactions in Pendleton county since March 1st. This is always a dull season in land sales. The good crop prospects, however, have given prospective buyers renewed courage, and we predict that the market will open up early this fall, and a good deal of land will change hands. Prospective buyers have been a little skeptical about land values holding up, but we believe this is a false impression created by alarmists who have nothing themselves and dislike to see others prosper. The good year is bound to make for stabilization of land values. Land values in Pendleton have, it is true, reached a high level; but we expect this standard to hold up, for no man would sell a lower price for his land than he paid for it.

Sixty-Cent Jump in Flour.

As a result of an acute situation in cash wheat prices of flour advanced 50 cents a barrel yesterday, making the price in carlots in cotton sacks, Louisville, from the mill stand at $14.60 a barrel.

The cash wheat situation has become alarming. At St. Louis on Saturday afternoon new wheat arrivals were held over, because commission houses refused to sell for less than $2.90 a bushel. Farmers are holding back their new wheat crops, and firmly believe that they will receive $3 a bushel for their grain. Although the old wheat touched $3.11 a bushel in the spring, there were carrying charges, interest, storage, to be figured, through the crop over. It had been anticipated that new wheat would start moving at around the unheard price of $2.75 a bushel this season.

Last week practically no wheat came on the local market, and one buyer reported that he had paid an average of $2.77 a bushel for some 5,000 bushels purchased. Exporters are anxious for wheat and are reported to be bidding $3 a bushel for wheat at gulf ports, regardless of quality. Exporters are now the principal buyers as domestic demand for flour is not heavy, and millers are paying a waiting game. However, mills of the Southeast are generally short of wheat, and have started bidding up prices in order to get some wheat at some price to take care of present demand.

No declines in prices are anticipated on the early movement of new wheat, due to the export demand, shortage for immediate consumption and shortage of railroad cars, which will curtail early movement from farms—Louisville Post.

An Early Crop.

Lloyd Weaver and Robert Popham began topping a very fine crop of tobacco last week. Mr. Weaver's tobacco has required so close attention that he has not had time to do much fishing this season, consequently there is an unusually large number of fish in the creek at this time of the year in his neighborhood. A little later on he will become more congenial with the funny tribe.

UNION.

The Ladies Missionary and Aid Society of the Baptist church celebrated their 33rd birthday at the delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Bristow on the afternoon of the 16th inst. Invitations had been sent out to all ladies who had ever been members and more than 30 responded. Some from other states who could not come sent letters which were read and enjoyed by those present. An informal program was rendered, closing with a history of the society from its date of organization, 1861, and by Mrs. J. A. Huey. The paper recalled many pleasant days in which the ladies were busy giving entertainments, serving lunches, packing boxes for our own needy, Frontier Missions, and Orphans' Home, and doing many other things worth while. Our hearts were made sad when so many names were recalled of members who have passed to their reward. They in truth were "of good deeds which they did."
Most tempting refreshments were served by Mrs. Bristow's daughters, Mrs. Kirtley Adams and Misses Lillian and Kathryn Bristow, assisted by Miss Ruth Kelly. The Society received a nice silver offering as a birthday present. Those present were:

FARMERS LEARNING BENEFIT OF CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

A Busy Grain Elevator, the Purpose of Which is to Effect Savings for its Members Because It is a Co-operative Institution.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
"See that bunch of horses over yonder?" asked the farmer, indicating six or seven animals which were impatiently crowding against a fence in an endeavor to nibble some corn growing just beyond the reach of their outstretched noses. "There's a marketing lesson in what those horses are doing. If they only knew it a little pushing in unison would lay that fence flat, but the trouble is they don't understand, and so they won't push together."

Then, after a pause: "Human folks are a bit like those horses. A lot of them don't know how to push—and pull—in unison. Think of the untold millions of those animals have, and think of the infinitely greater power we intelligent humans have, when we learn to co-operate. That's the word: Co-operation! A good many farmers have learned its big advantages, but their number is still small beside the millions who might benefit from it."

"There is the Tillamook County Creamery association, for example," continued the farmer. "That's a wonderful organization which has set a lot of people to thinking; and the beauty of it is, their achievements are getting bigger every year."

Recent Figures From Tillamook.
This farmer's thoughts had been turned toward co-operative marketing by reading a recent report from Tillamook County Creamery association in Oregon, composed of 25 farmer-factories which co-operate in the sale of their products. The report of the secretary-manager for 1919 indicates that the total sales of cheese from these 25 factories amounted to $1,654,080, with additional receipts for whey cream of $23,305 and for whey butter, $2,500. With the estimated sales from miscellaneous sources amounting to $18,035, the total for the year was $2,007,475.
In the first year of its existence, 1909, this organization handled 32,000,000 pounds of milk and 2,500,000 pounds of cheese, and its sales totaled $390,185, showing that the total sales almost quadrupled in ten years. The sales for the entire decade reached the astonishing total of $8,612,000. Thus far the production for 1920 is running 23 per cent ahead of 1919, and 1919 was 20 per cent over 1918. Four factors have played an essential part in making this co-operative achievement possible, and they apply very generally to co-operative marketing of farm products. First, the farmers were brought to clearly recognize the needs for united effort in solving their marketing difficulties. Second, there was available in their communities a volume of business sufficient to make co-operation worth while. Third, given these two conditions, the farmers met the need by adopting and enforcing standards for their dairy products. This has improved the quality of the output, and has produced uniformity, thus making possible the effective use of a brand and of advertising on a large scale. Fourth, the association has employed efficient sales methods.

Standardization Essential.
The difficulty of pooling the output of several cheese factories in Tillamook county lay in the absence of standardization. In consequence, the association engaged an inspector and placed him in general supervision over the cheese making of the member factories. From the start this inspector has made regular visits to each plant, giving suggestions and assistance when needed. The money spent in his salary has repaid the association many times over.

This cheese is inspected, and if found to conform to the standard set up by the association, is sold under the organization's brand. This brand has become known in nearly every market on the Pacific coast, and the reputation which has been built up for this association's cheese gives that body a decided advantage in the market. In many other lines the co-operative principle has been tried out with pronounced success, notably in fruit and vegetable marketing associations, grain elevator companies, and co-operative creameries. Farmers have also proved the value of co-operative purchasing. Anyone interested in co-operative marketing or purchasing should write for information to the bureau of markets, United States department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., whose experts have made a careful study of the subject.

CEREALS FOR BREAD SUPPLY

Corn, Wheat and Buckwheat, Staple Breadstuffs, are Raised Nearly Everywhere.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cereals, such as corn, wheat, and buckwheat, are raised nearly everywhere throughout the United States. These grains are staple breadstuffs, but the general practice of farmers is to buy flour and meal rather than grind or have their own grain ground for home use. In certain sections where custom grind mills are found, farmers still have some grain to grind for home use. Occasionally a farmer is found who has his own little mill and who makes his own flour and meal.

The average farm family consumes about 6 barrels of flour in a year. In the South, the average annual consumption of corn meal is about 500 pounds per family and in the North about 50 pounds. The consumption of buckwheat and rice is low, except in areas where these crops are generally grown, and even there it is usually less than 100 pounds per family. Most farm families use home-baked bread, though in some cases the farmers buy their bread from bakers who drive through the country.

SCRUBS

A scrub is an animal of mixed or unknown breeding, without definite type or markings. Such terms as native, mongrel, ruzor-back, dunghill, pliney woods, cynuse, broncho and mustang are somewhat synonymous with "scrub," although many of the animals described by these terms have certain fixity of type even though they present no evidence of systematic improved breeding.

GOOD BUSINESS PROPOSITION

No More Do We Look Upon Selection of Seed Corn as Fod—Now Thoroughly Approved.

Time was when the selection of seed corn on the farm was looked upon somewhat as a fad. Scarcely, though, has changed until today we have come to consider the field selection of seed corn as a thoroughly approved business proposition.

Local Happenings.

As the date for the primary election approaches the voters begin to take more interest and discuss the candidates with more freedom. There is one before the Democratic party asking a nomination for Congress in which the people of this county should take pride in voting for—Hon. A. B. Rouse. Mr. Rouse has more the district a faithful representative and has been on the job all the time looking after the interest of his district. He has never let an opportunity pass to assist those who have called upon him, and he has done this work in a manner that showed it is a pleasure for him to serve the people, no matter what the politics or religion of the party was. When it comes to rendering a public service people all look alike to Congressman Rouse, and the Democrats will show their appreciation of a worthy servant at the polls on the 7th of next month.

Last Sunday morning, Essi Chas. Wilson, of Rabbit Hash, held an inquest on the body of a boy found in the river at John L. Jones landing. The boy appeared to be between the ages of 10 and 12 years, about 4 1/2 feet tall, dark brown hair closely cropped, body entirely nude. The jury believed that the boy was drowned accidentally. The body was found in the sand on shore twenty feet from the water. It is supposed to be the body of a boy who was drowned while bathing at the city a few Sundays ago.

Fisherman's Luck.

Robert Muntz, who lives out in the Beaver neighborhood when he is at home, tells of catching a rat in a trap and taking it to James Run to drown the rodent. He thought the easiest way to immerse trap rat and all, and accordingly placed the trap in the water. Being called away on an errand, he became busy and forgot all about the matter until some time afterward. When he thought it again and went to get his trap he found it gone. Later the trap was found in the water some distance down the stream. The trap was closed, the rat was gone, but inside the trap was a big catfish.

Mr. Muntz also tells of a party getting a bite while fishing recently. On giving the necessary jerk he not only caught the fish but had been attracted by his bait but a string of good sized fish that had escaped from a fisherman at some other place on the river and had been unable to get loose.

How's that for fisherman's luck?—Cynthiana Democrat.

The Larceny Epidemic.

Thievesy is at high tide in the United States. Never in the history of the Nation was larceny so prevalent and all-embracing. The gamut is being run from daylight robbery on crowded city streets to nocturnal invasions of suburban cellars which are suspected of being caches for intoxicating liquors.

It is not strange, therefore, that some picturesque phases of the gentle art of stealing things should come to light in the current news. The man who stole a red nose in the days when pickering lacked finesse and in relative achieved fame because his exploit was daring and unusual. Many of the larceny thieves have surpassed his performance since that time.

The Kansas tramp who recently stole a farmer's watch dog and later came back with the carcass to claim reward was more original than the kitchen rapist who purloined the heated range. A few more difficult was accomplished by a few men in a Kentucky county when a thief of the Robin Hood type appropriated a flock of sixty sheep and made good his escape. His last whereabouts were from Coopersville, Penn., comes the story of the stealing of a vacant hospital which was not missed until a small boy, once stolen, Texas furnishes the story of a man who filched his mother's wedding dress to buy lemon extract and a few who stole a county telephone system and sold the wire back to the company.

But these freakish peccadilloes are only flotsam bobbing on the tide of thievery more original than that some oddities of the rogues' craft should come to light coincident with the chronicling of a national larceny epidemic. Cases reflecting the humor, novelty and grotesquerie of the robber guild are common enough but by no means the least of the thousands of thousands of cold-blooded and shrewdly calculated crimes against property which range from the theft of a national bank.

What is the psychology, etiology, demography, or what lot of the larceny outbreak? Have the spectacle of the profiteer and the larceny thief become too much for the mettle of the good old commandment, "Thou shalt not steal"? Has the prospect of an all-gilted life become greater than the desire to live honestly and peacefully and to enjoy freedom and respect? What has brought the larceny thief to the point of vanishing? What false courage, what lusts of the flesh, impel the pea of the forger? What does the defaulter expect on the outside of his liberty and his reputation? Did the World War lower the morale of humanity to a point where latent defects of character were allowed to lie in wait for the opportunity which systemic poisons are sowing?

It is a grave question—a problem for psychologists and humanitarians as well as criminologists and jailers.

BASE BALL.

Bellevue Beats Burlington--Walton Too Much for Petersburg--Other Games.

Quite a large crowd of base ball fans witnessed the two games at Burlington last Saturday afternoon. The first game was between Burlington and Bellevue, and was won by the latter by a score of 5 to 1.

Robert Lassing was in the box for Burlington and was caught by Mont Slayback, while Porter Shinkle was the visitors' batsman and was caught by Ryle who handled his twisters in good style.

The game was opened by Ryle, Lassing, producing one run. In the second, third and fourth innings Bellevue was held runnerless, but in the fifth inning the two errors, Rogers' single and a hit batsman put three across the rubber. In the sixth W. Ryle single, Shinkle fly to Slayback, while Rogers' single, Lassing grounded out, away from him and Ryle scored. Cloré on Lenhoff to Tolin. Ryle flew to Slayback, end of Bellevue run getting.

Burlington never saw home plate until in the eighth inning although it got a single and base on balls in the fifth. In the second, a double in the 4th, a base on balls and a single in the fifth. The farmers have had another good week in which to do their harvesting, which work is well along. Crops generally in the county are late this year but are now making up for lost time and will make a good yield yet if the season favors them. A good, general rain is needed the country over, and in some neighborhoods a rain is needed badly they having had none for some time. The hot winds last Thursday and Friday were very hard on the early corn which is silking and tasseling, curling it badly each day.

As Miss Lizzie Rogers was going to Walton one evening last week a Ford driven by a stranger collided with the Buick she was driving. Both machines were damaged slightly. The collision happened near the bridge across the Q & C Railroad north of Walton. Miss Lizzie saw the Ford coming at a terrific speed and stopped her car to avoid a collision but the occupant of the Ford came on regardless of the rights of other people on the highway and barely avoided what might have proven a very bad smashup. He had the manhood to acknowledge that he was to blame for the accident, but forgot to offer to make good the damages.

As Judge Gaines and Atty. John Pleck were coming through the country from the Warsaw court last week they came very near having what might have been a serious accident. Judge Gaines was driving his machine on a narrow road when he discovered another machine approaching him. He pulled off to the right in the weeds to give all the room he could, and all of a sudden his machine stopped. The machine having passed he got out to see what the trouble was and discovered that the front axle had struck the dirt because of the wheel having run in a ditch on the left beyond its depth. Had the machine gone a few feet further it would have plunged into the mouth of a deep culvert and turned upside down, and there is no telling what the result to the occupants might have been. The culvert and ditch were concealed by the weeds at this road side. It took considerable work to get the machine back onto the road.

Lifting By Boot Straps.

In watching the frantic struggles which people are making to elevate themselves above the age-old evils of human life, one wonders, sometimes, whether they are not attempting to lift themselves by their boot straps.

Some of the ills of life are certainly irremediable; some of its burdens cannot be unshaken; there was nothing for Atlas to do but carry the world which the gods had placed upon his back. We cannot get rid of old age, nor of sickness, nor of death, nor of sorrow, nor of many forms of failure, nor of unsatisfied longings, nor of labor. There is no lever to lift these burdens with, nor any fulcrum. They are, as I were, ourselves. To try to be rid of them is to attempt to be rid of ourselves. It is to lift ourselves by our boot straps.

Consider the folly of the almost universal attempt to reduce labor to the zero point, or at least to make it a sweetness and a painless task. No human mind can form a rational conception of a state in which toil will not be painful and incessant. Men may dream of such a state. They may even picture it in the foolish fancies of an idle waking hour. But to conceive it as an architect conceives, but to give it form before the inner eye as an attainable reality, is a psychological impossibility.

And this is for the simple reason that men are constituted so that the more they have the more they want; that the satisfaction of one desire is the generation of another; but to give them a horse to ride is to make them want a coach; to give them a coach is to make them want an automobile; to give them an automobile is to make them want an airship; and to give them an airship is to make them want God only knows what next.

Our desires must ever outrun their gratifications. They will always demand the highest exertion of all our powers to secure their momentary satisfaction. We shall have as many cravings for more of the instruments of ease and pleasure when our air castles become earthly paradises and we actually possess the luxuries and only dream of now as at the present moment.

Insatiable desire is the invincible taskmaster who will forever keep us at work and compel us to earn our bread and our luxuries in the sweat of our brows.—Enquirer.

PENDLETON COUNTY

An effort is going to be made by the authorities in Falmouth to prevent young girls from running the streets at night. Falmouth has gained a very bad reputation along this line, and there is entirely too much of it going on. Young girls from the ages of 12 to 20 are allowed by their parents or guardians to run practically without restraint, and they can be seen most any night loafing about the streets. There should be a stop put to this.

The county officials stopped the work on the Milford pike on day last week. There was not enough progress made for the amount of money being spent. Over $900 was spent in two weeks and the officials stopped the crew of men at once and refused to accept the time turned in. It is said the inexperienced young men were hired at $3.50 per day, when the market set a price of $3.00 per day. Men hired by the county that do not put in an honest days work should be dropped from the payroll at once.

The coal situation is growing more acute each day as the summer months pass by. Men who are able usually lay in their winters supply of coal during the summer months, but only a few are buying now, owing to the robbery prices. Every one is living in hopes that the government will put a check to the robbers, but so far nothing has been done along this line, and perhaps nothing will be done until the people rise up in their wrath and demand justice. Every day that people delay buying coal now will make the situation more serious this winter when all will be in the market for coal. It makes us froth at the mouth to hear coal operators say that the shortage of coal is responsible for the high price and slowness in shipment.

It looks to us like the railroads are working hand in hand with the operators to advance the price of coal. There is no shortage of coal cars. Almost every yard and side track on this section of the L. & N. is full of both full and empty coal cars. At Catawba, four miles north of Falmouth, there is a string of fifty cars loaded with coal that have been there for several months. After knowing these facts can a sane man believe that there is a shortage, or will he believe that there is an understanding between the coal operators and the railroads? Men who will bring misery and suffering to millions of women and children to fill their coffers with blood money should be treated as poisonous vipers. It is alright to make money and all of us are engaged in accumulating enough of this worlds goods for old age or a rainy day, but to torture women and children for gain is a crime that will not be tolerated in this free country.

During a recent trip through the southern part of the county we could not but notice the splendid condition of the crops. They were all worked out and clean of weeds. There's a reason. Every member of the family has a plow or a hoe from sunup to sundown. It seems that the people in this section of Pendleton have not heard of the eight-hour day, but still cling to old traditions, and put in fifteen hours out of the twenty-four. As an illustration of the hustling qualities of these good people, we noted the 10-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Simpson, of Blanket Creek, plowing corn like an old veteran. This is remarkable for a boy of his age, and we predict for this young agriculturalist a most successful future, as he is a boy made of the right kind of stuff.

PETERSBURG.

A crown of gladness overspread the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shinkle, Sunday morning, July 25, when all their children and several other relatives arrived with well filled baskets to celebrate her 46th birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Shinkle and children, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Shinkle and children, Porter Shinkle, wife and daughter, Bolivar Shinkle, Jr., wife and son, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Clore, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Surface, Roy Ryle, wife and son, Dodge Alloway and wife, and Bolivar Shinkle, Sr., and wife. All the children were home excepting Charlie, who is in the Navy, and is now on an eighteen months tour to various parts of foreign lands. Who last heard from was at Brest, France. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served under the shade trees and consisted of everything good to eat. Mrs. Shinkle received many nice and useful presents. The evening was spent in ball playing and card playing. Everybody had a delightful time, and all left wishing her many another happy birthday.

Jury No. 2 Agreed.

The patently charge of Mary Scholds against John Miscal, all of Beaver neighborhood, was given on a second hearing before Judge Riddell and a jury of six last Saturday. The charge was heard by a jury a few weeks ago but it could not agree, splitting even. The jury last Saturday found against the defendant and decided that he should pay $150 a year for ten years for the support of the child. The child was born last May. Rather than to give bond to secure the payment of the $150 a year Miscal chose to serve a ten day jail sentence which leaves him the only one responsible for the payment of the judgment.

Unusually Cool July.

This has been an unusually cool July. Very similar to our away back in the early fifties, when some of the oldest inhabitants are calling to mind. The corn and to-been crops are growing nicely altho warmer weather would be better. If a little more moisture were present, there has been only one or two nights this month that were so warm as to interfere with sleeping. It has been a delightful month for harvesting, and a very large quantity of grass has been put in the mow. The high price of feed for livestock has prompted many farmers to save the last vestige of hay their farms have produced this year and they will harvest a large crop of oats.

Duty on earth, restitution on earth, action on earth; these first, are the first steps upward.—Dickens.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

This is the season when liquid refreshment, prepared from various fruit juices, is most acceptable.

Vegetable Soup.—Cut into dice two carrots, a quarter of a small cabbage, half a turnip, half an onion, a potato and three stalks of celery. Fry all the vegetables in butter; add six cupsful of water or stock, and salt and pepper, to season. Simmer for half an hour and serve very hot with croutons.

Apple Soup.—Cook eight apples in as little water as possible until soft. Add sugar to taste and press through a sieve. Flavor with lemon juice and lemon rind; thicken with a tablespoonful of cornstarch, rubbed smooth with a little cold water. When cool add two cupsful of milk.

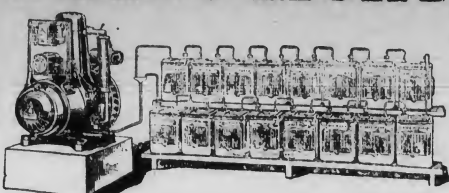

Ginger Ale Salad.—Soften one-quarter of a package of gelatin in one-quarter of a cupful of cold water and let stand to dissolve in a dish of hot water; add a grating of lemon rind and one and three-quarters cupsful of sugar. Turn into molds to set and chill. Serve very cold on heart leaves of lettuce, with mayonnaise dressing, to which three tablespoonfuls or more of cocktail sauce has been added.

Creamed Sweetbreads.—Parboil sweetbreads in a little acidulated water, drain and cut in small pieces. Make a cream sauce of half chicken broth and half cream thickened with flour and butter cooked together. Add the sweetbreads. A few cooked mushrooms and bits of chicken may be added if at hand, as they improve the dish in flavor.

Hamburg Sponge.—Soak a tablespoonful of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of water, then add the juice of an orange. Beat the yolks of three eggs with half a cupful of sugar until very light, then add the dissolved gelatin and a little of the integrated rind of the orange. Beat until it thickens then add the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Mold and chill. Serve with strawberries crushed with sugar.

DELCO-LIGHT

THE RETURNED SOLDIER

How He Feels About Farm Conveniences.

The boy who has come back to the farm from the army has had a great experience. If he has been over to France, he comes back overflowing with pride in the American way of doing things and particularly in American methods of farming.

When he was billeted in a small French village with the rest of his battalion he saw the crudest kind of farm implements used. He saw the back-breaking toil that is necessitated by the lack of modern farm equipment. And for the first time he realized what it has really meant to the American farm, not only in the matter of comfort and leisure, but from the standpoint of production and profit as well, to have American farm machinery to help with the work.

The army has taught him the value of living conveniences, too. When he first went to camp in this country he missed home cooking and lots of the old-fashioned comforts he had always had. But he found something new—electric lights and running water. Wherever he went in camp—his own quarters, the Y. M. C. A., the camp theater or the visitors' house, he found bright, clean electric light burning; always ready for instant use, on or off at the touch of a button. When he got up in the morning he found running water to wash in, hot and cold. He learned how fine it feels to take a cold shower on turning out in the morning or after the days drilling is done.

The returning farm boy is mighty glad to get back to the old home and to take up the old life but for the comfort, convenience and health of the whole family he's going to be a mighty strong advocate of DELCO lights, running water and all the other modern conveniences.

COULD HARDLY STAND ALONE

Terrible Suffering From Headache, Sideache, Backache, and Weakness, Relieved by Cardui, Says This Texas Lady.

Gonzales, Tex.—Mrs. Minnie Philpot, of this place, writes: "Five years ago I was taken with a pain in my left side. It was right under my left rib. It would commence with an aching and extend up into my left shoulder and on down into my back. By that time the pain would be so severe I would have to take to bed, and suffered usually about three days. I suffered this way for three years, and got to be a mere skeleton and was so weak I could hardly stand alone. Was not able to go anywhere and had to let my house work go. I suffered awful with a pain in my back and I had the headache all the time. I just was unable to do a thing. My life was a misery, my stomach got in an awful condition, caused from taking so much medicine. I suffered so much pain. I had just about given up all hopes of our getting anything to help me. One day a Birthday Almanac was thrown in my yard. After reading its testimonials I decided to try Cardui, and am so thankful that I did, for I began to improve when on the second bottle. I am now a well woman and feeling fine and the cure has been permanent for it has been two years since my awful bad health. I will always praise and recommend Cardui." Try Cardui today.

GOOD YEAR

American Legion-Victor Medal

On Tuesday, August 3rd at 8 p. m., Boone post will hold its regular meeting at the court house in Burlington. At this meeting the ladies are requested to attend and organize the Womens Auxiliary of Boone Post. A charter has been obtained and all members of the Legion are urged to insist that their mothers, sisters or wives join this organization. In addition to the organization of the Auxiliary the Post will take up several important subjects. Also there will be two delegates selected to attend the State Convention at Louisville Sept. 3 and 4. The new officers will appreciate a good attendance at this meeting and are anxious to have as many members present as possible.

Following is the description of the Victory Medal to be issued to all men who served in the late war. They are to be issued thru the American Legion, all members of the Legion or not should apply to the Post headquarters bringing with them their discharge certificates.

If you served only in the United States, you will get a plain ribbon and medal—without clasps or stars.

If you landed in France, but did not see action, you will get a medal and ribbon with a "France clasp," a narrow bar, with the name of the country on it, across the ribbon. Likewise there are bars for England, France and Russia, for those who served in these countries without getting into action.

If you took part in battle or served in a defensive sector, you will receive a clasp, like the "France clasp," but inscribed with the name of the battle or the defensive sector. You will receive a "battle clasp" for each battle in which you took part.

If you were cited for bravery, but did not receive a D. S. C. or Medal of Honor, you will get a silver star to be worn above the clasps. A separate silver star will be given for each citation of this character.

INDIANA NEWS.

Lawrenceburg Register. A train load of soldiers went over the B. & O. Saturday evening west bound.

George Terrill, of Boone county, Ky., has been awarded a new contract for carrying the mail between Lawrenceburg and Petersburg at the salary of $999, an increase of $550.

O. T. Ludlow, Warren Tebbas and Albert Gump of Lawrenceburg township were among the first to place this year's crop of wheat on the local market. The price received was $2.63 and the weight sixty-two pounds per bushel.

On Friday last Robt. Blackmore "turned" the bell at Hamline M. E. church. Few people know that a church bell or any other bell should be turned every four or five years to keep it from being cracked by constant pounding in one place. The present bell at Hamline Chapel was hung in 1881.

Bills are before the Indiana General Assembly to allow election judges and clerks $9, sheriffs $6 and inspectors $12 a day; to increase salary of county auditors up to $1200 on petition of 200 tax payers and providing for four poll clerks to provide for increase of voters by woman suffrage.

And now provision is making for installing telephones at intervals of one mile along the public highways in Ohio (why not in Indiana) for use of the stranded motorist and others. Presumably the expense will be met by the payment of a small toll by the user. Is it practicable?

Meat Deo ease Reported.

Washington—Decrease of 400,000 lbs., in the country's meat production for the last 6 months as compared to that of last year, was reported by the Institute of American Meat Packers. Statistics of the Agricultural Department showing that 3,500,000 fewer cattle, hogs and sheep were slaughtered at 48 markets during the last six months were used by the institute as the basis for the estimated decreased production. "During every month of 1920 producers of meat in the United States and packers reported losses of beef, pork and mutton," said the institute's statement. "Prices of hogs and pork products are substantially lower now than at this time last year due largely to diminished exports."

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

G. B. POWERS,

THE FARMER AND THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

A reader of some of the city papers and magazines would naturally reach the conclusion that the farmers are profiteering as no other class during this era of high prices. The industrial wage earner, the professional man and the commercial man in this way get a false impression of the farmer. Some of these articles make bold assertions not based on facts. Others cast imputations and even the cartoonist is tempted to condemn the farmer in the minds of the city consumer. At the beginning of the year the High Cost of Living was in a popular way. The prices of the necessities of life have ascended to such heights that they are no longer a joke. The question of securing the bare essentials of life has become a source of worry to a great many people, even in prosperous America. The probability of getting sufficient food to sustain life to many in the old world, is the one question. Many of those whose pocketbooks suffer from the present high prices unintentionally at times contributed toward their own trouble. It would be presumptuous for any man to undertake to analyze the whole situation and give all the causes for the present high prices and point out the one method of bringing back the old order of things. There are so many fundamental causes for the High Cost of Living, so many mistakes have been made, and the farmer is so often unjustly condemned that one can scarcely refrain from informing some of those writers how little they know about the farmers' troubles. It is a well established fact that all efforts, in this country, of government, of boards, of commissions, and of individuals to reduce the High Cost of Living have resulted thus far, in utter failure. In fact, some believe that many of these well meaning efforts to lower the cost of living have had the opposite effect. Possibly some prices would have been higher had not effort been made to control them. One cannot imagine how these could have been much worse for the salaried man or woman. A book could be written upon this subject, and if all the articles that have appeared in print in which the farmer is misrepresented should be collected there would be enough material for a good size library. These articles will be brief, and endeavor to cover one subject at a time. They will continue from time to time until the farmer's viewpoint is presented as thoroughly as it is possible for us to do so. There is no question but what the food supply of the world has been, is, and always will be one in which many people are interested. The fact is, the first trouble among people in this world was in the Garden of Eden over food, and the last fight on earth will be among the few, then living people, over the last load of bread, last apple, last nut, or some other life sustaining product, and then all will be quiet, and then chaos. That is, if the "Judgment Day" does not come before man has destroyed the fertility of the earth, and wasted its food producing power. The truth is when we look into the fundamental causes of disagreements among nations and people, we find that most of the causes that have occurred from the day of Adam down to this year have been over the food supply, present or future. Women and wise dog fights and horse races, card games and fine fences have each caused many struggles and fights, and deaths, but bread and butter have caused more trouble than all these combined. A well fed man may be lazy but a hungry man is dangerous. As far as food is concerned, man is practically an animal and in main follows the paths of other animals when faced with hunger. Some one has said, "I believe the present ambassador from England to this country, that the fear of a future shortage in Germany's food supply caused her to embark upon the world war. We know the war has brought much of mankind to wondering from whence the next meal will come. His animal nature is asserting itself, and hence all this unrest. Man must have food, good, wholesome, life-giving food. Clothes and shelter are essentials, but are worthless as compared to food and drink and air. We do not know just what proportion the American people's expenditures goes for food. Probably the Department at Washington has a close estimate as to the per cent of the average wage earner spends for his food. We would venture the guess that it approaches close to the 50 per cent mark. The farmer produces practically all the food supply of this country, and a good proportion of other necessities of life, such as wool, cotton, flax, vegetable oils, and so forth. It is but natural that the consumer chafe the producer with profiteering. But does he? Are there other reasons for the High Cost of Living? Would the farmer be benefitted by lowering all prices? Must the farmer be the first to suffer? Where is the trouble? A hungry man and other pertinent questions will do to the farming interest no harm. It may do some good. We must be able to do better than we are now. We must be able to stand up as a class with what we call a crime. Are we guilty?

THE IMPORTANCE OF KENTUCKY FARMING.

Ever more important from the standpoint of the State's welfare is the business of farming in Kentucky becoming. Everything connected with farming is of direct interest to all other industries. Because of the broader outlook of the Kentucky farmer today and his ever-increasing contact with the business life of the city and State and the business and community life of the rural districts, the advancement of all industry in general is of direct interest to him. Working to increase the relationship between the farming element and the rest of the State are the forces of necessity, each recognizing its dependence on the other. The position of the individual Kentucky farmer is being altered. He is attaining financial independence. The number of them who are attaining financial independence and are ready to shoulder a part of the investment burden which this country must assume for her own protection as well as to aid the world, is steadily increasing. With farming flourishing and the men engaged in it prosperous, there should be an optimistic and a confident feeling regarding the ability of Kentucky people to meet any situation which the next period of reconstruction offers.

Out in the State.

Hickman—A bond issue of $400,000 will be voted on at the November election by the citizens of Hickman county, and the purpose of construction of the proposed highway from Paducah to Fulton and Hickman. Winchester—Warren Cobb and Jesse Hampton, Clark county were appointed to make a canvass of the charge of auto stealing, while attempting to sell a second-hand machine at Gallion, O. They are charged with the theft of a Thompson's car, which was sold in Covington.

Frankfort—The $300,000 State Fair bond issue will be sold and the permanent buildings erected in time for the 1921 fair. Notwithstanding the decision of the Court of Appeals that the bonds do not pledge the credit of the Commonwealth, arrangements have been made to dispose of them as it has been held that they are nontaxable.

Harrodsburg—Chas. Shewmaker, of Washington-co., has bought from Jack Bean the famous old J. L. Neal farm of 300 acres, at $300 an acre. The property is the most noted in this section and one of the show places of the Bluegrass. It contains a handsome colonial home, pictures of which have appeared in historical publications.

Carrollton—A meeting of the tobacco growers of Carroll county was held at the Court House, and more than 300 representative farmers of the county were present. The meeting was called to order by C. M. Dean, a prominent farmer and tobacco buyer, and by unanimous vote it was declared advisable to "cut out" the 1921 crop of tobacco. A committee was appointed to make a canvass of the growers in the county, and a meeting was arranged for Saturday, July 24, and all other counties in the State were represented by their foremost farmers and handlers of the weed, and which will probably result in the formation of a permanent organization. Overton—If the present favorable season continues the barley districts will raise a bumper crop of the weed, and with an overabundance on hand it is a safe bet that the crop of 1921 will have to be cut out, or the 1920 crop will go for less than half price. The farmers will get out as much as they can, with a cut-out for 1921, as they do crops would be sold should one be grown next year, and besides every old man not a year spent in raising barley. The farmers are fixing up old fields. The farmers we come in contact with seem all to be in favor of more or of the better for 1921. The cut-out movement seems to be ripe.

CROPS BY COUNTIES.

Fayette County—The outlook continues bright for a great crop of tobacco. The plants having grown so that practically all cover the ground. As a whole, the prospects are very promising and farmers are feeling good over the crop. Threshing is on and it looks as though the yield will exceed last years. The yield is so much better than was expected a few months ago that farmers are very pleased.

Bourbon County—Much of the corn has been laid by. Tobacco has been making record growth. Farmers have been giving much attention to keeping down the weeds in the corn and tobacco. Oats harvest is commencing and wheat is being threshed.

Washington County—Most farmers are laid with corn and tobacco on account of the heavy spring rains. The tobacco is very spotted and the acreage is just about the same as last year. Corn is mostly laid by, but small. Wheat is now being harvested and the yield does not come up to expectations, but the quality good.

Madison County—Wheat is being threshed and is turning out much better than thought for. Corn has a good color and stalk and the prospect is good for a bumper crop. Oats and meadows are fine. We have the largest acreage every planted in tobacco in this county this year. Most of the tobacco was set early and has grown well and looks fine.

Hart County—The labor shortage has worked a hardship in crop cultivation. The favorable season though, has made the outlook favorable for corn. The tobacco crop is about 60 per cent acreage and is in very poor condition. The acreage of wheat was very small but bids fair to make a good crop. Meadows are good and there is a large acreage of corn and very scarce and cheap with no demand.

Webster County—We have a good corn crop but a very short wheat crop. The grain from what wheat we have is fine. Oats are good. There has not been a full crop of tobacco planted and most of it is very late.

Merrett County—The corn crop is very good. Some tobacco is being raised, the late heavy rains washed it away. This crop is very backward, it does not seem to grow as it should. Wheat threshing has begun. The yield is far below expectations.

Trimble County—The early sown wheat is good and the late is better than was thought for. The corn was planted very late but is looking fine where it has been cultivated properly. Tobacco is looking fairly good. The oats crop is as fine as ever a crop flew over.

Fleming County—The prospects are good for corn and tobacco, and the wheat in which the farmers seem to be the most interested. Each of these two crops are growing rapidly and give splendid promise.

Bracken County—Rains of ten days ago brought out the crops and gardens, pastures and meadows, and it looks as though this will be one of the best crop years we have had in several years. While not half of the corn was sown to wheat that was sown last year, it is probable that this year's yield will be nearly double that of last year.

Daviess County—There is an average crop of tobacco planted in this section. The corn crop is late but fair. Clover is under the average. The hay crop in general was common and wheat was very poor. Oats, of which there is a large acreage, are fine. Pastures are about up to the average. There is about a half crop of apples, but very faulty.

Josee Collins, tenant on the farm of J. J. Rigg, at Mt. Zion, known as the J. N. Hill home, has an extra good prospect for a first class tobacco crop, so much so that he was offered $25 cents a pound by C. B. Ashby, but Thursday this as far as we have been able to ascertain, is the first offer made on the growing crop in Robertson county. The Mt. Olive Tribune-Democrat.

No Vibration No-Noise

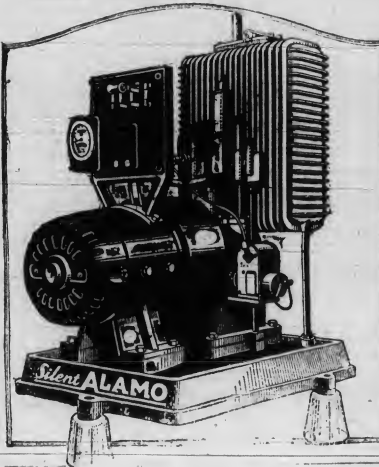

Without an efficient motor no electric light and power plant can give dependable service. It supplies the power that generates the electricity. It is the heart of the plant. All experts are agreed upon this point. So in selecting an electric light and power plant for your farm look first at the motor. See that it runs smoothly and noiselessly without heavy anchoring. See that it is not subjected to the effects of ruinous vibration. For vibration is the most dreaded enemy of motor efficiency. The amazing service of the Silent Alamo is largely the result of two distinctive features which place it in a class by itself. First, the noiseless, rotating sleeve-valve motor. Second, the scientific balance of weight—which eliminates severe vibration for the first time in any farm electric light and power unit.

10 Important Features of the Silent Alamo

1. No vibration—due to scientific balance and noiseless sleeve-valve motor.
2. Complete, compact unit—all parts except battery mounted on metal base. No other foundation needed.
3. All moving parts enclosed—insures long service and safety.
4. Motor automatically controlled. Gives battery a tapered charge which insures long life. Motor stops when batteries are fully charged.
5. All points oiled by rotary force pump under pressure.
6. Automatic throttle governor controls speed of engine—prevents racing.
7. Super-Silent Idle motor—rotating sleeve-valve type—practically noiseless.
8. No spark plug fouling, due to sleeve construction.
9. No carbon trouble—due to sleeve-valve construction.
10. No valves to grind—due to sleeve-valve construction.

How Long Would Your Watch Stand This Treatment?

Severe vibration acts on a motor much like pounding acts on a watch. In both cases results are disastrous.

Silent ALAMO

FARM ELECTRIC POWER AND LIGHT PLANT

The Silent Alamo is today conceded by thousands of farmers and prominent engineers from all parts of the country to be the most highly perfected electric light and power plant. In years of service it has established phenomenal records.

The Silent Alamo offers you the only plant with a noiseless, rotating sleeve-valve motor. It operates without ruinous vibration. It will run quietly and efficiently whenever needed by merely pressing a button. It will supply an abundance of electricity in a few hours for lighting your house and barns, and power to operate your pump, your separator, your churn, and the many labor-saving electrical conveniences in your home. And because there are no valves or cams or push rods to cause motor trouble—and no vibration to quickly render the motor inefficient, it will serve faithfully and economically year after year.

This is the kind of service that will make electric light and power a year-round job on your farm. You cannot duplicate it in any plant not having the distinctive features of the Silent Alamo.

Write for Alamo Book

The time you devote to a careful investigation will be well spent. And nothing will convince you like comparison. Our Alamo Book describes the many advantages of the Silent Alamo. Describes the Idle Super-Silent motor. It gives facts that we cannot publish here. Every man interested in electric lighting and power should read this book. Write for a copy today. Whether you are planning to install electric light and power now or later, it will pay you to be informed at once. Write for a copy today.

HARDING SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE A NEW KEYNOTE

Republican Nominee at Notification Ceremonies Discusses Problems Confronting Nation.

"HOLD HERITAGE AMERICAN NATIONALITY-UNIMPAIRED"

Advocates Party Responsibility as Distinguished From Dictatorial and Autocratic Personal Rule.—In Referring to League of Nations, Says We Do Not Mean to Shun a Single Responsibility of This Republic to World Civilization.—Favors Protective Tariff, Merchant Marine, a Small Army, Woman Suffrage and National Budget.

Marion, O.—(Special).—Warren G. Harding was officially notified here of his nomination as the Republican candidate for the presidency. His speech of acceptance is, in part, as follows:

Chairman Lodge, members of Notification Committee, members of National Committee, ladies and gentlemen: The message which you have formally conveyed brings to me a realization of responsibility which is not underestimated. It is a supreme task to interpret the covenant of a great political party, the activities of which are so woven into the history of this republic, and a very sacred and solemn undertaking to utter the faith and aspirations of the many millions who adhere to that party. The party platform has charted the way, yet, somehow, we have come to expect that interpretation which voices the faith of nominees who must assume specific tasks.

Let me be understood clearly from the very beginning. I believe in party sponsorship in government. I believe in party government as distinguished from personal government, individual, dictatorial, autocratic or what not.

No man is big enough to run this great republic. There never has been one. Such domination was never intended. Tranquillity, stability, dependability—all are secured in party sponsorship, and we mean to renew the assurances which were rendered in the cataclysmal war.

Our first commitment is the restoration of representative popular government, under the constitution, through the agency of the Republican party. Our vision includes more than a chief executive; we believe in a cabinet of highest capacity, equal to the responsibilities which our system contemplates, in whose councils the vice president, second official of the republic, shall be asked to participate. Our vision includes a cordial understanding and co-ordinated activities with a house of Congress, fresh from the people, voicing the convictions which members bring from direct contact with the electorate, and cordial co-operation along with the restored functions of the senate, fit to be the greatest deliberative body of the world.

International Relationship.
It is not difficult, Chairman Lodge, to make ourselves clear on the question of international relationship. We Republicans of the senate, conscious of our solemn oaths and the faithful of our constitutional obligations, when we saw the structure of a world super-government taking visionary form, joined in a becoming warning of our devotion to this republic. If the torch of constitutionalism had not been dimmed, the delayed peace of the world and the tragedy of disappointment and Europe's misunderstanding of America easily might have been avoided. The Republicans of the senate halted the burden of independent American enterprise, influence, which it was proposed to exchange for an obscure and unequal place in the merged government of the world. Our party means to hold the heritage of American nationality unimpaired and unimpaired.

The world will not understand us. We do not mean to shun a single responsibility of this republic. We have no hate in the American heart. We have no envy, no suspicion, no aversion for any people in the world. We hold to our rights, and mean to defend, aye, we mean to sustain the rights of this nation and our citizens alike, everywhere under the shining sun. Yet there is a sense of unity and sympathy and fraternity in every resolution. There is a genuine aspiration in every American breast for a tranquil friendship with all the world.

One may readily sense the consciousness of our America. I am sure I understand the purpose of the dominant group of the senate. We were not seeking to defeat a world aspiration, we were resolved to safeguard America. We were resolved then, even as we are today, and will be tomorrow, to preserve this free and independent republic.

In the call of the conscience of America is peace, peace that closes the gaping wound of world war, and silences the impassioned voices of international envy and distrust. Heeding that call, knowing as I do the disposition of the Congress, I promise you formal and effective peace so quickly as a Republican Congress can pass its declaration for a Republican executive to sign.

It is better to be the free and disinterested agent of international justice and advancing civilization, with the covenant of conscience, than be shackled by a written compact which surrenders our freedom of action and gives to a military alliance the right to proclaim America's duty to the world. No surrender of rights to a world council or its military alliance, no assumed mandatory however appealing, ever shall summon the sons of this republic to war. Their supreme sacrifice shall only be asked for America and its call of honor. There is a rectitude in that right we will not forsake.

Leaving America Impaired.

Disposed as we are, the way is very simple. Let the failure attending assumption, obstinacy, impracticability and delay be recognized, and let us find the big, practical, unselfish way to do our part, either covetous because of ambition or hesitant through fear, but ready to serve ourselves, humanity and God. With a senate advising as the constitution contemplates, I would hopefully approach the nations of Europe and of the earth, proposing that understanding which makes us a willing participant in the consecration of nations to a new relationship, to commit the moral forces of the world, America included, to peace and international justice, still leaving American free, independent and self-reliant, but offering friendship to all the world.

It is folly to close our eyes to our standing facts. Humanity is restive, much of the world is in revolution, the agents of discord and destruction have wrought their tragedy in pathetic Russia, have lighted their torches among other peoples, and hope to see America as a part of the great Red configuration. Ours is the temple of liberty under the law, and it is ours to call the Sons of Opportunity to its defense. America must not only save herself, but ours must be the appealing voice to solve the world.

It must be understood that toll alone makes for accomplishment and advancement, and righteous possession is the reward of toil, and its incentive. There is no progress except in the stimulus of competition.

The chief trouble today is that the world was wrought the destruction of beautiful production, left our storehouses empty, and there is a minimum production when our need is maximum. Maximums, not minimums, is the call of America. It isn't a new story, because war never fails to leave depleted storehouses and always impairs the efficiency of production. War also establishes its higher standards for wages, and they abide. I wish the higher wage to abide, on one explicit condition—that the wage-earner will give full return for the wage received.

Production, More Production.

I want, somehow, to appeal to the sons and daughters of the republic, to every producer, to join hand and brain in production, more production, honest production, patriotic production, because patriotic production is no less a defense of our best civilization than that of armed force. Profiteering is a crime of commission, unproductive the crime of omission. We must work our most and best, else the destructive reaction will come.

The menacing tendency of the present day is not chargeable wholly to the unsettled and fevered conditions caused by the war. The manifest weakness in popular sentiment lies in the temptation to appeal to group ed citizenship for political advantage.

It would be the blindness of folly to ignore the activities in our own country which are aimed to destroy our economic system, and to commit us to the coasts of tragedy which has destroyed all freedom and made Russia impotent. This movement is not to be halted in thrall of liberties. We must not abridge the freedom of speech, the freedom of press, or the freedom of assembly, because there is no rescue in repression. These liberties are as sacred as the freedom of religious belief, as inviolable as the rights of life and the pursuit of happiness. We do hold to the right to crush sedition, to stifle a menacing contempt for law, to stamp out a peril to the safety of the republic or its people, when emergency can secure security and the majority of the law are the first essentials of liberty. He who threatens destruction of the government by force or flouts its contempt for lawful authority, ceases to be a loyal citizen and forfeits his rights to the freedom of the republic.

No party is different to the sons of the wage-earner. To us his good fortune is of deepest concern, and we seek to make that good fortune permanent. We do not oppose but approve collective bargaining, because that is an outstanding right, but we are unalterably insistent that its exercise must not destroy the equally sacred right of the individual, in his necessary pursuit of livelihood. Any American has the right to quit his employment, so has every American the right to seek employment. The group must not endanger the individual, and we must discourage groups preying upon one another, and none shall be allowed to forget that the government's obligations are alike to all the people.

No Strike Against Government.

We are so confident that much of the present-day insufficiency and inefficiency of transportation are due to the withering hand of government operation that we emphasize anew our opposition to government ownership, and make sure the mistake is not repeated.

A state of inadequate transportation facilities, mainly chargeable to the failure of government experiment, is losing millions to agriculture, it is hindering industry, it is menacing the American people with a fuel shortage little less than a peril. It emphasizes the present-day problem and suggests that spirit of encouragement and assistance which summons all America to relieve such an emergency.

Gross expansion of currency and credit have depreciated the dollar just as expansion and inflation have discredited the coins of the world. We inflated in haste, we must deflate in deliberation. We devalued the dollar in reckless finance, we must restore in honesty.

In all sincerity we promise the prevention of unreasonable profits, we challenge profiteering with all the moral force and the legal powers of government and people, but it is fair, aye, it is timely, to give reminder that law is not the sole corrective of our economic ills.

Drive Against Extravagance.

Let us call to all the people for thrift and economy, for denial and sacrifice if need be, for a nation-wide drive against extravagance and luxury, to a recommitment to simplicity of living, to that prudent and normal plan of life which is the health of the republic.

New conditions, which attend amazing growth and extraordinary industrial development, call for a new and forward-looking program. The American farmer had a hundred and twenty millions to feed in the home market, and heard the cry of the world for food and answered it, though he faced an appalling task amid handicaps never encountered before.

Contemplating the defenselessness of the individual farmer to meet the organized buyers of his products and the distributors of the things the farmer buys, I hold that farmers should not only be permitted but encouraged to join in co-operative action and reap the just measure of reward merited by their arduous toil.

Our platform is an earnest pledge of renewed concern for this most essential and elemental industry and in appreciation and interest we pledge effective action in law and practice. We will halt that co-operation which again will make profitable and desirable the ownership and operation of comparatively small farms intensively cultivated, and which will facilitate the caring for the products of farm and orchard without the lamentable waste under present conditions.

America would look with anxiety on the discouragement of farming activity either through the government's neglect or its paralysis by socialist practices. A Republican administration will be committed to renewed regard for agriculture, and seek the participation of farmers in curing the ills justly complained of, and aim to place the American farm where it ought to be—highly ranked in American activities and fully sharing the highest good fortunes of American life.

Beconvincedly associated with this subject are the policies of irrigation and reclamation, so essential to agricultural expansion, and the continued development of the great and wonderful West. It is our purpose to continue and enlarge federal aid, not in sectional partiality, but for the good of all America.

I believe the budget system will effect a necessary, helpful reformation, and reveal business methods to government business.

I believe federal departments should be made more business-like and send back to productive effort thousands of federal employees, who are either duplicating work or not essential at all.

I believe in the protective tariff policy and know we will be calling for its saving Americanism again.

I believe in a great merchant marine. I would have this republic the leading maritime nation of the world.

I believe in a navy ample to protect it, and able to assure us dependable defense.

I believe in a small army, but the best in the world, with a mindfulness for preparedness which will avoid the unutterable cost of our previous neglect.

I believe in our eminence in trade abroad, which the government should aid in expanding, both in revealing markets and speeding cargoes.

I believe in establishing standards for immigration, which are concerned with the future citizenship of the republic, not with mere man-power in industry.

I believe that every man who dons the garb of American citizenship walks in the light of American opportunity, must become American in heart and soul.

I believe in holding fast to every forward step in unshackling child la-

SALIENT POINTS OF SENATOR HARDING'S SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

"I pledge fidelity to our country and to God, and accept the nomination of the Republican party for the presidency of the United States."

"The human element comes first, and I want the employers in industry to understand the aspirations, the convictions, the yearnings of millions of American wage earners."

"The Constitution contemplates no class and recognizes no group. It broadly includes all the people, with specific recognition for none."

"We approve collective bargaining."

"Gross expansion of currency and credits has depreciated the dollar. We will attempt intelligent and courageous deflation."

"When competition is natural, and fair impelling competition is suppressed, whether by law, compact or conspiracy, we halt the march of progress, silence the voice of aspiration and paralyze the will for achievement."

"I promise you formal and effective peace so quickly as a Republican Congress can pass its declaration for a Republican executive to sign."

"I can hear the call of conscience an insistent voice for largely reduced armaments throughout the world."

"Our vision includes more than a chief executive. We believe in a cabinet of highest capacity, equal to the responsibilities which our system contemplates, in whose councils the vice-president, second official of the Republic, shall be asked to participate."

labor and elevating conditions of woman's employment.

I believe the federal government should stamp out lynching and remove that stain from the fair name of America.

I believe the federal government should give its effective aid in solving the problem of crime and becoming housing of its citizenship.

I believe this government should make its Liberty and Victory bonds worth all that its patriotic citizens paid in purchasing them.

Taxes Must Be Reduced.

I believe the tax burdens imposed for the war emergency must be revised to the needs of peace, and in the interest of equity in distribution of the burden.

I believe the negro citizens of America should be guaranteed the enjoyment of all their rights, that they have earned the full measure of citizenship bestowed, that their sacrifices in blood on the battlefields of the republic have entitled them to all of freedom and opportunity, all of sympathy and aid that the American spirit of fairness and justice demands.

I believe there is an easy and open path to righteous relationship with Mexico. It has seemed to me that our undeveloped, uncertain and infirm policy has made us a culpable party to the governmental misfortunes in that land. Our relations ought to be both friendly and sympathetic; we would like to acclimate a stable government there, and offer a neighborly hand in pointing the way to greater progress.

I believe in law enforcement. If elected I mean to be a constitutional president, and it is impossible to ignore the constitution, unthinkable to evade the law, when our every commitment is to orderly government.

The four million defenders of land and sea were worthy of the best traditions of a people never war-like in peace and never pacifist in war. They commanded our pride, they have our gratitude, which must have genuine expression. It is not only a duty, it is a privilege to see that the sacrifices made shall be requited, and that those still suffering from casualties and disabilities shall be abundantly aided and restored to the highest capabilities of citizenship and its enjoyment.

Advocate Woman Suffrage.

The womanhood of America, always its glory, its inspiration and the potent, uplifting force in its social and spiritual development, is about to be enfranchised. In so far as congress can, the fact is already accomplished. By party edict, by my recorded vote, by personal conviction I am committed to this measure of justice. It is my earnest hope, my sincere desire that the one needed state vote be quickly recorded in the affirmation of the right of equal suffrage and that the vote of every citizen shall be cast and counted in the approaching election.

And to the great number of noble women who have opposed in conviction this tremendous change in the ancient tradition of the sexes as applied to government, I venture to plead that they will accept the full responsibility of enlarged citizenship and give to the best in the republic their suffrage and support.

Ours is not only a fortunate people but a very unusual one. We are a people with belief in the future and faith in God. Whether enemies threaten from without or menaces arise from within, there is some indefinable voice saying, "Have confidence in the republic! America will go on!"

Eddie Fry, of Walton, spent part of last Friday in Burlington, the first time he had been in the old town for 20 years or more, his last visit being when he was traveling for the International Harvester Co. He missed many who were on the stage of action the last time he was in Burlington, but otherwise everything appeared about the same. Time has dealt kindly with Mr. Fry, and he is in good disposition of yore and a most congenial gentleman. He is engaged in a prosperous hardware business in Walton and came to Burlington to deliver to Dr. E. W. Rogers and sisters a fine stove on which to do culinary work. Mr. Fry has many friends throughout the county and especially at Burlington who are glad to know that he has returned to his native soil after several years absence and has a prosperous business upon which to rely for the future.

Card of Thanks—We desire to extend our sincere and heartfelt thanks to our many kind relatives, friends and neighbors and Dr. E. W. Royer for his kind and consoling words; the donors of the beautiful floral offerings; the bearers and Mr. John Allison for the efficient manner in which the funeral was conducted.

Altogether 4,000,000 soldiers are engaged in these wars. This is as many as were engaged at one time in the European conflict.

Farmers Plan to Organize.

Grant County News.

Farmers of Grant county are planning to organize a branch of the State and National Federation of Farmers.

While the organization is yet in embryo form a number of the county have the matter under consideration and an organization will no doubt be perfected soon.

A plan is on foot to have a committeeman in each precinct in the county take a "straw" vote of the farmers as they come to the poll on primary election day in order to get the sentiment relative to an organization.

It is said that the "straw" vote will also show how each farmer stands relative to a cut-out of the 1921 tobacco crop, a move which was started in Carroll county a few weeks ago.

Many of the counties of the State have already organized farm unions and are united under one head. The general opinion seems to be that Grant county should not be a laggard and that the farmers here should join with their neighbor counties.

Quite a number of farmers who have been interviewed express themselves as ready to join a movement to cut out next year's crop, provided such a movement can be made general.

It is thought that primary election day will be a good time to feel the pulse of the farmers respecting both the union and the cut-out, as most of them will be at their voting precincts that day.

An English "morotist" has the courage to write to the London Times suggesting that that country give the vote to the colored people. Those who have traveled in England will know what this means. The traffic rules, not only in the cities but on the country roads, require that vehicles and pedestrians keep to the left in passing traffic. In America traffic has gone to the right, since the English the same rule is followed. The English are alone in forcing traffic to the left, and the London card writer insists that the English would be wise to adopt a custom that has the approval of so many other countries.

It is hardly probable, however, that the change of the sentiment The English are tenacious in adhering to old customs. The left-hand drive seems barbarous to Americans, but this may be because we have let hand driven the other system. The English feel that they cannot abandon a system which has been adhered to so long that it has become a part of their national life.

Gasoline May Be Rationed.

Washington, July 25.—Gasoline refiners may take the joy out of joy riding in the near future by placing automobile through the country over rationing system that will limit purchasers of gasoline to a few gallons weekly.

It is said that such a system already is in effect on the Pacific Coast and unless there is an immediate improvement in the gasoline shortage situation generally the entire country faces rationing.

This suggestion has been brought to the attention of the Government, it was learned today, but officials of the Geological Survey and the Federal Trade Commission explained that there is no government agency which may be used by the refiners.

The rationing system, if put into effect, would be worked out by refiners dealers and consumers of gasoline and the Government can participate only in a supporting sense.

It was learned today that representatives of several of the large refining companies have discussed the rationing system informally with Government officials, but it may be stated on authority that no Government action is in prospect.

"Domestic production of oil is behind and may continue so," says the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines.

There must be more or less dependence on imports, they say, if they are off. We hear that the rationing system is being considered by some refiners.

TOBACCO DAMAGED

Infected Fields Found in Scott, Fayette, Bourbon, Jessamine and Clark Co.'s.

Georgetown Times.

Damage caused to tobacco in the Bluegrass section by a disease that attacks the leaves could not be estimated yesterday by experts at the Kentucky Experiment Station, but it is certain the loss will amount to many thousands of dollars.

A large number of infected fields have been found in Scott and Fayette county and samples of damaged tobacco have been received by Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist, from Bourbon, Jessamine and Clark counties within the last ten days.

Investigations made so far indicate the infection is caused by two distinct diseases. One of which is commonly known as rust, a fungus infection, which usually hits tobacco about cutting time. This year, however, it is more noticeable, and just what effect it will have on the plants cannot be determined as yet. When the disease is in the leaves, it is more noticeable, and just what effect it will have on the plants cannot be determined as yet.

The other disease bears a close resemblance to "fire" or bacterial disease which has been doing much damage in North Carolina for the last four years. So far as the Experiment Station experts have been able to determine, this is the first appearance of the disease in Kentucky.

Dr. Valleau is devoting all his time to an investigation and study of the infections, but as yet no remedy has been discovered.

Since the diseases are either a bacterial or fungus infection, they are spread by the wind and rain from leaf to leaf, experts say. It has been noticed that the side of the leaf on the side from which the rain is coming is the worst affected.

Dr. Valleau and Prof. N. R. Elliott, leader of horticulture in the Kentucky Experiment Station, several days ago made an inspection of several farms in Fayette county and say the infection is widespread.

When they found the tobacco on a forty-acre tract owned by J. D. Gay, near Pine Grove, badly infected with rust and its damage estimated at $10,000 and $15,000. A thirty-five acre field of tobacco owned by C. R. Radcliff, on the Walnut Hills pike, is also infected.

The effect the disease will have on tobacco growth cannot be ascertained at this time, but some farmers are of the opinion it will cause the growth to cease.

The effect of the disease is that the leaves are first infected with found spots, which unite, causing the leaves to drop. The appearance of the appearance of brown paper.

Early in the season many tobacco growers have been struck by a strange disease, the cause of which was never determined. Efforts are now being made to ascertain if there is any connection between the two diseases.

The Primary Election.

The Democrats of Boone county should remember that the primary today is the primary election at which the Democrats in the Sixth Congressional District will nominate their candidate for Congress.

These Cows Eat Saw Dust.

Milwaukee, Aug. 1.—Sawdust as a possible feed for live stock has been considered favorably for many years, but it is only recently that the Forest Products Laboratory and the Wisconsin College of Agriculture to conduct the first trials.

The feeding experiments in which chemically treated softwood sawdust was fed were under the direction of F. B. Morrison of the College of Agriculture. The sawdust was prepared by means of new processes perfected by E. C. Sherrard of the Forest Products Laboratory. The amount of treatment was limited so that only a short feeding test was made. More extensive trials will be necessary to determine the comparative nutritive value of the sawdust.

Three cows were fed for three weeks on four feedings a day. In the first and third feeding periods, says Mr. Morrison, "the cows were given an excellent ration consisting of alfalfa hay, corn silage and a concentrated mixture, consisting of 55 parts of ground barley, 30 parts of wheat bran and 15 parts of linseed meal."

The second feeding period consisted of a part of the barley mixture. Two pounds of sawdust were used in place of one pound of barley in the mixture. Then consisted of 30 parts of sawdust, 40 parts of ground barley, 30 parts of wheat bran and 15 parts of linseed meal.

The cows kept up their production through this period, and maintained their weight even better than on the ration fed during the first and third periods.

"While it is unsafe to draw definite conclusions from such a short test, it would seem that the use of sawdust in a limited amount of hygienic sawdust. As a feed it contains only a negligible amount of protein and for that reason cannot be compared with hay or corn."

BASE BALL.

The rain last Saturday afternoon knocked out several of the games of base ball in the county that had been booked for that date.

The Bellevue and Burlington Juniors played seven innings at Lexington before the game was called on account of rain, the score being 11 to 4 in favor of Burlington.

The Burlington Juniors went to Walton last Sunday afternoon where they were snowed under 11 to 1 by Ryan, who pitched for the late Corona team was in the box for Walton.

Burlington and Petersburg clubs are booked to play at Burlington next Saturday afternoon.

The same at Bellevue last Saturday afternoon was not started, the rain coming on just about the time the two teams reached the grounds.

The Big Stone team was trimmed last Sunday afternoon 7 to 2 by the St. Barnards, of Cincinnati.

Rain Came in Good Time.

A very badly needed rain visited this county last Saturday afternoon and revived the pastures, freedened up the gardens and was worth thousands of dollars to the corn and tobacco crops which had begun to suffer from a lack of moisture.

Vegetation got the entire benefit of the rain as it remained cloudy until night giving the water ample opportunity to penetrate the ground.

The southern part of the county the rainfall was very heavy, and in these neighborhoods as in others in the county the corn was blown down badly, but as there are no ears on it, it will straighten up again to a very great extent.

During the storm lightning struck a tree beneath which nine cattle belonging to John Early, of Petersburg, were standing, killing the nine animals. Fortunately Mr. Early had them insured in the Boone County Livestock Insurance Co. Mr. Early has had considerable experience with storms this year and only a few months since a barn on his farm that was about completed was destroyed during a wind storm.

The Presidential Campaign.

This years Presidential campaign is plainly to be contested from beginning to end after a fashion that has not been known since the famous Bryan-McKinley election of 1896.

Beginning their campaign the day after Warren G. Harding was nominated at Chicago. That nomination automatically put the Republican in the White House.

They decided to begin their campaign at once. Mr. Harding has now made his opening speech; Mr. Cox will make his in the next few days, and political campaigning will begin in every doubtful State, and there will be no let-up until November. There are some who will complain of this, but the country gains by such campaigns. Presidential campaigns are frequently great educators. That of 1896 educated our people upon currency matters; this years contest may serve to bring out many desirable facts as to the difference between real and spurious Americanism.

Tobacco Meeting.

A meeting of the growers of the Burley district held at Carrollton Saturday afternoon was addressed by Hon. Emmett Orr, of Covington, and Senator John W. New of Versailles.

Growers were present from Carroll, Trimble, Owen, Boone, Gallatin and Kenton counties in Kentucky, and Switzerland and Jefferson counties, Indiana.

The sentiment of the meeting favored the growing of more foodstuffs and cutting out the corn. Burley tobacco crop. If Central Kentucky joins in this movement the present crop, which is the largest ever raised in the Burley district, will bring better than merely.

A meeting of growers of the Burley district was called for Wednesday, August 4, at Lexington, at which time a gallop proposition relating to the 1921 crop will be fully discussed. —Carrollton News.

Tomatoes have been selling in the city at 15 cents a pound. It does not seem to have been so many years ago that a tubed could be purchased at that price.

M. L. Southern and wife of the wild neighborhood motored to Wheatley, Owen county, last Saturday to visit Mrs. Southern's relatives in that neighborhood.

The storm last Saturday struck John Delaney, of the Beaver neighborhood, particularly hard, and about water, but his corn and tobacco crop.

The fall of the temperature following last Saturdays rain indicates that there was no considerable amount of rain.

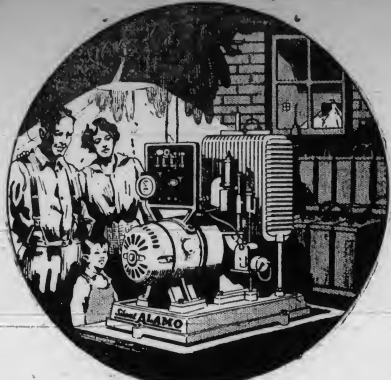

Some Irish potatoes are badly injured by frost.

James Gotts and family, of Indiana, and S. B. Scott and wife, of Bellevue, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Moore and wife, of Mr. Bette's daughter remained for a longer visit, and Mr. Maurens' sons went home with Mr. Bette.

The Consolidated Telephone Co. is talking up a line of first-class poles from Burlington to Limburg.

Electrify Your Farm Now! Install the Silent Alamo

THINK of the advantages of electric light and power. Why wait? Why measure the small cost with the tremendous advantages of electricity produced by the Silent Alamo Farm Lighting Plant.

Picture your home brilliantly lighted in every room and what comfort to read or work by such light. How easy to keep the boys at home. How much more sociable the gatherings. To say nothing of the labor and muss that is saved when you discard the old and always dangerous coal-oil lamps.

Then picture the advantages of electric power—the labor saving in your home. See the running water in the kitchen. See the churn—the separator—the sewing machine—the washing machine—the iron—the vacuum cleaner—operated by electricity—produced by the ever ready and never failing

FARM ELECTRIC POWER AND LIGHT PLANT

Are these things worth while? Is it worth while to have running water for your stock?—brilliant, safe light in the barns—power to operate your small machinery?

See a Demonstration Today

See the Silent Alamo—the plant that is free from ruinous vibration. The plant from which the awful jarring and jolting which quickly ruins machinery, has been eliminated.

Not only laymen but engineers have declared this little machine to be a marvel of engineering. It marks the absolute pinnacle of plant efficiency and durability. Come in today. See a demonstration.

FOOD VALUES.

The banana pound for pound is more nutritious than the potato and it constitutes the chief carbohydrate food of millions of people in the tropics, where it takes the place of cereals such as wheat, rice and barley and tubers of all kinds, such as potatoes.

Our government experts at Washington tell us that the banana is not only one of the most nutritious fruits but is one of the most easily digested, which, explains some popular theories regarding this fruit.

The banana has still another quality which should highly recommend it. The thick skin which covers it is a protection against all contamination and makes it one of the most sanitary articles of diet.

As to the digestibility of the banana, ripe ones are classed with the easily digested foods, but it is important to see that the fruit is ripe. The skin of the fruit should be dark yellow or covered with brown spots; often the best fruit if firm is found in the skins which are dark brown.

Care should be taken to have the fruit cut from the stalk leaving the skin unbroken.

A ripe banana served with a glass of milk is a satisfying meal for one desiring a light luncheon.

Banana Pie.—Bake a tender pastry shell on an inverted pie tin and when cool fill with thinly sliced banana, sprinkled with salt and lemon juice. Sugar to taste and over all pour a generous cupful of whipped cream sweetened and flavored with almond. Serve well chilled.

Bananas With Steak.—Slice in half a few rather firm bananas; lay in a granite pan with butter, sugar, lemon juice and a sprinkling of salt. Cook in the oven until well done, then serve as a garnish for the steak.

Lamb Chops With Peas.—Broil the chops, having them trimmed uniformly. Arrange on a platter garnished with green peas served in a thick drawn butter sauce.

WHAT IS A FARMER'S TIME WORTH?

How Labor Saving Means Money Saved.

How valuable is the farmer's time? What is it worth per hour? Thirty cents? Fifty cents? A dollar? This can be determined by considering the results obtained during one busy hour on the farm.

It is plain that the value of his time increases as the amount produced by his efforts increases. Labor-saving devices, such as the tractor, harvesting machine, hay fork, hay loader and many others have been introduced on the farm to increase production and cut down the labor cost. The most progressive farmers in any community are those who keep in step with the onward march of things—the fellows who are only willing to do the work as their ancestors did so long as there is a modern and up-to-date way of doing the same thing.

One of the newest products of inventive skill to attract the farmer is the Delco Light plant, a plant that will furnish electric lights about the farm home and electric power for small jobs like operating churns, cream separators, horse clippers, fanning mills, grindstones, washing machines, also pump the water and many other time and labor savers, all of which add to the value of the farmer's time.

So far the development of farm lighting plants has progressed to the extent that it is possible to secure compact lighting units where the necessary gas engine and electric generator are built upon the main shaft, direct-connected, with the gas engine, air-cooled and operating most successfully on kerosene as a fuel. It has been calculated that three or four thousand watt hours of electricity are readily secured from a gallon of fuel. If this fuel is kerosene it is easy to verify the claims of manufacturers that electricity can be secured from these individual lighting plants for five cents per kilowatt hour, or less. It is not uncommon, say certain authorities, to find farmers who have saved from twenty to thirty hours a week by having electricity pump the water and operate various small machines.

Electricity is revolutionizing farm life. It brings the conveniences of the city to the farm and saves time and labor. By the use of these plants the value of the farmer's time will be increased thousands of dollars, to the lasting benefit of the farmer, his family, and, of course, to the advantage of all those individuals who depend upon the farmers' activities for their own success.

Save Time and Labor

Albert Knoepke, Moccasin Montana, says: I would rather quit the ranch than do without Delco-Light. It saves at least 14 hours per week in labor, at a cost of approximately $1.25 per month."

GOODYEAR

Farm Cheese Making.

The operation of cheese making is not difficult or complicated, and a lot of expensive equipment is not required. The best time to make the cheese is immediately after the milk is drawn from the cow. It is well to pour the warm milk back and forth from one bucket to another in order to permit of its aeration, and then transfer it into a cheese vat, tub or large wash boiler. At this point cheese color should be added at the rate of a teaspoonful of color to sixteen gallons of milk, mixing it by thoroughly stirring the milk.

The next step is to add rennet extract to curdle the milk. Before this is done, however, the temperature of the milk should be taken with a dairy thermometer and should be 86 to 88 degrees Fahrenheit. If less than this, the milk should be warmed on a stove until this temperature is reached. The rennet extract is then added at the rate of one ounce to twelve gallons of milk, the extract being first diluted with about ten times its own volume of water. It should be stirred thoroughly into the milk. Curdling will begin in about ten minutes.

Rennet tablets may be used for curdling the milk. A small tablet about the size of a silver dime is sufficient for five gallons of milk. The tablets must be dissolved in cold water before being introduced into the milk. The milk should be stirred constantly for three minutes after the rennet is poured in. Rennet in liquid or tablet form may be procured from dairy supply houses or drug stores.

Great care should be taken not to let the temperature of the milk fall below 86 degrees or rise above 90 degrees. The curd is ready to cut when it breaks clean when a finger is inserted into it and withdrawn without any flakes adhering to the finger. The mass should be cut lengthwise and crosswise in such a way as to divide into cubes about the size of small grains of corn.

At the completion of the cutting, the curd should be stirred about three minutes then heated slowly to 100 degrees, being stirred constantly all the while. It is held at this temperature for 40 minutes. At the end of that time the whey is drawn off, the curd placed in the mold, being gently pressed and the mold rounded up. Next the mass is taken out of the mold, turned upside down and replaced. The cover is then put on and the cheese put into the press. If a regular cheese press is not available, a press can be made by taking a board ling or a wagon tongue twelve feet long and using it as a lever. A bucket full of stones can be placed on the end of the lever to furnish weight for pressing out the whey in the mold. If regular cheese molds are not at hand a tin bucket having holes in the bottom and sides to provide for the draining away of the whey may be used instead. The cheese mold is set upon a box three feet from a wall or post, upon which a slat is nailed. One end of the lever is placed under this slat. A block is set on the cheese mold and upon the block the lever is placed. The weight is first placed about half way between the mold and the end of the lever, later being moved out to the end. After being thus pressed for a few hours the cheese is taken out and dressed. This is done by immersing in warm water, wrapping around the sides a cheesecloth wrapper, and placing a cap on each end. The cheese is then returned to the mold and the pressure applied again for twelve hours. It is then taken out and salted.

The brine salting method gives best results. A very strong brine is made and the cheese left in this about 48 hours, being turned every twelve hours. After salting, the cloths are removed, the cheese wiped dry and placed on a cellar shelf. Within three or four days it is dry enough to be ready to be dipped in hot paraffine to protect the surface from molding and drying out. It should then be cured by placing on shelves in a cool cellar, having a temperature of 55 to 65 degrees. The curing process requires from two to four months.

A gallon of milk will make nearly nine-tenths of a pound of cheese and seven or eight gallons of milk will make six or seven pounds of cheese.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

ARTHUR B. ROUSE

Assured of Re-Election to Congress.

Through advertisements in the columns of this paper in the past few weeks, C. F. Thompson, who opposes Arthur B. Rouse for re-election to Congress, has given out statements which are not sustained by the political situation in the Sixth District. A few weeks ago, Thompson challenged Rouse in debate, and the promise with which Rouse accepted the challenge caused Thompson's followers to recognize his mistake, because the unimpeachable Democratic record of Rouse, forcibly presented by him at the meeting in Newport, quickly refuted every argument of Thompson, and this debate was the beginning of the end of Thompson's feeble campaign. Rouse is a performer rather than a speaker, but the people of his district know that when he speaks he speaks seriously and carries conviction, and that he has never declined to raise his voice upon any occasion, and has always given unstinted service to the people of his district.

In a letter recently sent out, Thompson enclosed a statement signed by John T. Murphy, Chairman of the Kenton County Democratic Campaign Committee of 1918, stating that Rouse took no interest in the campaign, and refused to contribute anything. This statement, like an anonymous circular issued by Thompson, is a misrepresentation and conceals the truth. Rouse has been an active party man at all times, serving his party in State and Nation. He was Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau in Kentucky in the 1916 Presidential Campaign, giving his entire time from September 1st to the close of the election in that year, and this work required his presence in Louisville every day. In this campaign he was the only Congressman from Kentucky that contributed as much as $200.00, and although Thompson was then holding a good office, when asked by Mr. Rouse in Newport what he contributed to that campaign, he stood mute. Mr. Rouse was active in the campaign of 1919, referred to by Mr. Murphy and contributed through his own county organization in the county of Boone, and it was not expected that he should contribute in Kenton county. In addition, Mr. Rouse is a member of the National Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, and is now Vice-Chairman; he is a leader in the party councils at Washington, and is one of the strongest men in the Kentucky delegation today. His ten years of service has well fitted him for his work in Congress. Never before has the Sixth District had as vigorous and energetic a man. Thompson says "ten years of service is enough for Rouse," although Thompson has been an office seeker and office holder for years. Graduating from Law School in 1903, in October, 1905, Thompson became Referee in Bankruptcy for two years under a Republican U. S. Judge. In 1908 he was a candidate for Commonwealth Attorney in Kenton county, and in 1910 candidate for Master Commissioner of the same county. Later in 1910 he sought and became State Executive Commissioner for the Sixth District. In 1911 he was a candidate for the Legislature. On becoming a candidate, he requested the committee to call a convention, although he lays great emphasis on the fact that he has always been an advocate of primary election, and the author of the State Primary Election Bill. The Acts of 1912 Legislature show the Primary Election Bill was introduced in the Senate by Wm. V. Eaton, of McCracken County, and bears his name both in the House and Senate Journals. In 1913 Thompson was a candidate for United States District Attorney, and failing to land that office, became an aspirant for the position of Internal Revenue Collector and held this lucrative position approximately seven years. For office seeking and office holding, how can Thompson complain? In 1914 Thompson endeavored to capture the labor vote by misrepresentation and issuing of anonymous circulars, but he cannot fool the people with a record as fair as that of Rouse, which is approved by the American Federation of Labor and by the Farmer as being in the interest of the great masses. Through his advertisements, Mr. Thompson has endeavored by this propaganda to give the impression that he would carry some counties in the District. The friends of Rouse are ready to state that Thompson will not carry a single county in the District, and that Mr. Rouse will win the nomination by 5,000 majority. Rouse will carry Kenton county by 1500 majority, and will carry Campbell county by 1300 majority. This is but a recognition of his public service to all the people, higher low, rich or poor. Rouse is prompt and efficient in his public service, a good business man, studies legislation and votes right. He will be re-elected because the people of his District believe he is doing the best for the confidence they have reposed in him, and his work and service merit their approbation and his re-election. He will carry every county in the District.

DECREASE IN NUMBER OF CATTLE AND HOGS

Swine Show Falling Off of 10 Per Cent in Births.

About 22 Per Cent Fewer Births of Calves This Year as Compared With 1919, According to Reports to Federal Bureau.

A falling off in the numbers of cattle and hogs in the United States occurred during the first four months of this year, as compared with the like period last year, according to reports of special livestock reporters of the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture. In the case of hogs, the births during January, February, March and April were about 10 per cent fewer than in the same months last year. The marketings have fallen off about 15 per cent, the farm slaughter was about the same in both seasons, but the deaths on farms this year are over 40 per cent heavier than last year. To May 1. Taking into consideration both the births and the deaths (from all causes), it appears that there has been a relative reduction of about 5 per cent during the first four months of this year as compared with the trend during the first four months of last year.

The births of calves from January 1 to May 1 were about 22 per cent fewer this year than last year. The net disposition of cattle by marketings, farm slaughter and deaths was about 9 per cent greater than last year; it appears that there has been a relative reduction of about 6 per cent in total number of cattle as compared with last year during the four months January 1 to May 1.

PLOWING FATAL TO INSECTS

Countless Numbers of Crop Pests Can Be Destroyed by Disking Ground During Fall.

Various field insects pass the winter in the soil. Some of them make earthen nests lined with silk, while others hide at the base of the roots of plants. A. G. Ruggles, state entomologist of Minnesota, thus explains how countless numbers of crop pests can be destroyed:

"When the insect is in the transitional period between the larva or worm and the adult they are very susceptible to disturbances. Disking or plowing the ground in the fall disturbs these forms and many of them die. It is also known that alternate thawing and freezing weather has a destructive effect upon insect life. Many insects can endure freezing alone, but alternate freezing and thawing is fatal.

"Also many of the more delicate forms, if the plowing is done properly, can be covered so deeply with soil that they are unable to reach the surface the following year. Many insects exposed by the plow are also devoured by birds. For these reasons disking or plowing are operations recommended by all economic entomologists."

SUDAN GRASS YIELD FOR HAY

Average About Two and Half Tons Per Acre—Cut After Plants Have Passed Out of Bloom.

Cut Sudan grass for hay after the plants have passed out of bloom, but before the seed has become hard. An average yield is about two and a half tons of dry hay per acre, as compared with about three tons for sorghum on the same kind of land and two tons of millet.

RAPID GROWTH OF CHICKENS

More Advantageous to Feed Five Times During Day Than Three—Over-feeding Harmful.

Undoubtedly chickens will grow faster when fed five times than when fed only three times daily, but it should be borne in mind that more harm can be done to the young chicks by overfeeding than by underfeeding.

AUTUMN SUPPLY OF LETTUCE

Now Sown in Middle of August Will Insure Crop of This Most Succulent Vegetable.

A row of lettuce sown in the middle of August will insure a fine full supply of this most healthful and succulent vegetable. The quality will be even superior to the spring grown. Helander is the best kind for late crops.

Horticultural Facts

UPS AND DOWNS IN PEACHES

Prospective Crop Estimated to Be About 77 Per Cent of Normal—Acreage Decreased.

It is said that the law of compensation works both ways—if the rich man gets his ice in the summer, the poor man gets his share in the winter. Advances of peach production appear to follow the same rule, according to the estimates just published by the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture.

Barring the possibilities of further disaster, the commercial peach orchards of Georgia and North and South Carolina will produce fairly heavy crops. California is scheduled for a bumper crop, and several other states will not be far below their 1919 average in ear lot shipments of peaches, but these good prospects are more than offset by the frost damage inflicted upon the orchards in other states. Texas has been badly hurt, and so, also, have the Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Tennessee orchards. The New England crop is reported ruined, and Washington, Utah, and Idaho report severe winter killing. To some extent the prospective crop is still further diminished by the decrease in acreage devoted to commercial peach orchards.

Altogether the bureau of crop estimates figures the conditions on April 1, 1920, to be about 77 per cent of normal. There is a slight decrease from this figure during the growing season, usually about 10 per cent, which will presumably reduce this early estimate to 67 per cent when the crop is harvested and the final count taken. Last year the April estimate was given as 84 per cent, and the decrease was 8 per cent during the growing season. In terms of bushels the crop last year figured 29,240,000 bushels of fruit. Allowing for the normal 20 per cent decrease in 1920, the crop this fall will be short of last year's production by about 3,000,000 bushels, giving a total of 26,461,000 bushels for the coming harvest.

REMOVE ALL VARIETY TAGS

If Wire Is Permitted to Remain It Slowly Girdles Tree, Eventually Causing Death.

In setting out young fruit trees the variety tag is often left tied to the trees so that the tree may be identified by its variety name in later years. This, however, generally causes more trouble and injury to the tree than the knowledge in knowing what particular variety the tree represents. Frequently a young tree two or three years old will be seen with the wire and tag around the main limb, but the wire imbedded in the growth of the tree to such an extent that when it is removed the top of the tree may die or if the wire is left on the tree it is simply a slow girdling process until the entire top of the tree is dead.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

Berries are fruits that most people relish. This is especially true of strawberries.

The best soil for apple trees is a medium-heavy clay loam soil and well drained. A good many soils are not suitable for an apple orchard.

Peach trees can be pruned to increase vigor in the late fall as soon as most of the leaves are loose upon the twigs and beginning to fall freely.

Those who have given thought to peach growing know that as soon as the fertility of the soil begins to fall the crop is uncertain and of poor quality.

Prune grape vines enough to give plenty of room for each vine so that light and air may get in around them. Most varieties are inclined to produce too much wood.

GRANT,

Local Happenings.

With the Dixie Highway blocked at Florence the attendance at both the Florence and Erlanger fairs will be materially curtailed. Especially will the Florence fair feel the effects of it by a heavy falling off in the attendance from the city. When it was first settled that the road from the fair ground, through Florence on to the railroad in Erlanger would be completed before the fair, but the unavoidable delay in getting the material for the work delayed its beginning until right at fair time.

W. L. Kirkpatrick, county agent for the Kirm Electric Light, has placed an Alamo plant in his business house for demonstrating purposes, and will take pleasure in demonstrating for any one who contemplates investing in an electric plant. The Alamo plant he has installed in his residence is working—leaky, and he and his family are highly pleased with it, and he takes delight in showing it to anyone who wishes information in regard thereto.

"Ty" Cobb, star outfielder of the Detroit baseball club, will appear as a "speakeiser" in the coming Presidential campaign, if plans of Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Democratic National Speakers Bureau, materialize. Senator Harrison announced that he proposed to take Cobb with him on a proposed "swing around the circle" in the interest of Cox and Roosevelt.

Several of the growers in this county began cutting tobacco last week, and considerable of the week will be cut this week, taking the count of the crop. Many acres of tobacco that look like they will not be worth cutting, and they do not have the appearance of making much of a come out even with a favorable season from now on.

Despite the unfavorable weather quite a large crowd gathered at Harvest in Park, last Saturday afternoon and evening, and participated in the dancing. Brothers and Leidy, who have the park leased for the season spare no effort to make all who attend the picnics given by them have a pleasant time.

Of course you will see J. B. Sanders' big lot sale advertised in this issue. It is a splendid location and no doubt but what there will be a large crowd at the sale. This subdivision possesses many advantages that are seldom afforded by large lot sales. Remember the date.

Smith Bros. have begun putting material on the lot in Burlington where they will erect a modern bungalow to be occupied by Russell and his mother. They do not expect to get the building completed this year but will have everything ready to rush the work through next spring.

John Bradford, of Georgetown, attended court in Burlington last Monday and met quite a number of his old Boone county acquaintances he had not seen for quite a while. Mr. Bradford is the picture of health and prosperity and appears to be enjoying life.

Lawrence Kenney's dance at the old Catholic church, Florence, last Friday night, was a big success in every way. The all night long side-lines that afforded a great deal of entertainment for the large crowd. Several Burlington parties were in attendance.

A considerable hay-ride party composed of young people of the Francesville neighborhood, passed through Burlington one day last week. The all night long side-lines that afforded a great deal of entertainment for the large crowd. Several Burlington parties were in attendance.

Carroll county has about the best growing tobacco crop of any of the adjoining counties, but the cool nights and hot days has greatly retarded its growth and in many patches the leaves are not spreading as they should.—News.

Quite a number of small boys and girls of Burlington "took a hayride" last Friday and landed at the home of Thomas Hensley out in the country where they were entertained in the most royal manner by Mrs. Hensley.

Capt. Edward Maurer, of Pittsburg, arrived last Saturday afternoon to visit his father, Joseph Maurer, who has been very ill for some time, and who is not expected to recover on account of his great age.

Robert Lassing bought a Dodge coupe of B. H. Hume last Thursday. He will drive it through to St. Petersburg, Florida, this fall when he returns to that city for the winter.

Congressman A. B. Rouse attended court last Monday and was the recipient of many congratulations on his great victory at the primary election last Saturday.

Frank Rouse started his hay baler last Monday morning. He has a very large amount of work before him along that line.

ROUSE WINS BY 6,000.

Carries Every County In The District.

Arthur Rouse's triumph last Saturday was the most sweeping victory ever achieved in a primary election in this Congressional district. He is wonderfully strong politically in his district. He carried every county in the district by a handsome majority over a long and continuous effort to create an opposition strong enough to tire him. He has made a good Congressman and made a great race for the nomination, which the Democratic voters most willingly gave him for the sixth time. The following vote by counties shows how people appreciate a competent and willing public servant, and how they value him as a countyman—giving him as long as he desires to hold it and renders as efficient service as he has in the past:

	Thompson	Rouse
Burlington	12	1025
Bellview	1	139
Belleview	14	37
Beaver	0	50
Carroll	7	75
Constance	7	75
Florence	13	162
Hamilton	19	63
Petersburg	11	103
Union	1	404
Verona	10	78
Walton	25	149

Total 127 1102

Rouse's majority 1025

Davis received 7 votes in the county—2 in Florence and 1 in each of the following precincts: Burlington, Hamilton, Petersburg, Union, Walton.

Of the several voting precincts in this county Beaver is the one that did its whole duty by its countyman—giving him every vote that was cast.

Bellevue precinct which was claimed for Rouse although it was claimed by Thompson's manager by a large majority.

Following shows Rouse's majority in each of the eight counties in the district:

	1025
Boone	417
Gallatin	685
Carroll	230
Trimbale	304
Pendleton	310
Keaton	925
Campbell	1935

Rouse carried every precinct in Boone, Gallatin, Carroll and Trimbale. He lost on several precincts out of 46 in Campbell and 17 precincts out of 48 in Keaton, Beaver, Lick, Boone gave Rouse 50 to 0. Wilders in Campbell, gave him 32 to 0, and Burrows in Trimbale gave him 31 to 0.

The storms in several counties in this Congressional District last Saturday afternoon crippled the telegraph and telephone systems so badly that it was with difficulty that the returns from the primary election were obtained.

Congressman Arthur B. Rouse hands the Recorder the following: Dear Mr. Riddell:—Will you please express to the voters my deep appreciation for the grand majority which they gave me last Saturday and also state that I will continue to give the duties of the office my undivided attention.

Very Respectfully,
A. B. ROUSE.

Tuberculosis in Poultry.

County agents in certain sections of the Middle West report the finding of tuberculosis in some of the chicken flocks in their localities. In order to locate and check any further outbreaks of this disease they are requesting all farmers who chickens die without any apparent cause to notify the farm bureau and to send in the livers of the dead birds for examination. The disease is likely to show in this organ most plainly.

Tuberculosis of fowls is a chronic, contagious disease characterized by the development of nodules called tubercles in various organs of the body, but most frequently in the liver, spleen, and intestines. It is readily communicated to most species of birds and to several species of mammals, but it is almost impossible to communicate the tuberculosis of man and cattle to fowls.

One practical course to take when the disease is found in a flock is to kill off the whole flock as quickly as possible and to disinfect thoroughly all the houses and runs immediately, says the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Unless disinfection is thorough the new flock is likely to contract the disease when placed in the infected houses and yards. When possible new birds should be placed on new ground. Another method of combating tuberculosis is to dispose of all hens after the second laying period and to destroy affected fowls as soon as symptoms appear.

The eggs of diseased birds frequently contain the bacilli, experiments prove, and young chicks hatched from such infected eggs are diseased.

GRADING ADDS TO FARMER'S PROFITS.

When a farmer orders a box of bolts of a certain make and size, the farmer must expect to find a thin layer of the bolts specified on the top of the box and assorted bolts underneath in the world of commerce. Manufacturers who nursed such practices would soon be bankrupt.

WOMAN POWER WASTE A MENACE TO FARMERS.

Washington, June 19.—Modernization of farm homes and general usage of labor-saving devices as a means to prevent waste of woman power, are urged in a report made public today by the Department of Agriculture, agents of which recently conducted a survey of farm homes.

This waste of woman power, the report asserts, is one of the greatest menaces to the rural life of the nation. A reasonable amount of planning and well-directed investment in modern farm home equipment, it continues, would prevent a large part of the present waste of energy on the part of the nation's rural homemakers.

Pleased With Appointments.

The Evening Post congratulates the State Board of Charities and Corrections upon the appointments made at the State Reformatory, at Frankfort, and the State Hospital for the Insane at Lexington. Both institutions recognized experts, men of national reputation, have been put in charge. In both cases the appointments were made entirely by the State Board. The State Board is redeeming to the letter its promises to the State of Kentucky. Political considerations and the rooming of the political party have been considered not at all; the only object of the board has been to secure men who are capable of doing constructive work.

The Boone county pooled wool has not been sold, the prices offered up to the present time not being satisfactory.

FARMERS MEET

To Consider Cutting Out The 1921 Crop of Tobacco.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 5.—At a meeting of farmers from Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, held here representatives of twenty-eight of the chief tobacco producing counties of the "hove states" went on record as unanimously in favor of cutting out the 1921 burley crop in order that more food crops may be raised on land hitherto given over to the cultivation of tobacco. Announcement was made after the meeting that a convention of farmers from every tobacco growing county in the three States will be held in Lexington on August 15th, at which every farmer present will be asked to vote on the proposition. This vote will be taken whether 50,000 farmers who annually produce 300,000,000 pounds of tobacco will cut out any years crop included in the 300 farmers present at the meeting were representatives from twenty-five Kentucky counties, Cleveland county, Ohio, and Switzerland and Jefferson county, Indiana.

FEW ENTER "DISMAL SWAMP"

Forbidding Region in Virginia and North Carolina Extends No Hospitable Hand to Visitors.

The name "Dismal Swamp" is a byword everywhere and legends have grown up around it of a dreary, boggy, unknown region of snakes and dark, damp thickets, where runaway slaves fled for refuge. This region is but little better known today than it was when George Washington himself laid out a route through it. The swamp is a historically the first settlers at Norfolk and the region round about knew of it as a wild, impassable bit of country. It was a place of timber, swamps, and good for making shingles; juniper, black gum and beech. In 1728 Col. Byrd, while trying to establish the boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina, ran a survey across it, working with the greatest difficulty and making only a mile a day, thru the swamp. DECREASE IN NUMBER OF CATTLE AND HOGS

Swine Show Falling Off of 10 Per Cent in Births.

About 22 Per Cent Fewer Births of Calves This Year as Compared With 1919, According to Reports to Federal Bureau.

A falling off in the numbers of cattle and hogs in the United States occurred during the first four months of this year, as compared with the like period last year, according to reports of special livestock reporters of the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture.

In the case of hogs, the births during January, February, March and April were about 10 per cent fewer than in the same months last year. The marketings have fallen off about 15 per cent, the farm slaughter was about the same in both seasons, but the deaths on farms this year are over 40 per cent heavier than last year to May 1. Taking into consideration both the births and the deaths (from all causes), it appears that there has been a relative reduction of about 5 per cent during the first four months of this year as compared with the trend during the first four months of last year.

The births of calves from January 1 to May 1 were about 22 per cent fewer this year than last year. The net disposition of cattle by marketings, farm slaughter and deaths was about 9 per cent greater than last year; it appears that there has been a relative reduction of about 6 per cent in total number of cattle as compared with last year during the four months January 1 to May 1.

PLOWING FATAL TO INSECTS

Countless Numbers of Crop Pests Can Be Destroyed by Disking Ground During Fall.

Various field insects pass the winter in the soil. Some of them make earthen nests lined with silk, while others hide at the base of the roots of plants. A. G. Ruggles, state entomologist of Minnesota, thus explains how countless numbers of crop pests can be destroyed:

"When the insect is in the transitional period between the larva or worm and the adult they are very susceptible to disturbances. Disking or plowing the ground in the fall disturbs these forms and many of them die. It is also known that alternate thawing and freezing weather has a destructive effect upon insect life. Many insects can endure freezing alone, but alternate freezing and thawing is fatal.

"Also many of the more delicate forms, if the plowing is done properly, can be covered so deeply with soil that they are unable to reach the surface the following year. Many insects exposed by the plow are also devoured by birds. For these reasons disking or plowing are operations recommended by all economic entomologists."

SUDAN GRASS YIELD FOR HAY

Average About Two and Half Tons Per Acre—Cut After Plants Have Passed Out of Bloom.

Cut Sudan grass for hay after the plants have passed out of bloom, but before the seed has become hard. An average yield is about two and a half tons of dry hay per acre, as compared with about three tons for sorghum on the same kind of land and two tons of millet.

RAPID GROWTH OF CHICKENS

More Advantageous to Feed Five Times During Day Than Three—Over-feeding Harmful.

Undoubtedly chickens will grow faster when fed five times than when fed only three times daily, but it should be borne in mind that more harm can be done to the young chicks by overfeeding than by underfeeding.

AUTUMN SUPPLY OF LETTUCE

New Sown in Middle of August Will Insure Crop of This Most Succulent Vegetable.

A row of lettuce sown the middle of August will insure a fine fall supply of this most beautiful and succulent vegetable. The quality will be even superior to the spring grown. Main-lander is the best kind for late crops.

UPS AND DOWNS IN PEACHES

Prospective Crop Estimated to Be About 7 Per Cent of Normal—Acreage Decreased.

It is said that the law of compensation works both ways—if the rich man gets his ice in the summer, the poor man gets his share in the winter. Averages of peach production appear to follow the same rule, according to the estimates just published by the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture.

Barring the possibilities of further disaster, the commercial peach orchards of Georgia and North and South Carolina will produce fairly heavy crops. California is scheduled for a bumper crop, and several other states will not be far below their 1919 average in ear lot shipments of peaches, but these good prospects are more than offset by the frost damage inflicted upon the orchards in other states. Texas has been badly hurt, and so, also, have the Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Tennessee orchards. The New England crop is reported ruined, and Washington, Utah, and Idaho report severe winter killing. To some extent the prospective crop is still further diminished by the decrease in acreage devoted to commercial peach orchards.

Altogether the bureau of crop estimates figures the conditions on April 1, 1920, to be about 77 per cent of normal. There is a slight decrease from this figure during the growing season, usually about 10 per cent, which will presumably reduce this early estimate to 67 per cent when the crop is harvested and the final count taken. Last year the April estimate was given as 84 per cent, and the decrease was 9 per cent during the growing season. In terms of bushels the crop last year figured 29,240,000 bushels of fruit. Allowing for the normal 20 per cent decrease in 1920, the crop this fall will be short of last year's production by about 3,000,000 bushels, giving a total of 26,461,000 bushels for the coming harvest.

REMOVE ALL VARIETY TAGS

If Wire Is Permitted to Remain It Slowly Girdles Tree, Eventually Causing Death.

In setting out young fruit trees the variety tag is often left tied to the tree so that the tree may be identified by its variety name in later years. This, however, generally causes more trouble and injury to the tree than the knowledge in knowing what particular variety the tree represents. Frequently a young tree two or three years old will be seen with the wire and tag around the main limb, but the wire imbedded in the growth of the tree to such an extent that when it is removed the top of the tree may die or if the wire is left on the tree it is simply a slow girdling process until the entire top of the tree is dead.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

Berries are fruits that most people relish. This is especially true of strawberries.

The best soil for apple trees is a medium-heavy clay loam soil and well drained. A good many soils are not suitable for an apple orchard.

Peach trees can be pruned to increase vigor in the late fall as soon as most of the leaves are loose upon the twigs and beginning to fall freely.

Those who have given thought to peach growing know that as soon as the fertility of the soil begins to fail the crop is uncertain and of poor quality.

Prune grape vines enough to give plenty of room for each vine so that light and air may get in around them. Most varieties are inclined to produce too much wood.

LINEN IS USED IN NEW UNDIES

Fabric Is Highly in Favor for Lingerie Since Silks Now Are Very Costly.

LACE IS MORE CONSPICUOUS

Decoration Gains in Preference for Embellishment of Garments—Colors Have Become More and Still More Varied.

The land is alluring with sales of white, which means that the summer underthings are upon the counters in great multitude, observes a fashion writer. Have you ever asked to buy lingerie during spaces between these sales of white? And have you not been discouraged because there was so little choice? Well, the lesson learned by experience of this sort is to wander forth at the white time of year and to do your buying then, for you will find the wares of the world presented for your selection.

The materials now are inferior to those of some years ago. Now we see blooming under the $3.98 sign just an array that would have formerly been relegated to the basement. The dealers have announced that they are pushing domestic underclothes because of the scarcity of French and Philippine stocks, and so we see cotton creases and muslins of none too dainty a quality and our imaginations picture the thickness of them as we, perforce, bid goodbye to the thin silk and muslin surfaces to which our pampered skins have become accustomed.

Fine Apparel Expensive.

However, once the situation has been studied, we find that we need not at once join the ranks of the wearers of heavy muslin underwear unless we be so inclined. There are ways to dodge around these counters of thicknesses and paths that lead to more attractive displays, though the result brings over the inevitable conclusion that much money is needed for a respectable looking wardrobe.

The chiffon and silk lingerie is more daintily made than ever before and more originally conceived. But it looks as though the fine French underwear made of dainty nainsook or handkerchief linen were wedging its way to the foremost ranks. During the war we were deprived of this type of underwear, but it is, after all, the most attractive sort of lingerie and, stowily but surely, it is marching to leadership. More importations are being made every day. One buyer of French lingerie made the statement that the French were repeating their former achievements and that they had no thought for anything new. Well, if the pure delicacy and charm cannot be improved upon, then we are thankful enough for the things as they exist!

Among the many bridal trousseaus that have been purchased during the last five months, muslin undergarments have held the vote of popularity. Silk things there have been, of course (they are too beautiful to be ignored), but the thin muslin and then things intricately handmade have received new attention, so the dealers in these things say.

Lace in the Linelight.

Lace is being used more and more conspicuously for underclothes. You will say that this has been done since the beginning of things, but this new lace is of wide bands and is used in great abundance. One sees the finer sorts of handmade laces inserted in medallions on the new undergarments. There are lace panels for chemises, lace edgings, five, six and seven inches in depth, put on in slightly ruffled soundings; real lace tops for camisoles and nightgowns; lace sleeves and yokes for night dresses; lace in every conceivable usage.

In fact the newer night dresses are so elaborately done and so bedecked with wide and expensive trimmings of lace that one can severely discomfit them from the prevalent neologies. There are linen night frocks trimmed with Irish lace and laces of other expensive and real varieties. One had a yoke and sleeves of Chantilly with a wide band to nurse the hem of the garment. It was as beautiful as anything which has ever been shown in the way of lingerie and surely marks a return to the lingerie that was done in the trousseaus of our grandmothers. The silk and chiffon nightclothes have not diminished in beauty nor in quantity, and in spite of the fact that we hear how scarce these materials have become there seems to be every evidence of plenty of silken underclothes for those who can afford them. A new set of chiffon underwear was trimmed with satin bindings of narrow ribbon plucked over the edges and many streamers of the same color of ribbon (the sets were made in many colors) streaming from the places where the ribbon was used to tie the garments into place.

New Negligee With Marabou Trimming and Embroidered Stitches in Wool.

Absence of Buttons.

There seems to be a welcome absence of buttons on all of the newer underwear. More and more the designs appear with rubber bands and loosely tied ribbons to hold them in their proper positions. The easier they are to wear the less will we resent the cost.

Tailored underwear has come into favor recently, and there is, in consequence, much of that variety of underwear to be seen. There is much to be said in its favor, for there are many women who, in the daily course of their lives, cannot stop to fuss with ribbons and laces and rosebuds. Still they cling to that tendency which is their right—the love of dainty, soft and luxurious underwear. It is there that the tailored silk underwear comes into its own.

Following the pattern of the single piece men's underwear there have been some things like this designed for women's wear and they have won a real response. They are made of fine qualities of silks and wash satins in white or in flesh color and they have never a flower nor a furrow to bedeck them. Then there are bloomers, which have proved beyond doubt the strength of their hold upon the feminine masses. They are useful for wear with tight skirts, which, to look their best, demand that petticoats be thrown into the discard.

The colors of the new underthings become more and more varied. The tradition of white for purposes of this sort has almost vanished. Now, any pastel shade is used and the more unusual it is the better. We have seen the outer effects of black and red and orange underclothes and marvelled at them, but, nevertheless, we have settled back into a casual acceptance of colored underwear as an everyday possibility. In chiffon and in crepe de chine and satin the colors vary through all tones and shades, and even in the cotton materials there is seen every variety of tone.

On the thinned underclothes there is much use of embroidery in silk threads, in woolen threads, in mercerized stitches and even in colored cotton embroidery stitchings. It is considered much better to form an edge by a buttonholing of some contrasting shade than to resort to the old method of just making a hem. Then there are the long woolen stockings, which show to their best advantage on the thin chiffon thighs.

From underwear to negligee is but a slip, and it does seem as though we were paying more attention to the graceful and becoming robes d'intérieur which so long have been a necessary part of the wardrobe of a French woman. Never before have we shown such a concentrated interest in the gowns which are for private appearance only.

The lines of the new negligees are simple enough, but the trimmings grow more gorgeous as one season melts into another. On the newest ones there are layers of chiffon so constructed that the things look only like floating clouds. Every trick and scheme is resorted to that the garment may be lightness itself. Lace is used lavishly. Sometimes it is used to the overdone and then again it is used for the foundation slip so that only a suggestion of its lacyness shines through the negligee. Silk lace trims the edges of other chiffon negligees, being carried around the long lines of the outer edges and giving the effect of something not quite tangible in its softness.

The KITCHEN CABINET

What beauty some women have they acquire as men do by inheritance, education and practice—not otherwise.—Campbell.

GOOD AND SIMPLE FOODS.

A plain cake which is not at all expensive but is tender and delicious may be made of one egg and one white of egg until light then add one cupful of sugar and a cupful of sour cream, a tablespoonful of lard, a little salt, one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, one-half teaspoonful of soda and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, vanilla. Beat well and bake in layer cake pans. Use any filling desired. Whipped cream sweetened and flavored is a good one.

Ham on Toast.—Put ham through the meat grinder. To one cupful add one-half cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and one-half tablespoonful of flour. Cook a few minutes, spread on toast, break an egg on top and set in the oven until the egg sets.

Sweet Potato and Almond Croquettes.—Bake four medium-sized sweet potatoes and remove from the skins. There should be two cupfuls. Add three tablespoonfuls of blanched and finely chopped almonds, one teaspoonful of salt, a few gratings of nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one egg well beaten. Add enough milk to make of the right consistency to shape. Roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat.

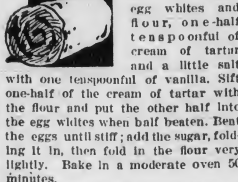

French Pancakes.—Beat the yolks and whites separately of four eggs. To the yolks add two cupfuls each of milk and flour, a teaspoonful of grated lemon rind and one-half tablespoonful of melted butter. Fold in the whites beaten stiff and bake on a hot greased griddle. Make the cakes large and spread with butter and put together with grated maple sugar. Cut to serve like pie.

Baked Codfish.—Soak salt fish in water until soft. Flake one cupful, slice four cold boiled potatoes and arrange alternately in a buttered dish with the codfish. Sprinkle each layer with chopped stuffed olives, using one-half cupful. Make a sauce, using one and one-half cupfuls of tomatoes, a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, one small onion, chopped, salt and pepper to taste. Cover with coarse breadcrumbs stirred in melted butter and bake until the crumbs are brown.

SOME GOOD CAKES.

A simple and easy way to make angel food which takes a moderate number of eggs is the following: Take one cupful of sugar, one cupful of whites, one cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a little salt with one teaspoonful of vanilla. Sift one-half of the cream of tartar with the flour and put the other half into the egg whites when half beaten. Beat the eggs until stiff, add the sugar, folding it in, then fold in the flour very lightly. Bake in a moderate oven 50 minutes.

Gold Cake.—Take four eggs well beaten; do not separate. Add one cupful of water to the eggs. Cream half a cupful of butter, add one and one-fourth cupfuls of sugar and two and one-half cupfuls of flour with three tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with lemon. Bake in loaf or layers.

Date Torte.—Take one cupful each of chopped nuts, sugar and dates, one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two well beaten eggs. Bake in a sheet and serve with whipped cream.

Election Cake.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, one cupful of bread sponge, one egg, one cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of sour milk, two-thirds of a cupful of raisins, eight chopped figs, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cloves, the same of nutmeg, mace, and one-fourth cupfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of soda.

Golden Orange Cake.—Take one-half cupful of clarified fat, one cupful of New Orleans molasses, one tablespoonful of sugar, one egg, the juice and rind of an orange, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one-half cupful of cold water, two cupfuls of pastry flour, salt to taste. Bake in a shallow pan and cover while hot with butter and powdered sugar.

Pikeville.—A number of persons report seeing a lion in the mountains near Caney Creek.

Maysville.—Negro soldiers in the World War have organized a branch of the American Legion here.

Wm. D. Girdler, 32 years old, was instantly killed and his brother-in-law, William Case, seriously injured when a heavy limb from a tree they were cutting fell on them.

Augusta.—A 160-foot wooden bridge, crossing North Fork between Bracken and Robertson counties, collapsed just after a loaded wagon had passed over. The bridge was 75 years old.

Bowling Green.—Fire destroyed the keepers residence at the Warren county fair grounds, entailing a loss of several thousand dollars. The fire was due to a defective flue.

Maysville.—Henry Holton of the Trinity neighborhood lost his big barn by fire. It contained hay, corn, 1,000 bushels of wheat, farming implements and four horses. Holton was badly burned about the head trying to save the horses. The loss will be fully $5,000 with no insurance.

Lexington.—Removal of the cornerstone of the Lexington Public Library building may be resorted to in order to obtain a copy of a pamphlet on the history of the institution, the first west of the Alleghenies, written and published by Mrs. Mary K. Bullitt in 1902 or 1903.

New Haven.—Revenue agents made a raid thru the hills in the vicinity of Glasgow, Ky. here, and destroyed three moonshine stills. The stills, large and completely equipped, were found on the banks of Bush creek, and had apparently been abandoned only a few hours when discovered.

Paducah.—Should the injunction suit of McCracken-co., dairy men, which seeks to restrain the city of Paducah from enforcing the milk ordinance requiring the tuberculin test of dairy cattle be denied by the Court of Appeals, a strike of dairymen will be declared on October 1. Dairymen involved will not sell butter or milk in Paducah after that date, according to Taylor's report. The city ordinance was upheld in McCracken County Circuit Court last week.

Campbellville.—The county agent, M. J. Miller, of this county, has just returned from a short tour of the adjacent counties, and considers farming conditions in Taylor ahead of any in this part of the State. The recent rains have been most beneficial to corn, which was beginning to suffer from drought. Pasture has been much improved and farmers are holding their young stock instead of rushing it on the market, as they were inclined to do before the rains.

Frankfort.—While holding strictly to the letter of the law, requiring qualified teachers in rural schools, George Colvin, state superintendent, is urging county superintendents to extra efforts in supplying the deficiency in the teaching force and has written them to advertise widely the special teachers' examination to be held August 6 and 7. In the meantime he is compiling data obtained from reports on the situation, requested from each superintendent, showing whether there is a shortage of teachers or a surplus. He will undertake to bring the extra teachers, where there is a surplus and the vacant schools together.

Hodgenville.—The interest war which is being waged between banks in Louisville threatens to extend to the banks of the central part of the State. Two banks at Mumfordsville some time ago raised the rate of interest on time deposits from 3 per cent. to 4 per cent. and they were followed by banks at Greene. Now neighboring banks are confronted with the problem of raising interest rates, or suffering the loss of deposits. It is expected a meeting to consider the question will be held soon.

Torpid Liver

Black-Draught "has no equal for headache, sour stomach, torpid liver and feverish colds." declares Mrs. Annie Whitmore, of Gate City, Va. "It is easy to take and does not gripe, as a lot of medicines do," she adds. "It is good to take in a hot tea for colds, or can be taken in a dry powder. I can't say enough for Black-Draught and the sickness it has saved us."

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT

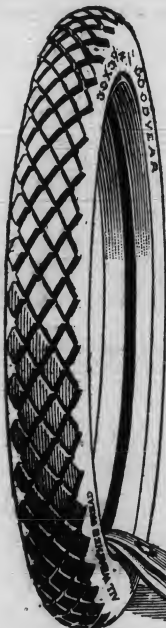

has been found a valuable liver medicine, in thousands of homes. "I do not use any other liver medicine," says Mrs. Mary O. Brown, of Europa, Miss. "It is splendid for sour stomach, a bad taste in the mouth, torpid liver. I keep it all the time, use it with the children and feel it has saved us many dollars in doctor bills and many days in bed."

GOODYEAR

WEALTH IN WATER.

Her oceans, lakes and rivers are not the least of the many great bounties nature has lavished upon this country. In fact, in this respect America stands pre-eminent among all nations. Surrounded by the two greatest oceans, she is, in this age of swiftships the next-door neighbor to all peoples of the earth. Her great lakes are in extent equal to world connecting seas. Her rivers are unexcelled in length and depth, and present an arrangement, of which no other country can boast, of establishing a connect with all points of the compass, flowing not only from north to south, but also from east to west.

If there were no railroads this country, by means of canals, could establish a nation-wide system of transportation by water. These immense advantages have been utilized to a very limited extent, because of speed being the characteristic of this country. On this ground water was neglected as a vehicle of transportation, and all energy bent on the building of railroads.

But the industrial and commercial activities of this country have developed to such an extent that railroads have lost much of the advantage of swift service.

This is sufficiently exemplified by the one fact that the average time required to move a railway car through the Toledo terminal is 22 days.

This is too slow a pace for American energy, and all eyes are turned to the natural waterways so amply provided by nature. Various projects are under discussion to exploit the water resources of this country. The limited sums Congress has allowed for the improvement of the Ohio and her tributaries have worked wonders. All of them are teeming with large vessels. Rivers that have never carried anything more than rowboats have gained the importance of vehicles of industry. This demonstrated usefulness should induce Congress to speed the day of opening up the immense territory drained by the Ohio. In less than 10 years the gain from making available resources that now are inaccessible, in this territory alone would more than make up the cost of the great war.

Out in the State.

Paris—Several carloads of Mexicans have arrived in this part of Kentucky in the last few days, having been brought in by the farmers to help meet the scarcity of farm labor, due in part to the exodus of negro help which began when Northern industry began to make appeals to the colored brother several years ago. The Mexicans brought in are not men alone, but women and children also, comprising whole families in some instances. They are supposed to have been gathered up on the Mexican border by labor agencies alive to the demand for labor at high pay throughout the agricultural communities.

Paris—While J. H. Wagoner was driving on the Spears Mill pike, two hold-up men seized the bridle of his horse while a third attempted to climb into his buggy. Mr. Wagoner fired three shots at the men, one of which he thinks took effect. They fled in the darkness. Shortly after an automobile party reported passing three men, two of whom were supporting a companion. Mr. Wagoner believes the men were Mexicans.

Pineville—The Ford Motor Car Co., Detroit, has purchased the extensive mining properties of the Banner Ford Coal Corporation in Harlan county. It is understood that $1,500,000 was paid. The Banner Ford Coal Corporation is composed of Virginia capitalists.

Mayaville—Shortage of teachers was demonstrated when at a meeting of the County Board of Education for the purpose of filling 11 vacancies. Not an application was received, although pay has been doubled for the coming school year.

Greensburg—The Greensburg Loose Leaf Warehouse plant was destroyed by fire, including the salesroom and the several prize-winning rooms. The loss to the building is estimated at $100,000, with only a small amount of insurance. There were more than 500,000 pounds of tobacco also destroyed, which was owned by various tobacco dealers, with but little insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown. It has not yet been decided whether it will be rebuilt this year.

Richmond—The four-year-old son of Shirley Parks, residing near Redhouse, was killed by lightning. The bolt struck a barn near the house where the boy was standing on the porch. The barn was destroyed by fire.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

G. B. POWERS,
WALTON, KY.

TRUCKS "SAVE TIME,"

Say Many Farmers As A Reason For Owning Them.

"What do you find to be the greatest advantage of owning a motor truck?"

Of 753 farm owners of motor trucks who were asked this question by the United States Department of Agriculture, 91 per cent said "saving time."

About 25 per cent of these men had found better markets since buying their trucks, but 50 per cent of them had not cut down the number of their work by as much as a single head, while less than one man in ten had cut down his work stock more than two head.

"Which merely goes to show," says a department specialist in farm power, "how difficult it is to arrive at a definite conclusion in a matter like this motor truck study we have just completed. It would certainly appear that any saving, attributable to the motor truck on the farm, is in time saved rather than in expense. Most of these men think that the profits accruing from the saving in time more than overbalance any extra expense entailed by the use of the motor truck. It is significant that the majority of these farmers are located in a considerable distance from market, more than four-fifths of them being five miles or more from their shipping points, and the saving in time effected by their use of trucks is naturally greater. It would be on the average farm, which lies nearer to market than do most of the farms concerned in this investigation. The experience of the 753 farmers who have contributed to this study should enable the farmer himself to judge with a fair degree of accuracy as to whether the motor truck would prove advantageous under his conditions."

The investigation in question was made during the past winter and spring. Farmers in the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Indiana, who have motor trucks for use on their own farms, were asked to report to the department the types and sizes of their trucks, the cost of operating them, the advantages and disadvantages of trucks on farm use, and other related information.

A study of the reports of 753 of these farmers has just been completed by the Office of Farm Management and Farm Economics. The farms in which these men operate are of all sizes and types and the motor trucks are of all sizes, from one-half to five tons. The rated capacity of very few of the trucks is greater than 2 tons, however, and nearly half of them are of the 1-ton size.

Among the important facts revealed by the investigation may be mentioned the following:

Only 18 per cent of these farms are less than five miles from market and nearly one-fourth of them are 20 miles or more from market.

Ninety-five per cent of the farmers believe that their trucks will turn out to be profitable investments.

One-ton trucks are preferred by more men than any other size. About half of the owners of one-half and three-fourths ton trucks prefer sizes larger than they now own.

In the opinions of these men the principal disadvantage of a motor truck is "poor roads." As compared with horse and wagons, the trucks save from one-half to two-thirds of the time required for hauling material to and from these farms.

These farmers have returned for their trucks about one-fourth of the time.

A majority of them still use their horses for some road hauling.

On the majority of the farms all the hauling other than road hauling is done with horses and wagons.

About one-fourth of the men do some custom hauling with their trucks. The average amount received per year by those who do such work is $174.

On the average there are about eight weeks during the year when the roads are in such condition on account of mud, snow, etc., that these trucks can not be used.

The roads on which three-fourths of them usually travel are all or part dirt.

About one-fourth of the farmers have changed their markets for at least a part of their produce since purchasing trucks. For those who have changed markets, the average distance to the old market is seven miles, and the average distance to the new market is 20 miles.

The owners estimate that, on the average, their trucks travel 3,820 miles per year, and are used on 173 days per year.

The average life of the trucks is between six and seven years, and in most cases depreciation is the largest single item of expense in connection with their operation.

Most of the owners of one-half and three-fourths ton trucks prefer pneumatic tires, the owners of 1-ton trucks are about evenly divided in their preference, and most of the owners of trucks larger than 1-ton prefer solid tires.

Over two-thirds of the trucks had not been out of commission when needed for a single day during the year covered by the report, and nearly the same proportion of the owners stated that they had not lost any appreciable time on account of motor and tire trouble, breakage, etc., when using their trucks. However, about one truck in thirty had been out of commission more than one day.

The average cost of operation of the one-half ton trucks was about 8 cents per mile; of the three-fourths-ton trucks, about 13 cents; of the 1-ton, about twelve cents; of the 1½ and 2-ton, about 19 cents; and of the 2-ton, about 20 cents.

The average cost of hauling crops, including the value of the driver's time at 50 cents an hour, was about 50 cents per ton-mile with the one-half ton trucks, 34 cents with the three-fourths-ton trucks, 26 cents with the 1-ton, 21 cents with the 1½ and 2-ton, and 12 cents with the 2-ton trucks.

About four-fifths of the men state that their trucks decrease their expense for hired help. On the average they estimate that this decrease amounts to $321 per year.

Over half of the 205 truck owners whose farms contain more than 120 acre acres own tractors. The number of work stock kept on the farms where both trucks and tractors are owned is only slightly less than the number kept on farms of corresponding size where only trucks are owned.

Family Saved Him.

Frankfort — "After seeing the photograph of his wife and eleven children," said Gov. Morrow, in pardoning Zach Monday, a Madison county negro, convicted of chicken stealing, "I am constrained to believe that every end of justice has been served by six months' imprisonment." The picture taken in a group, was sent to the Governor with a pardon plea. County Atty. O. P. Jackson wrote the evidence was conflicting. Other citizens reminded the Governor that arrest of a negro for chicken stealing is as good as conviction. Zach himself said in his letter: "The Democrats here got it in for me because I'm black and born Republican. They would of hung me if they could." He protested that the two chickens, valued at $2.70, for which he has been serving a year's sentence, belonged to him. "The prosecuting witness was engaged in the poultry business next door. Zach sold the chickens. A glance at the twelve dusky faces convinced the Governor that it was the expedient thing for Zach to do. Two chickens would have made a heavy enough to go around."

Woodburn — Cantaloupe growers are beginning to crate the first fruits of the season. The acreage is short due to the few farmers who were willing to try the fruit crop as a money-maker. This is the first year of the association in Warren county. There are 175 acres.

Manfordsville — Clarence Pickett, a prominent young farmer living about six miles west of Manfordsville, was killed when a team of young mules which he was driving, while hauling timber on his farm, ran away and threw him off of the wagon.

Kentucky News Gullies

Mayssville, July 26 — Edward B. Chion, 43 years old, died at his home here after a long illness, the nature of which baffled physicians here and many specialists from several cities. He resided a piece of marble, looking like his entire body was ossified.

Bowling Green — The crop of Elberta peaches of Warren county began to move Thursday, according to a statement of Secretary Graham. The crop will consist of probably ten cars, and were purchased by the Denunzio Fruit Co. of Louisville. The sale price was $3.50 per bushel for No. 1 stock and $3.00 for No. 2. The peach crop is fine this year throughout the county.

Frankfort — Gov. E. P. Morrow laid down the law on "pistol totting" in Kentucky. He said it must be stopped. He issued the following statement:

"The habit of carrying pistols in Kentucky must be destroyed. The state has suffered terribly in the past from this vicious habit. I do not intend to use the power of the Governor to promote and encourage this habit by pardoning those who have been found guilty, but I do propose to uphold and encourage the law and insist upon its enforcement and to deny, promptly, application for pardon. Pistol carrying promotes homicide."

Springfield — Continued dry weather in this section played havoc with crops. Tobacco has been damaged about 10 per cent and the corn crop is cut about one-third. Grass has about dried up and cattle are losing weight as a result. Farmers are concerned over the prospects of the crop failure.

Glasgow — Barren county has the best prospects for a corn crop that it has had in twenty years. This, in connection with the fact that farmers have already harvested the best hay and oat crops in years, with a fair wheat crop, makes them at least feel more optimistic over the high prices of grain. The main drawback just now is the tobacco crop, which is the poorest in years. The bulk of the tobacco crop was wet late and has never done any good.

That the high cost of living has reached the pinnacle and that prices of commodities have begun to recede is noticeable to the shrewd observer. The farmer had this brought home to him in a most forcible manner. When the wheat threshing machine in the middle of July every bushel of it found a ready market in Central Missouri at $2.68. But this price did not last long. The price of wheat began to recede almost immediately, and in a few days it was down to $2. Early in August wheat was selling at $1.90 and the farmer was fearful that the price would go still lower. And wheat is a good price barometer. Other commodities may be a little slower in coming back to normal prices, but it is inevitable.

Thos. Cowen, of Memphis, Tenn., is visiting his sisters, Mrs. Laura Martin and Miss Pinkie Cowen and other relatives here. He is the picture of health and prosperity and appears to be enjoying life to the fullest extent. Mr. Cowen has been in Memphis for 18 years, where he has been engaged in the life insurance business all the time, and is recognized as one of the best insurance men in that city. He will ever have a warm place in his heart for his native town, and delights in looking over the scenes of his boyhood and the recalling of the many exciting events in which he was a participant. The people of Burlington always enjoy his visit to his old home, and are sorry when the time comes for him to return to the sunny south.

Kentucky women who have lived in the state a year, in the county six months and in a precinct 30 days are to have the legal right to vote for President at the coming presidential election, regardless of whether any state constitutionally provides for it. This is the law of the state until the Courts decide otherwise, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Charles I. Dawson to County Clerk William Millis, of Newport, in response to a letter of inquiry.

Seaplane service between Cincinnati and Louisville will be established this week. The route will cover the course of the Ohio river. It is the purpose to carry express matter, passengers and mail. The distance between the two cities will be covered in a very short time, and in matter of time the service will be great improvement over the steamboat.

Several times last Saturday afternoon business in court had to be suspended to await the getting away of the Ford after it had been cranked on the street in the vicinity of the court house. On several occasions it appeared to be making the largest volume of noise possible and that is some noise at all know.

A very fine rain fell here last Sunday. It began raining in the morning and continued until about one o'clock during which considerable water came down in a gentle manner. It was cloudy the remainder of the day and vegetation got full benefit of the rain. A hard rain fell about six o'clock.

On account of the unfavorable weather the annual meeting of the local colored church was so largely attended last Sunday although there was quite a good crowd present, many of whom came quite a distance in trucks and automobiles.

The rains that came last Wednesday and Thursday nights were exactly at the proper time to insure a bumper crop of corn for this county. The early corn will especially profit by the copious supply of moisture.

A big revival service is in progress at South Fork Christian church, Rev. O. A. Tinker, one of Indiana's most prominent preachers is in charge. Large congregations are attending.

Frank Kirkpatrick and wife, of Ludlow, were guests at the Burlington relatives last Sunday. It had been many years since Mr. Kirkpatrick had made his old home a visit.

All roads lead to Erlanger this week where the big fair is in progress. As usual the association has made big arrangements for the entertainment of its patrons.

On another page this week will be found the report of the last census in this county by magisterial districts. It makes a very interesting study.

It is said now that the Lexington pike at Florence will not be blocked to travel until after the Florence fair.

Sunday afternoon was fine and a great many machines were on the roads that pass thru Burlington.

DECLINE In Retail Food Prices During Fall Seen By United States Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics believes there will be a decline in retail prices of food this coming fall. In a forecast today the bureau says that wholesale prices dropped an average of slightly more than 1 per cent in the last thirty days. Meats, fish and vegetables now are stored in quantities far greater than one year ago.

Bumper crops of wheat and other cereals are in prospect—in fact, the Southwest, and farm labor is plentiful except in a few sections.

Luxury tax receipts are falling off, showing the stampede has subsided at stores selling luxuries including automobiles, diamonds and extravagant clothing. Reduction in luxury buying is a certain indication of general confidence, say, that the national wave of extravagance has passed. An end of luxury buying means "exit" the profiteers' officials say. Candy merchants all over the United States are complaining of a dropping off of business. The sale is classed as "good," indicating that the public is consuming much candy, but not so much as formerly.

Candy merchants were preparing for a big summer and winter business. They bought heavily of sugar at inflated prices. Now many are petitioning the Department of Justice for licenses to sell sugar, which they say they have in unnecessary quantities. "We are glad to issue these licenses," said Assistant Attorney General E. G. "Sales of surplus sugar by candy dealers should tend to reduce prices."

Big reductions have been forced in wholesale prices of materials like cotton, rubber, leather and steel. Although these do not affect directly the average consumer, they nevertheless have an indirect effect on the prices of many commodities. Prices of crude rubber and leather recently reached pre-war levels.

Farmer, Good Roads and Auto.

Good roads and the automobile have accomplished wonders in removing the greatest hindrance to progress in farming sections as they have put farmers, as a rule, within easy reach of some thriving up-to-date marketing center, and often within motoring distance of some large city. Equally important in the work they have accomplished is the movement of drawing the farmers together in social life and community achievement which is just beginning, opening up to them the advantages of cooperation which distance and impossible roads kept them from entering into. They have made possible the farmers' clubhouses for recreation and business. All this is just beginning and is just a foretaste of what the future holds for the farmer.—Ex.

Growers Failed to Meet.

The tobacco growers who were expected to meet at a meeting in Burlington last Saturday afternoon to give expressions as to the proposition to cut out the 1921 crop failed to materialize in a number sufficient for the holding of a meeting, therefore, in so far as the northern part of the county is concerned the wishes of the growers have not been ascertained on this very important matter. It requires some time and considerable urging to get the farmers in numbers sufficient to get a prevailing opinion along any line. This should not be so but it is and always has been the case.

James M. Conner, of Cincinnati, passed through Burlington last Monday on a business trip to Louisville. Mr. Conner will talk around occasionally yet he is a great admirer of a good, speedy horse.

RABBIT PELTS IN DEMAND Country Boys Have Opportunity to Make Some Money During the Coming Winter Months.

In recent years several kinds of fur, formerly of so little value as to offer no inducement to the trapper, have increased in price, and consequently collecting them has been made profitable.

Rabbit pelts, which are extensively used by hat makers, are among these products. Formerly rabbit skins were of virtually no value; country boys who eagerly sought the hair of the skunk and the raccoon and who were even able to sell squirrel skins, thought so little of the rabbit and made so little effort to dispose of the skins that they were seldom used except to form a pad on which they "knuckled down" in the marble game.

Now, however, rabbit skins are worth something, and the country boy who will devote this winter to saving and marketing the skins of the rabbits he kills should make a comfortable sum of money. One big eastern firm has announced that it will need 10,000-20,000 rabbit skins. The skins are usually sold by the pound, which will contain seven or eight skins.

BACK TO THE FARM.

The majority of people when thinking of country do not realize the tremendous change which has taken place in the country in the last few years, yes, even in the last year. They picture pioneer conditions which prevailed years ago. They forget that the automobile and good roads have annihilated distance, indeed a great change has been made since the advent of the automobile from a few years ago when the farmer was practically isolated from friends and cities. The power and lighting plants are giving the farmer home all the conveniences of the city home. The tractor and the labor saving farm machinery are lightening every branch of farm work. The telephone is keeping the farm family in touch with their neighbors and friends and helping to dispel the feeling of loneliness and isolation in addition to being of direct value to the farmer's business keeping him in touch with supply and demand and the prevailing prices. Those who have made a study of labor and farm conditions are of the opinion that the lure of the city conveniences and amusements compared with the loneliness and inconvenience of the farm home of other days and the drudgery of farm work in the old-time way, have done more than the high wages paid in the city to cause the movement from farm to city, but it is also their opinion that should the farm home be equipped with city conveniences and labor-saving devices installed in the field and barn, giving the farm folks an opportunity for recreation and social life, that even leaving labor conditions out of the question, the trend would change in a few years from the city to the farm, for the best place on earth to live is on the modern farm.

BASE BALL. Walton Defeats Burlington In An Exciting Thirteen Inning Contest.

Its the same old, old story—Burlington lost—but this time not until the team forced its opponent, manager Hankers' unbeatable, to go thirteen rounds before the winning run was put over on the Walton grounds last Saturday afternoon, the score being 1 to 0 in favor of Walton. It was a hard fought and exciting contest all the way, and when Burlington's defense crumbled in the thirteen inning indomitable brook broke among the Walton fans who had been approaching the verge of nervous protestation for several innings. Huy and Slayback and Spaulding and Zimmer were the opposing batters, the latter pair getting the most of their opponents and walked away with a well earned victory in the thirteen inning. Walton 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1 Burlington 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0 Hits—Burlington 9; Walton 8. Struck out—By Spaulding 17; by Huy 1.

The Recorder would have given a more extensive account of this game but the score book was not obtainable when its use was requested.

Ludlow White Sox defeated Petersburg last Saturday afternoon 3 to 3.

Bellevue shut Hebron out 5 to 0 last Saturday last Saturday afternoon.

The game that Burlington has booked for last Sunday afternoon will be a real battle between the boys. Burlington boys were very anxious to try conclusion with the salt water aggregation.

There will probably be no more Saturday afternoon games until after the Erlanger and Florence fairs.

Jersey Cattle Notes.

Jersey supremacy has again been proclaimed by Vive La France, the wonder cow of Oregon and the world, who finished her fourth consecutive yearly record July 18, 1920.

This phenomenal producer, in the year preceding the above date produced 15,217.8 lbs. milk and 1,039.29 lbs. fat missing by the hairbreath of eight-tenths of a pound the world's record of 1-640.07 lbs. held by Plain Mary.

Vive La France has well earned the right to be called the greatest cow for her age of all breeds, for no other animal has in any way approached her wonderful record.

Viewed from any angle, Vive La France is a phenomenal animal. She is not only a producer but a reproducer. She has not only produced but type as well. She is not a sport but a logical cow, and she proves, as Plain Mary did, that the Jersey is the poor man's cow, capable of exerting her best efforts under any and all conditions, no matter how primitive or how disadvantageous.

As a reproducer Vive La France has few equals.

She will have dropped five living calves as a five year old, while having made two worlds records with two of them.

A comparison of the first four records of Vive La France with the first four records of Tilly Alcarra, the Holstein champion distance cow, is interesting to note.

Age	Pounds Fat
2 years.....	633.29
3 yrs. and 2 mo.....	832.63
4 yrs. and 7 mo.....	1,031.64
5 yrs. and 11 mo.....	1,039.29
Total.....	3,546.85
Average.....	889.21

Age	Pounds Fat
2 yrs. and 6 mo.....	415.0
3 yrs. and 6 mo.....	673.0
4 yrs. and 1 mo.....	961.3
5 yrs. and 6 mo.....	961.0
Total.....	3,020.2
Average.....	755.0

It can be seen from the above that Vive La France has exceeded the total production of Tilly Alcarra by 576.65 lbs. fat, or more than 144 lbs. for each lactation period.

E. C. Farrell, of Limaburg, Alonzo Acra, of Florence neighborhood and W. Lee Cropper, of Idlewild neighborhood, have each purchased a registered Jersey bull recently. These gentlemen are up-to-date farmers and dairymen and do not care that in so far as they are concerned the "scrub must go".

The management of the Florence fair has increased the number of rings and premium money of Jerseys this year and it is up to the breeders to make it the best show in the history of the fair.

So get that bull, cow, heifer, or calf ready--trouble? Yes, we know it will be some trouble, but remember there is nothing worth while that comes to us without effort.

How about the boys and girls calf club? We know they will be there "with bells on," but remember there are a few who haven't sent in their calves names and number.

Who Wants the Cut Out?

To the Farmers of Boone County: The opinion of a man who has had a good deal of experience growing tobacco for the profit there is in it. Now who are the men that want us to cut out 21-year crops of tobacco? Not the men that grow it, but the men that has bought up the 19-year crop of tobacco that they got for 6 or seven cents a pound. They are overloaded, and know if the farmer will cut out the 1921 crop they will be the profiteers of the cut out. Now it is too late. The tobacco growers have rented for the 1921 crop, so 10 puts them in a bad shape. It is true we all ought to try to raise more food stuff, as the country is in great need of it, but we MUST and WILL have some TOBACCO. We don't want to have any trouble over it like the night rider raids was in the last big tobacco pool. Then there were men taken out of their peaceful homes and whipped and some killed because they would not pool their tobacco.

Now, the proper method would be for the farmers to put in a good food crop and less tobacco and we will all be better off in 1922. Now farmers, give this a serious thought, and do not consent to the cut-out in 1921, but hold your 1920 crop if you cannot get a fair price for it. This is what I think, a man who has grown tobacco more or less for 30 years.

ONE DIP NOT ENOUGH TO CURE SHEEP SCAB

One Reason Is That All Eggs
Have Not Been Killed.

Important That Second Treatment Be Made Before Mites Which May Hatch Out Have Had Chance to Deposit More Eggs.

A single dipping usually fails to rid a flock of sheep from scab, according to findings of specialists of the United States department of agriculture reported in Farmers' Bulletin 713.

The apparent reason is either that all the females in the course of depositing eggs, at which time they appear especially tenacious of life, or all the eggs already deposited have not been destroyed by the dipping; consequently, after the eggs which may have escaped the first dipping have had an opportunity to complete their incubation, it is essential to dip the sheep again.

It is also essential that the second dipping take place before any mites which may hatch out after the first dipping have had time to become mature and deposit more eggs. As the eggs on the body of the host usually require 4 days' incubation, sometimes a week, and probably never more than 10 days, and as 10 to 12 days are necessary for the young mites after hatching to reach maturity, mate, and deposit their eggs, it would appear that the best time for the second dipping is about 10 days after the first, as all the eggs will have hatched, while practically none of the new generation of mites will have developed sufficiently to deposit eggs. Practical experience has shown that the second dipping may be delayed until the fourteenth day without unfavorably affecting the results of the treatment, but wherever possible it is preferable to follow the 10-day rule.

Copies of Bulletin 713 will be furnished, upon request, by the department at Washington, D. C.

PLANTING ENDIVE IN AUGUST

Is King of Winter Salads and There Is Plenty of Room at This Time of Year.

Ordinary endive is the king of all winter salads that are in reach of the ordinary gardener. It should be planted from the first to the middle of August. The green curled varieties are best. There is always plenty of room in the gardens at this time of year, therefore sow the rows wide enough apart to allow banking with earth. Thin the plants to stand about four inches apart. Having it that close together will not produce large heads, but they will be finer in texture and more tender.

By the time the first freeze is expected this will be a hedgerow. Lift the outer leaves, pressing boards against the sides of the row and hold them in place with stakes. Leave it until in danger from freezing weather, then draw earth against the boards and add straw covering.

GETTING RID OF QUACK GRASS

Three-Year Crop Rotation, Including Grain, Clover and Corn, Is Excellent Plan.

A three-year crop rotation—small grain, clover and corn—and a two-year crop rotation—corn and rye or early potatoes and rye—also afford an excellent opportunity for getting rid of quack grass. Extra expense required by extra tillage will in most cases be largely made up by increased yields.

INVESTING IN FOREST CROP

Less Actual Cash Called for Than in Any Other Form of Enterprise on Many Farms.

A forest crop calls for less actual outlay of cash in proportion to the final income than any other form of enterprise. An investment of $10 to $25 an acre, with a small annual carrying charge, in 40 to 50 years will produce a return equivalent to from 4 to 6 per cent compound interest for the period involved.

HAMILTON

The death angel has again entered our community and taken from our midst Miss Huff Roberts, August 18th, at the age of 24 years, 2 months and 29 days.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Huff. In 1918 she was united in holy bonds of wedlock to Harry Roberts. The following winter after her marriage she contracted the influenza and settled on her long illness, her ill health from that time till God saw fit to call her home. During her illness she was at her mother's home, where all that loving hands by mother and sister could be was done for her.

We cannot understand why one so young should be taken, but our father knows best, and her earthly career is ended and she is at home in heaven.

Mamie bore her suffering with a pleasant smile and cheerful word for every one. No one knew Mamie but to admire her disposition. Her kind, gentle manner was elevating and led her companions and friends to higher and purer thoughts.

In her home circle her place cannot be filled. She was a true and loving wife, an obedient daughter, always careful of doing that which was right.

Weep not dear ones as those that have no hope. She has gone from us. While Mamie was not a member of any church, we have that blessed assurance of meeting again at that bright shore where there are no more partings and heartaches, and looking across the gateway tonight, faces all shining with radiant light, eyes looking down from your heavenly home, beautiful hands are beckoning come. Mamie leaves a husband, father, mother, three sisters, eight brothers, a host of other relatives and friends to mourn ever more. The funeral took place Tuesday at Big Bone Baptist church, Rev. Miller officiating, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery there to await the resurrection morn.

Williams, wife of a well-known farmer in Wayne Co., Ind. place. "I kept using Cardui and having to go to bed," continues Mrs. Williams describing the troubles from which she obtained relief through the use of Cardui. "My husband having heard of Cardui, proposed getting it for me."

"I saw after taking some Cardui... that I was improving. The result was surprising. I felt like a different person."

"Later I suffered from weakness and weak back, and felt all run-down. I did not rest well at night, I was so nervous and cross. My husband said he would get me some Cardui, which he did. It strengthened me... My doctor said I got along fine. I was in good healthy condition. I cannot say too much for it."

Thousands of women have suffered as Mrs. Williams describes, until they found relief from the use of Cardui. Since it has helped so many, you should not hesitate to try Cardui if troubled with womanly ailments.

In no tire in the Goodyear line is the declining cost of mileage more evident than in the present 30x3-, 30x3 1/2- and 31x4-inch size Goodyear Tires made especially for small cars.

IS RACE TO BE HAIRLESS?

Prediction Made, Not Without Reason, That Coming Generation Will Be Bald.

That the man of the next century will have no hair on his head has been predicted time and again and the fact that many men under forty are bald seems to indicate that this may be possible. The men of the coming generations acquiring baldness at an earlier age until a hairless specimen of the genus homo shall arrive. But it is through no fault of their own that men are losing their hair, while women are perhaps unconsciously getting ready to become hairless females of the species, and while they may be only working out the will of Providence, they are doing it deliberately by "bobbing" their hair. The fashion was introduced, it is said, by Russian women, who disguised themselves trying to get out of their bolshevik ridden country. Coming to the U. S. their bobbed hair attracted attention, was first taken up by the bohemian set in New York, and now is rapidly spreading. Some of the older women, not wishing to sacrifice their locks, are said to be wearing false bobbed hair.

About Cutting Out Tobacco.

A mass meeting of Kentucky tobacco growers was scheduled for Lexington yesterday to consider the question of cutting out the crop for 1921. The decision of the meeting was not available when this was written. Whatever the action, however, it is the judgment of this paper that an attempt to cut out a crop would be ill advised. Kentucky does not want to repeat the experience of 1908. There is no desire to engage again in night riding, barn burning, bed destroying, cowardly whippings and other forms of coercion.

Aside from the lawlessness that would surely follow, the matter of cutting out a crop, if cutting out is desired, can be handled much more intelligently and satisfactorily by each grower independently. If a man does not find it profitable to raise tobacco, he has only to quit raising tobacco. It is nobody's business but his own. If he wants to raise tobacco, that too is solely his own business. No other man has a right to interfere, and no number of men banded together have a right to interfere. A business man or a farmer who is not capable of taking care of his own business ought to have a legal guardian appointed.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Garroll County.

Carrollton Democrat.

Carroll county never had more flattering prospects for "bumpertobacco and corn crops.

A large crowd was in Carrollton last Monday, county court day, estimated at 2,000 people, and our merchants did a thriving business.

Carroll county voters paid but little attention to the primary last Saturday, knowing that Rouse would be elected without their vote, therefore the vote was very light.

Pendleton County.

Falmouth Outlook.

The body of Private Verner Purdy, who died in a hospital in Coblenz, Germany, March 18, 1918, arrived at the home of his mother, Mrs. Carrie Purdy near Bethel, this county, on Tuesday. The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Bethel. Friends are invited.

Pendleton county was visited by fine rains Saturday afternoon Sunday and Monday, which insures good crops of corn, tobacco and all other vegetation, and grasses are now growing nicely, and promises a fine yield. This rain came just at a time when it was badly needed, as the early corn was "shooting" and putting out ears. The crop prospect in Pendleton county is better at this season of the year than it has been in the past five years. In the Boyd and Antioch Mills sections the corn and tobacco were damaged to some extent by hail and wind. Several barns, silos and fencing were also damaged.

Lightning struck the residence of Clarence Utley, at Bethel, Tuesday morning. The bolt came down the chimney and knocked the stove from its legs and otherwise tore up the room. Mrs. Utley and her nine-year-old son, John, were in the room. The mother was knocked to the floor, and the boy was struck by the bolt over the heart and rendered unconscious for fifteen minutes. It left a red place over the heart several inches in diameter. The bolt passed from the heart down his leg. The boy was thought to be dead, and it is remarkable that he survived the shock.

Corn in many fields is pretty badly tangled and will make seed ing this fall a laborious task.

WARNING TO FARMERS!

Having had quite an experience selling land and making contracts I find it is a bad thing for both the seller and salesman to enter into a contract of sale for any length of time, giving salesman exclusive right of sale. Some salesmen would have you believe that they have a car load of buyers coming, but usually the train is late. If you tie up your farm exclusively, the agent, if he should so exact it of you, could not sell or rent your own property for the whole term of the contract. The man that sells the property is the man for you to pay. Let every man come out on the same conditions "sell my property and I will pay you." Yours truly,

G. B. POWERS,

Mrs. John C. Fightmaster.

Lee County (Ill.) Times.
Emma Cordelia Fightmaster, daughter of Samuel and Harriett Hunter, was born at Butler, Pendleton County, Kentucky, September 1, 1866.

At the age of eighteen she was married to John Lancaster and resided at Butler until his death on December 29, 1909. In 1912 Mrs. Lancaster visited her half brother, Arlie Hunter, who then lived on a farm near Paw Paw, Illinois and made her home with him until her marriage to John Fightmaster on December 21, 1915. Since that time her home has been in Paw Paw.

Mrs. Fightmaster is survived by two sons (by her first husband) Lawrence B. Lancaster and Chester L. Lancaster of Drybridge, Ky.; a brother Dora Hunter of Hebron, Ky.; a sister, Mrs. Clara E. Hoffman of Flinto, O.; one half brother, Arlie Hunter, of Paw Paw; two half sisters, Mrs. Hattie F. Crouch of Paw Paw and Mrs. Minnie Stalme of Loveland, Ohio; a step daughter, Miss Girture Fightmaster and her beloved husband John Fightmaster, and a host of friends and neighbors to whom her life was very dear.

In girlhood days she united with the Second Twelve Mile Baptist church of Pendleton County, Ky., and was a faithful attendant and worker in the Sunday school there. Also since she made her residence in Paw Paw she was very much interested in the work of the church being a member of the G. G. C. class in the Baptist Sunday School. She was also a member of the Mystic Workers of America.

Death came after much suffering about eight o'clock Wednesday evening July 28 at the Lincoln Hospital, Rochelle, Illinois. Mrs. Fightmaster suffered much pain during her brief illness, but all was borne with a smile because she loved her Saviour best of all. She was a great lover of flowers and among her last words was she left for the hospital were "Be sure and take good care of the flowers." Prayer was offered at the home at 10:15 Saturday morning and the funeral service was held at the Paw Paw Baptist church at 10:30 o'clock. "Nearer my God to Thee" was rendered by the choir. The pastor, Rev. Starr officiated, reading scripture from Romans chapter eight, verses 28 to 39, also 1 Timothy 4:8, after which he offered prayer. A duet was rendered by Mrs. Runyan and Mrs. Starr, Rev. Starr gave a brief biography of the loved one and spoke of Christ's death on the Cross as the only means of our having eternal life and our only hope of seeing our loved ones again. He blessed in the man whose faith is in Him. Words with much feeling were read from the pen of Rev. J. R. McMahon, who wrote very highly of the friendship of Mrs. Fightmaster. Flowers were sent by many friends also from her Sunday School Class in loving remembrance.

Where the faded flower shall freshen,
Fresher never more to fade;
Where the faded glory shall brighten,
Brighter never more to shade.
Where the sun-beams never cease
Where the star-beams cease to chill;
Where no tempest stirs the echoes
Of the wood, or wave, or bill;
Where the morn shall wake in gladness
And the daylight in joy prolong,
Where the daylight dies in fragrance
Mid the burst of holy song—
Brother, we shall meet and rest
Mid the holy and the blest.

Where no shadow shall bewilder;
Where life's parade is o'er;
Where the sun-beams never cease
And the dreamer dreams no more;
Where the band is never severed—
Partings, claspings, sobs and moan,
Midnight waking, twilight weeping,
Heavy noontide—all are done;
Where the child has found its mother,
Where the mother finds the child;
Where dear families are gathered
That were scattered on the wild;
Brother, we shall meet and rest
Mid the holy and the blest.

Where the hidden wound is healed;
Where the blighted light re-blooms;
Where the smitten heart, the freshness
Of its buoyant youth resumes;
Where the love that here we lavish
On the withering leaves of time,
Shall have fadeless flowers to fix on,
In an ever spring-bright clime;
Where we find the joy of loving,
Where we never loved before,
Loving on unchilled, unhindered,
Loving once and evermore—
Brother, we shall meet and rest
Mid the holy and the blest.

Where a blasted world shall brighten Underneath a bluer sphere,
And a softer, gentler sunshine
Shed its healing splendor here;
Where earth's barren vales shall bloom
Putting on their robe of green,
And a purer fairer Eden
Be only where wastes have been;
Where a King is kindly known,
Such as earth has never known,
Shall assume the righteous scepter,
Claim and wear the heavenly crown—
Brother, we shall meet and rest
Mid the holy and the blest.

Interment was in the Wyoming cemetery. A very large number of friends attended the funeral in expression of friendship and sympathy.

pathy for the family and deep esteem for the loved one who will be so greatly missed. Those out of town who were at the funeral were Mrs. Hunter and Chester L. Lancaster of Drybridge, Ky.; Mrs. Minnie Stalme of Loveland, Ohio.

The family wishes to extend to friends and neighbors their heartfelt thanks for all kindnesses rendered in this time of sorrow and loss.

Out in the State.

Carlisle—Nicholas county has in places been visited again by rains reaching the proportions of waterspouts, creeks overflowing bottom lands and doing much damage to the crops. It is estimated that damage to crops in Nicholas county from wind, water and hail will reach $250,000.

Maysville—Col. J. M. Walker, a cigar manufacturer, sports about the streets in a homespun suit and says he cares little about the high cost of clothing. The suit was made in 1870 of flax spun at his father's mill in this county. The coat is the style of that year, a long frock, and the pants with large legs. The suit is in good condition and the Colonel says it is good for another century.

Paducah—Heavy tobacco delivery from all counties of the western district on the Paducah markets has been reported during the last several days. All warehouses of the city are receiving. Approximately 200,000 pounds are delivered daily. The weed is in excellent condition for handling, and delivery is expected to continue. Loose leaf sales are held daily at the Broadway warehouse, bringing fairly good prices.

Hopkinsville—Attendance of the county schools, many of which began their terms in July, is better than it has been in years. Credit for this condition is given largely to the new school law, which demands the attendance of the children.

Lexington—Estimates made here show that, with a largely increased acreage and a season favorable to growth, the white burley tobacco crop will be the largest in history. The prediction was made that the Lexington loose leaf market would sell seventy-five to eighty millions lbs. during the season, if the growth keeps pace with the increased acreage. Over 63,000,000 lbs. were sold last season.

Glasgow—The Merry Bros' gas well at Temple Hill, this county, ten miles from here, which caused much excitement and general interest when it came in a few days ago, has been cased out and shows a pressure of 15,000,000 feet flow. The test was the mercury test from the well a crack large enough for a man's hand came in the earth and ran for a quarter of a mile. The well is the stock barn of Mrs. M. M. Piden, cracked a cement walk and dried up several springs near the well. The well resembles the Louisiana field and has caused renewed activity all over the county, many believing that it is only a question of weeks when some one will put the main pool in this section.

Spent the Day in Hoosier.

Messrs. Geo. Penn, President of the Boone County Farmers Bureau, Lewis Beemon, Manager of the Boone County Farmers' Bureau, Timothy Sandford and J. L. Kite, attending a big farmers' meeting at Manchester, Indiana, last Thursday, and spent a delightful and profitable day with the Indiana tillers of the soil. A very large crowd of people were in attendance and it was a great day with the farmers.

Rich and wife, the occasion being the 60th birthday of Mrs. Rich's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, and also that of her uncle, N. L. Moore, of Hathaway. At an early hour the guests began to arrive with well filled baskets and by the noon hour 147 were present, 89 of these being the children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. The singing was indulged in until everyone felt it time to return to their many homes. All joined in wishing them many more happy birthdays.

MAYME ROBERTS.

A gloom of sadness has come again to our community when the death angel came and called from our midst Mayme Roberts, who passed peacefully away August 8th at the age of 24 years and 29 days. She was born May 9th, 1866; daughter of W. M. Huff and wife, married March 6th, 1918, to Harry B. Roberts, son of T. B. Roberts. She leaves to mourn her death her husband, mother, father, three sisters, eight brothers, and host of relatives and friends.

She had been ailing a year, never complaining, bearing her terrible suffering with a smile and a cheerful word for every one. Her death was not unexpected by those who cared for her. She was ready when her Master called. Mayme never united with any church, but was always in favor of the Christian church.

It is sad that one so young should be taken away, but her time here on earth was ended, and we know she is with the angels in Heaven.

In her home circle her place can never be filled. She was a kind and loving wife, and an obedient daughter.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank those who were so good to us in the sickness of our loved one, Mayme Roberts; also to Bro. Miller for his consoling words.

THE FAMILY.

County Bankers Association.

A meeting of the banks of Boone county and the two Erlanger banks was held at the Florence Fair Grounds, last Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Every bank was represented and several interesting talks were made.

All reported that they were now paying 4 per cent interest on twelve month time deposits and felt it was so doing, they were holding more money on deposit for the benefit of their customers that would have sought outside investments.

The rate on loans was fully discussed, and it was the unanimous opinion, and it was so decided, that the rate would have to be increased over six per cent in view of present conditions and the future outlook in order to properly take care of the banks customers.

It was voted to charge not less than 7 per cent on all new loans as well as all renewals, believing this would be more satisfactory to all borrowers than attempt to classify loans.

There is nothing to prohibit any bank from charging more than 7 per cent if any particular loan should warrant it, but it was agreed that 7 per cent should and would be the minimum rate on any loan.

The banks arrived at this decision after each bank had made it a point to talk with as many of their borrowers as possible since the last meeting in July and found that the borrowers preferred a uniform rate of interest as would enable the banks to carry their loans in case any bank would be required to discount instead of demanding payment of loans.

Banks are refusing outside loans at 8 and 9 per cent, but all felt that these were willing to make a sacrifice of 1 to 1 1/2 per cent to their customers by making the rate 7 per cent.

The Articles of Association were adopted which provides for the regular meeting to be held three times a year on the 1st Thursday in March, July and November, and at such other times upon call of the President or by request of three member banks.

The next regular meeting will be in November.

Advice to Farmers.

In listing your farm for sale with a Real Estate firm, select the firms who have proven their salesmanship and their reliability.

The agents who have made business of the sale of Real Estate and are willing to spend their money, time and energy in the sale of your property, should be protected for a reasonable time by an exclusive contract.

All sound business is based in contracts, and the exclusive right contract is best for seller, buyer and agent. The exclusive right need not conflict with tenate, or the re-renting of your farm.

"What is every-body's business is nobody's business." This quotation applies, it seems to us, to the open Real Estate Market.

AMERICAN LEGION FOR EDUCATION

State Commander Comes Out Squarely for County Board of Education Chosen Without Regard to Politics

The American Legion believes in educating young America. Mr. Ulrich Bell, Commander of Kentucky, lately gave this paper the following viewpoint which should be read by every soldier, parent and thinking citizen.

"Here classiness for the sake of name-swapping on left over memories of the war-time—simple contact with one's own lik—would never have served as a sufficient basis for the existence of the American Legion. Only deep-laid principles, those set out below by the far-sighted founders of the Legion, could have sufficed for an organization which aspired to the place the Legion now occupies.

"To foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism" and "to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation."

ULRICH BELL,
State Commander of American Legion.

Under these great ambitions, the American Legion interprets education as its great field of endeavor for the future. Working with all other agencies in meeting the ramifying needs of this field, the Department of Kentucky hopes for even a modest part in thrusting forward every project that looks to the safeguarding of the high and true standards by which the schools of the State should be guided in preparing upcoming generations for good citizenship.

Under the new state laws which allow the citizens to elect from the county at large the best possible County Board of Education, chosen without reference to politics, the American Legion sees the best immediate opportunity for placing the school children under qualified supervisors and teachers. Those who would bring partisan politics to bear in educational matters must come sharply into conflict with the outstanding principles of the Legion.

Under an Americanization plan, to be launched in September by the Legion, with a State Commission, it is hoped to bring to bear all influences on the problem in this State; but, most particularly, by means of education. In the appeal now being made for thoughtful selection of County School Boards, the Legion sees a work in which it can ask the 85,000 Kentucky ex-service men and the public as a whole to join heartily.

SCHOOL SITUATION IN STATE

The following news story which came from Washington about August 1st is given to see... or to thinking about the school situation in Kentucky. The story is followed by an interview which our correspondent had with Honorable George Colvin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, so our readers might have the whole truth in the matter.

Forty-one and one-tenth per cent of the average school term in Kentucky is wasted because of irregular attendance, according to figures compiled and announced by the Bureau of Education today. The percentage of waste through irregular attendance is greater in Kentucky than in any other State, officials of the Federal Bureau say.

Indiana, on the other hand, wastes only 7 per cent of its average school term through irregular attendance, and stands first in the list of States on school attendance records, while Kentucky stands at the bottom.

The amount of school terms wasted by irregular attendance on an average for all the States is 25.4 per cent, or just about half way between the figures given on Indiana and on Kentucky. Educational officials here point out that the school term in Kentucky, on the average, represents only 150 days if the allowance were 100 per cent, but the actual school term is reduced because of poor attendance to about eighty-eight days. It is estimated that this irregular attendance wastage of school term results in a financial loss of approximately $3,900,000.

Kentucky's new school attendance law, passed by the last Legislature, is designated by officials of the Federal Bureau of Education as one of the most far-reaching and important pieces of legislation ever passed for the benefit of Kentucky's educational system.

The Honorable Geo. Colvin had the following to say concerning the above news item:

"I might suggest that statistics with us are so unreliable as to make any conclusion of this sort wholly a matter of conjecture. We are not attempting to extenuate our condition, nor to make excuses for it. We know that it is deplorably bad. We are trying to face the situation honestly and fearlessly. We are exerting every effort to improve the efficiency of our schools, to increase the attendance, and to develop a public sentiment that will demand and support measures looking to these ends.

"We are greatly encouraged by the determination and desire everywhere expressed to improve our educational conditions. We seem to have the needed legislation, thanks to the courage and wisdom of our last General Assembly. Our present obligation is to put these new laws into effect. The situation does not call for despondency or despair, but confidence."

OBJECTS OF LEGION

"For God and Country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

Local Happenings.

The North Kentucky Fair which is held at Florence began yesterday and the directors anticipated a very successful exhibition this year. Good crops, and numerous herds of fine milk cattle are figured on as making a big show this year, while there are many special features on the program, among them the battery of artillery which created so much interest at the Erlanger fair last week. There will be plenty of side shows and other amusements on the ground and a complete and perfect country fair can be said to be in progress at Florence.

Mrs. Lewis C. Beemon graduated from the Aurora High School in 1918 and last Sunday a large number of her class-mates made her a visit. They brought with them well filled baskets and all went to Harvest Home grounds where they spent the day in a most pleasant manner. The class holds its reunion annually and last Sunday's meeting was for that purpose. The visitors came in a large truck. It was a gay crowd that got great pleasure out of the one day.

Perrin Hunter, formerly a Cincinnati carriage manufacturer, but now retired and living in Kentucky, reached his home in this week, having made the trip by automobile. He was accompanied by Mrs. Hunter on the long, pleasant trip, stopping off at the Queen City on their way to Canada. They traveled through the Dominion from Niagara Falls to Montreal, coming here by way of Boston and the Berkshires. New York items in Sunday Enquirer.

Incidentally something will certainly have to be done to either limit the size of auto trucks on country roads, or to provide specially made roads for the heavy trucks. The increase in commercial traffic carried by the automobile truck is astounding, and this movement is not more than in its infancy if only the gasoline and road problems can be solved.

W. T. Gooden, editor of the Lawrenceburg, Ind., Register, was stricken at his home in Indiana on the 13th inst. while standing at the telephone talking. He never revived and passed away on the Friday following. He had been in ill health for some time. Mr. Gooden was very popular among the newspaper men of Indiana, and all deplore his death.

The following was taken from last Monday's fifty years ago to-day column in the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune:

Judge L. L. Towell arrested and brought before the United States Court in Covington for refusing to allow negroes to vote in election at Walton, Ky., admitted to bail in $500 while awaiting hearing.

James Mitchell, over on Gunpowder, to be on an up-to-date fisherman, invested in a $20 outfit early in the spring, since which time he has caught no fish. Before he carried the new rig to the creek he could land fine fish in large numbers, but they will not stand for so much style and refuse to investigate the bait he offers them.

Miss Mattie Kreylich will teach expression in the local Hi School again this year. She was quite a success of that department last year and her services were in demand for another term, and her employment will be very pleasing to those whose pupils will take instruction in that study.

A great many people passed through Burlington last Saturday enroute to the Erlanger fair. The rain that fell along about noon kept a great many from going who had made their arrangements to attend that afternoon.

The Recorder is in receipt of a box of very fine Irish potatoes. From whence they came and by whom they were sent is unknown, but they are appreciated all the same and will be enjoyed at the table.

A ten days meeting began at Bullittsburg Baptist church last Monday. Rev. Jones, of Versailles, is assisting the pastor, Rev. J. C. Campbell. Everybody is invited to attend these services.

Boone county never harvested a finer crop than that of this year. The grain is perfect and very heavy. It is said the grower can not afford to sell his oats by measure this season.

Only a few days now until the schools in the county will be under way. The teachers should acquaint themselves with the new school law before they begin teaching.

See DARE DEVIL DOWERY, the Dare-Devil of them all. The man who plays big parks and big at Conney Island this week.

VOTED DOWN

The Proposed Cut-Out of the 1921 Tobacco Crop Was Defeated 22 to 17.

The proposed cut-out of the 1921 tobacco crop was defeated by a vote of 22 to 17 when brought up for consideration in the general convention of tobacco growers at Lexington last Wednesday. The sentiment, it was said, was for a general reduction rather than an elimination.

Steps were taken toward the perfecting of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, in which more than 50,000 farmers will be eligible for membership, and an organization committee appointed and approved.

The tobacco situation was declared to be the most serious in history, from the growers' standpoint. The American Tobacco Co. was assailed.

Seventeen counties of 38 which voted on the question at Lexington, met in the Kentucky White Burley District voted for a cut-out of the tobacco crop of 1921 and 22 counties voted against it.

No delegates were sent from several counties, but individual growers were present from these counties.

Resolutions declaring that because of the condition of foreign exchange and finances, the growers would have to stand together, big and little, in like proportion, in order to finance the crop, and providing for a permanent protective organization, were received with applause.

Sentiment among the growers in attendance was opposed to a cut-out, but in favor of a curtailment of acreage on an equitable basis applying to all growers, big and little, in like proportion. A Chairman Newman then asked for an expression of sentiment in regard to a "substantial reduction of acreage," and but few delegates arose.

Following his presentation of the report of the committee T. B. Hill spoke briefly in advocacy of the adoption of the resolutions. He declared tobacco was selling 60 per cent under the price of a year ago in North Carolina and that South Carolina was offering 21 cents without the tax and crops Hill called for a show of hands from farmers who received 30 cents and under for their tobacco. Hands went up. He then called for those who received 50 cents or better. Considerably fewer hands were shown. Hill declared his belief that the Kentucky tobacco growers were seeking only a reasonable profit and not an extortionate price.

He declared that tobacco growers should do what is to be done with the approval of the law, and attempt nothing unless it could be done legally, as the growers' hands went up. A charter for their organization from the state.

He declared that if the growers would unite and give "a pretty dollar to the expense of organization," it would result in a free and untrammelled market for their tobacco in Kentucky.

H. H. Boone, of Boone county, a former member of the Legislature, declared the hopes of tobacco growers could be realized by standing together and holding down production.

A call of the roll by counties showed 17 counties for the cut-out and 22 against it, as follows:

Counties For—

- Boone,
- Bracken,
- Bath,
- Fleming,
- Grant,
- Green,
- Kenton,
- Lewis,
- Mason,
- Montgomery,
- Metcalf,
- Nicholas,

- Jefferson (Ind.)

Counties Against—

- Anderson, Bourbon, Clermont, Ohio, Warren, Carroll, Dearborn (Ind.), Franklin, Fayette, Gallatin, Henry, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Mercer, Nelson, Oldham, Robertson, Scott, Spencer, Woodford, Trimble, Washington.

Newman declared the growers unquestionably were aroused and that when once aroused they were able to take care of themselves and their industry. He declared the burley industry faced the most serious crisis it ever had during his life.

Newman said the first duty was to enroll growers and record the result of the various county meetings, to hear the report of the committee appointed at the meeting August 18th. He said opportunity would be given for full and free discussion later.

T. B. Hill of Montgomery county then presented the report of the committee.

"Whereas, reports of the meetings held Saturday, Aug. 14, 1920, in the various counties of the burley tobacco region show conclusively that there is a strong and widespread sentiment in favor of some immediate and effective action looking to the protection of the burley tobacco industry; and

"Whereas, information comes to us of the disastrous condition of the markets in Georgia and the Carolina, where the 1920 crop of tobacco grown in those states is now being offered, and it is well known that under the present foreign exchange rates it will be practically impossible to finance this crop of burley tobacco unless we have the co-operation of all persons interested in the tobacco industry; and

"Whereas, Every indication is that the present crop of burley tobacco in Kentucky and adjoining states will exceed all previous records; and

"Whereas, It will be too late to act after the market opens this fall, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That it is essential to hasten the perfection of an organization of burley growers into an association in order that a census of the present crop of tobacco may be had before the opening of the market in order that this association can then advise, help and take all needful steps to perfect and promote the industry.

"Be it further resolved, that the chairman of this meeting appoint a committee of five, to be known as the National Burley Growers' Association, to prepare constitution and bylaws, solicit membership, receive money, arrange for headquarters, and employ counsel to secure a charter, and all needful steps to perfect the organization as speedily as possible.

"Be it further resolved, that when this meeting adjourns it adjourns to meet upon the call of the chairman and secretary, for the purpose of ratifying the actions of the committee, and approving the charter, bylaws, constitution and the election of permanent officers, and for the transmittal of any other business that may come before the meeting.

"The counties not represented at this meeting, and which are this season producing burley tobacco in any considerable quantity shall be notified of the adjournment and requested to send a representative to same."

This was adopted.

MURDER AND ARSON.

Rising Sun Recorder

A dastardly murder was committed about nine p. m., Wednesday when Floyd Thatcher, a young farmer, was shot and killed at his home near the Downey school house in Cass township. Mr. Thatcher's wife and daughter were in the house at the time. The assassin fired a shot gun thru the screen at a kitchen window. The load reared its victim in an adjoining room. The assassin then fled, leaving a trail of blood and death. With the killing of her husband, Thatcher discovered their barn on fire.

An alarm for help was sent over the phone, and while neighbors were fighting the fire they discovered that another barn about a half mile away, on the James and Henry Thayer farm, was in flames. In about twenty-five minutes the flames had spread to the main barn. The Thayer farm was seen to be burning. Hay, wheat and farming implements in all three barns and the calf in the Thayer barn were all lost.

The supposition is that the assassin of Thayer wisely planned the burning of the barns in order to make his getaway by attracting attention to the fires. The three barns form a triangle and one man could easily have fired one that had misfired in the difference of time between the fires.

The people of the community in which the murder and arson were committed made no hesitancy in accusing Sidney Thatcher, elder brother of the murdered man, of the crime, as it is said he had made threats of doing away with the entire family. There is a rumor that trouble over the division of the deceased father's estate was the cause of his ill feeling. He is said to have claimed that he did not get his share of the estate. He had up to Wednesday afternoon been working for the Cutler brothers, merchants. He had settled with them and quit. He had formerly worked for Ed. Knigza, prosperous farmer of that neighborhood, and while working for him had used his Knigza's shot gun for hunting purposes. The shot gun is now missing and is also all the shells except one that had misfired and no one knew of it except Thatcher. At the present writing the whereabouts of Sidney Thatcher are unknown.

Coroner Ditts and Sheriff Caughlin were called early to the scene of the murder. The former held an inquest but is retaining the coroner for more conclusive evidence.

Sheriff Caughlin made repeated attempts to obtain bloodhounds from Lexington, but was unsuccessful. After repeated delays, he secured some at Bedford and these came at four o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The murdered man leaves a widow and a little son. The wife is a daughter of James Campbell, one of Ohio county's best known and most prosperous farmers, and a stock man. Mr. Thatcher also leaves an aged mother to bear a double burden of grief if her eldest son should be charged with the crime.

Erlanger Fair.

The Erlanger fair was attended by large crowds each day, and the association had made ample arrangements for the entertainment of its patrons during the four days.

The exhibition in the ring and floral hall were very good and especially the show of milk stock which was exhibited in large numbers. The horse show was about as good as it has been for several years.

The racing each afternoon was the big card of the fair; the contests were close and exciting. The battery of U. S. Artillery was a big feature and attracted thousands of people. It being something entirely new as a country fair.

The fair was one of the most successful in every particular that was ever held at Erlanger, and the directors found a handsome balance on the proper side of the ledger at its close.

BURGALAR ALARM ALARMS.

Owen Democrat

Excitement was at fever heat Monday night when at 10:25 p. m. the burglar alarm installed at the First National bank suddenly sounded an alarm. Armed with a number of rifles and pistols, a number of thieves were seen. Misadjustment of the mechanism is believed to have been the cause.

The alarm was mainly heard in all parts of the city. Owen town was wide awake and in action. People from all directions rushed hurriedly toward the bank. A side window of the building was quickly forced and several determined men gained entrance. They searched the entire building before being satisfied that the alarm was false.

Men and boys with rocks, clubs and other improvised weapons surrounded the building. One woman claimed she had been thrown a chair just after the alarm had started, which statement was substantiated by a younger stationed in the window. Armed with a 4-lb. rock. But it is surmised the sound emanated from residents occupying the floors above the bank who at that time in leaving the building.

Still the alarm kept up its weird moan. And still the people came flocking. One man knew how to stop the thing. He took a few moments before bore grim determination broke into smiles. Upon the arrival of Mr. Posner, the man came back and the town again sank back to the humdrum.

The Passing of Summer.

Cincinnati Enquirer

It is August and the cicadas are singing. The first days of summer are passing. The autumn is just ahead. One can hear his whispering in the remote woods, or hear him stirring on the granary floors. It is the autumn of the year, a season for gratitude and for sadness. The year is at its full. If heaven is in the heart all is well. If not, the heart is a prison. We listen to the voices of the winds and to the drowsy murmurs of multitudinous insect voices all singing the happy, fatuous hymn of autumn. They have neither thought nor care for the soon coming gales of winter. They are the soon vanishing children of the summer, a part of the eternal life mystery of the universe.

For a little while longer there will be the suggestion of subdued laughter, and along the river banks and in the shaded aisles of the woodlands; the birds will continue to sing until comes the still, mysterious calm which invites the birds to rest. They must follow the royal march of the sun; that boreal blasts are marshaling yonder, some where northward. They have been good comrades and friends. We know that they will return, but what we do not know is whether we should ever expect to meet them when the soft wind blows thru the verdure and the blossoms of the spring. But let the warm, slumberous days pass, let us rejoice because of the sweep of wings against the skies, because of the sun and the songs of animate nature. The winters pass, springs come, and the cycle of life continues. We may be happy, or at least find quiet consolation in the knowledge that others will rejoice in the glories of all coming love-gilded days.

Equalizing Cost of Roads.

In some of the states where highway construction has been a part of the state policy for a period of years, much work has been done on highways which would naturally become a part of the national system. It is proposed that the states which have done this work should be allowed compensation which will give a highway mileage equal in value to that constructed by the federal government, but would be turned over to the state, while the government undertakes to construct the remainder of the national system.

Citizens of Graves county expect to vote a $500,000 bond issue for road purposes at the regular election this year.

The Lure of the City.

The census of 1920 shows that appallingly more people in this country live in cities and towns than from farms. This exhibit invites serious reflection. Farms, until this hour, have been the mainstay of the American nation by supplying food in sufficient quantity and at cheaper prices than obtain in any other highly developed industrial country. Besides, our farms have supplied a large surplus for export.

If this advantage is lost by a further decrease in farming population, the struggle for existence will be much harder than heretofore and carry in its train political conditions even less reassuring than at present, when they are so favorable to the farmer. It is a well established fact that scarcity is not favorable to contentment and peace. The census conveys a warning, the approach of these less favorable conditions.

However, there is nothing unexpected in the figures. For some years a warning note has been sounded that the number of food producers is growing alarmingly less and various plans have been suggested to change the population of rural communities. They were approved but not carried out. But now it is evident that the young people are lured from the farm by the gay and apparently easier life in cities. This tendency may become only by offering independence, which is priced by many minds higher than pleasures, and it is gratifying to observe that the sense of freedom still has a hold on the American heart. This independence, in the present instance, must be purchased with money to be advanced to those who are willing to take up the vocation of farming. Marshy lands must be drained, cutover land prepared for plowing, and as many large holdings as possible be placed on reasonable terms parcelled into small farms.

In this way farming can be maintained as a viable industry in this country, manufacturing kept on a firm foundation by securing abundant food at reasonable prices and the conservation of the farm strengthened as a counterpoise to the restless and even menacing atmosphere of large centers of industry.

Buy Home in Lawrenceburg.

Lawrenceburg Press.

A deal has been perfected where by Dr. G. F. Smith has taken over the beautiful and nicely located old Fitch homestead residence on High street, near the corner of the public library. There is no more desirable residence property in the city than this one, which falls to the lot of a man who is a student of the law.

It was built about 1847 by Walter Hayes and is one among the best constructed buildings in Dearborn county. Since it was built it has been the home of Dr. Hayes and Fitch families until the present. It has always been well cared for, and for this reason it is a very nice place to live. It is a stately height, large porches, together with its large, well kept green and flowery lawn, makes it a most attractive place to live. Being near the library, the courthouse and the business center of the town make it all that could be asked for a home in which to live.

Dr. Smith, through his pleasant and courteous manner of dealing with the afflicted public, has been able to build up a large practice in this and adjoining counties. He also has a good standing with the hospitals of Cincinnati. Day after night,雨天, or even day, he is disposed to let in changing the attitude of the doctor, he is always the same, smiling jovial and happy, just such a person as to build up a large circle of friends love to have call.

We are surely glad to know that the doctor has been able to secure such a beautiful home, and wish himself and family many years in which to enjoy it.

Mexican Dialect.

From Sonora to Yucatan in Mexico more than fifty separate dialects are spoken. All the inhabitants of the west coast, however, with the exception of some hill tribes of Indians, can understand Spanish. Of these I have the most to say, with their crude Kacatec hill forts, their weird ceremonial masques and dances and their warlike attitude, are easily most conspicuous. Many are enlisted with the federal army or employed as ranch hands and mine or railroad laborers. The Yucats with the federal troops are termed "Tame Yucats"; those in the hills, wild and hostile, are the "Bronchos." The latter are a vagrant lot, roving ranches for hire, or carrying rawhide drums and water gourd, wearing sandals of green cowskin—living by their wits. Pressed by hunger, they subsist as well on burros as beef.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud C. Hume, of Avondale, Cincinnati, have purchased a nice home in Walton, Ky., where they will live. They have tried both Ohio and Indiana since they left Vorona and thought it like Kentucky for Kentuckians.

Robert W. Coffman and D. B. Wallace, of Wilkes, have been preparing to take a new vote on the presidential campaign.

Old Blue Law.

The Walton Advertiser of last week hoped on the recent grand jury with both feet and hobnails in its shoes. It says:

Our Boone county grand jury, which was in session last week at Burlington for some cause or other dug up one of those antiquated blue laws, which has been allowed to remain on our statutes and indicted quite a number of our business places for selling soft drinks, ice cream, etc., on Sunday. No doubt they are trying to transport us back in the days of Puritan New England, when such laws were enacted and enforced by the civil authorities in the direction of the established church of New England.

"It is perfectly legitimate and honorable to sell drinks and ice cream; then why should it be a crime to sell them on Sunday? It is the nature of the act itself that should determine whether it is right or wrong and not the time when the act is committed. A crime is a crime on every day of the week, and not because it is committed on Wednesday or Friday."

"Take religion out of Sunday and it is no difference from other days of the week. The prohibition in a Sunday law are purely religious prohibitions, when the state enforces a Sunday law, it simply enforces religion. For this reason it seems that all Sunday laws would be wrong, because they make it a penalty for citizens not conforming to religious notions."

Our Faith in the Recurrence of Past Blessings.

In the midst of human crises that multiply every year, there is still maintained a steady human confidence in the ultimate welfare of the world that keeps off despair and conserves our happiness within reasonable bounds. We even stand the test of the world war without once giving way to despair, and have passed through the era of aftermath without more serious lapse of temper or morale in face of all the impositions of profiteers, the aggression of armies and navies, the scarcity of food, homes, fuel, indeed all the things that we were wont to regard as just matters of fact incident in the daily routine of life.

It is the genius of adjustable inherent in human nature, and of especially healthy growth in the American makeup. Calamities come and crises go, yet as a people we move along largely in the even tenor of our way, with a bit of pouring out here and there of our indignation in more or less expressive language, but we usually keep our situation of our suffering. When we hear that a sugar famine is impending we feel a bit sorry for those who haven't a supply, but do not apply the measure to our own personal. We have always had sugar and naturally the presumption is we will continue our consumption.

Much the same spirit marks our reception of threatened coat shortage, and urge they ever so earnestly, but we are disposed to let the dealers do the worrying and leave off ordering our winter supply until the usual time of year that has become, from long practice, our custom. It really does not convincingly occur to us that these things have application to our affairs. The prices go up, of course, but we are so used to incident to the post-war conditions and we have become so accustomed to the paying of more for less that we hardly notice a little wearing, we let it pass. If we make more money we spend more, somehow feeling that we will continue to have good fortune. We are so used to the ever-barrasing scarcity of houses and at the first good offer promptly sell our home and go hunting about for a new one, that we find we will now, as always, quickly find something to our liking. And strange as it may be, some times we do.

It is that while we all know that things are happening all over the world, contentions, strife, wars, revolutions, industrial, financial, economic, commercial and just plain bloody man-killing revolutions that must of necessity have serious consequences to individuals, governments and entire nations, and in degree to the world at large, we really have difficulty in apprehending in any of these things the approach of danger, suffering or death to us or ours either as individuals or nations. It is our faith that what has been will be over again—Bx.

Tobacco Improved.

The weather the past week has been very favorable to the growing tobacco and has improved very greatly its appearance of many patches in the county. The weather has been just what the crop needed. Some are claiming that Boone county will this year produce the largest crop in its history, a large crop of what is called a "very fine quality." This proposition does not seem to strike the growers in this county as being just, for the reason that the conditions of the crops of the past two or three years have brought about.

The metropolitan dillies are now preparing to take a new vote on the presidential campaign.

Comments of the Press

With Tennessee completing the 36 states necessary to ratify the Nineteenth Amendment, the women of the U. S. will henceforth possess equal political rights with men, and, it must also be remembered, equal duties and responsibilities as enfranchised citizens. Much more is implied than the privilege of using the ballot. They should prepare to take their share in the public business of the country, take an active interest in public questions, in political organization, serve on election boards and on juries—which may not seem so emancipating. This may seem to be expecting more from the women than a great many men contribute, but it is paying the women the compliment of placing them on an equality with the most public-spirited men rather than the indifferent and negative citizen. From what has been observed of the attitude of women in political campaigns, they display a keenness, an insight and a determination that most men might do well to emulate. It is of these demonstrated faculties that the hopes for the betterment of politics, administration and government thru the participation of women are based.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

It is a great experiment upon which the nation is entering. Its difficulties and dangers should be uppermost in the thoughts of serious-minded citizens of either sex. In winning over the country to woman suffrage a concrete state of facts has probably had more influence than abstract arguments about the inalienable rights of the individual or about the nature of a democracy. We had a large and growing body of citizens who were dissatisfied with their political conditions. And in democratic government it is expedient to eliminate such dissatisfaction, if it can be done without violating any vital principle. That, it would seem, has been the chief moving cause in bringing America round to the idea of woman suffrage. But discontent does not necessarily become intelligent by the act of being enfranchised, and the new political privileges now bestowed upon women carry with them the great responsibility. It is no longer a question of sex, but of country and the common weal. And Americans, whatever their doubts and fears in this matter, have been, will hope that the new voters may blend easily in the already great electorate. For a time our elections will be made more dubious and cumbersome, as they certainly will be more costly. But we do not doubt that the cheerful and indomitable American spirit will apply itself to making our institutions "work" as Gladstone phrased it, even under novel and arduous and what may almost seem revolutionary conditions.—New York Times.

It is just as well that Tennessee has ratified. The result was inevitable in the near future, and it might as well be done with once and forever, no matter how people may disagree about the question. Like the Eighteenth Amendment, the issue divided the country into two camps, but all sensible citizens will cheerfully accept the result.—Washington Post.

What the effect of this enfranchisement may be on the next election, politicians do not know and cannot guess, but it means for one thing that the issue of the League of Nations is to be submitted to the womanhood of the nation and that any decision that is made at the polls is to be their decision as well.—New York World.

School Notes.

Our Institute begins in Burlington, August 30th, with R. H. Carter in charge as instructor. We give the law pertaining to attendances. All teachers and those expecting to teach must attend the entire session or their certificates are revoked.

We have written for a construction of this law, as to its extended application. It seems it includes all persons who ever, whenever and wherever they are "expecting" to teach. It is important to every one who holds certificates and who may teach in the future, although not this coming session. It seems to include all classes and grades of certificates.

The State Department now issues and controls all certification of teachers. It is plain this matter is not within the province or the powers of the County Board of Examiners or Sup't.

I hope we may find it to our interest and profit to attend the Institute.

Tuesday afternoon programs will be given to trustees and patrons, or as much of the time as is profitable to be used along this line.

Wednesday afternoon will be given to Common School Commencement. Rev. Shepherd will deliver the address to the class.

Thursday afternoon program will take up Mothers Clubs and Civic League work. We are arranging for an illustrated lecture for one evening. Subject—VIEWS OF FRANCE IN WAR.

We are rather proud of the program we have arranged for this meeting and we are anticipating a profitable and pleasant session.

We urge and insist every trustee, who has not got the fuel for his district to do so at once. It will be a question shortly as to whether we can get it at all. Freight rates are to go up, and coal is growing scarcer every day by reason of strikes.

More anon.

J. C. GORDON, Sup't.

Further Decline in Sugar Prices

Washington, August 23.—With the forced release of sugar stocks through tightened bank credit, Department of Justice officials today forecast a further tumble in sugar prices. There were indications, officials said, that the unloading of stored stocks might glut the market and bring a "substantial drop" in addition to the present decline.

The department has received appeals from many dealers who seek relief from the drop which already has taken place. The Attorney General, however, will follow a hands-off policy, it was said today by his assistant Robert T. Scott. The department Mr. Scott said, is concerned only with profit, and in individual cases no actions are given no consideration unless exorbitant profits are shown.

LIFE PRISONER ESCAPES FROM PENITENTIARY.

Officials of Kenton county are assisting officers of the Frankfort penitentiary in their search for Henry Landrum, serving a life term on the charge of murder, who escaped from the prison Monday night. He was indicted in Kenton county April 11, 1914, for the murder of J. L. Litton, a cook working with a Southern railroad gang south of Erlanger, Landrum at that time was 18 years old. Another youth, Louis Morehead, 17, was indicted with him. On June 2, 1914, Landrum pleaded guilty and was given a life sentence. On May 21, 1914, Morehead was found guilty by a jury and he was sentenced for life. Testimony at the trial indicated that Landrum and Morehead were drinking, held up and robbed Litton near their camp. The victim was stabbed in the back and his throat was cut. The body was found on a railroad track where it had been dragged. Landrum scaled the penitentiary wall and escaped. He was the leader of the prison band.

Mrs. Harriet Walton.

Harriet VanNess was born in Rising Sun, Indiana, May 17th, 1837. At an early age she came to Boone county, Kentucky, where she spent the remainder of her long and useful life.

On November 8th, 1858, she was married to George H. Walton, who preceded her to the Great Beyond 48 years ago, and left her 7 small children to raise, which trust she fulfilled faithfully and lovingly. Of these children Mrs. Emma Ward, of Marietta, Ohio; Susie M. Ryle, of Kansas City, Mo.; Frances Fish, of Oakdale, Calif.; Annabel Brady, of Bellevue, and her two sons Joe and George, sr., survive her; one daughter, Mrs. Ida May Wilson, died in 1911. In about 1870 she united with the Old Middle Creek Baptist church and later transferred her membership to East Bend church, of which she was a member at the time of her death. She was a good christian woman and often during her life spoke of her faith in Jesus as her Savior and of her readiness to go home.

She departed this life Sunday, August 15th, 1920, after several months of patient suffering. Her cheerful presence will be sadly missed by her children, grandchildren and friends, but we know that our loss is her gain, and with her pastor, we can say, "Blessed in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints." Why Flies Make Dear Milk.
Many fine things have been blamed on the activities of flies, but it remained for an Ohio farmer to demonstrate by actual experiment that the pests were responsible for a decreased milk supply. Owning 20 cows, he devised a home-built fly trap, and after it had been in operation a week calculated the difference in milk production. He was obtaining eleven gallons a day more than when the flies were unrestricted in their pernicious activities.

This man built a lean-to, through which the flies passed. Across it in the middle were flexible curtains letting flies pass freely, while the cow, which brushed the flies off, was shut out following closed both doors, leaving the flies to cluster on a window, where they were quickly shot to death with a fly powder.—Hartford Times.

Why Ear Screens are Valuable.
Persons who are in the field to patent new articles with the hope of making their fortunes should consider the ear screen. The need for some sort of protection to keep the ears from becoming as receptacles for dust, sand and soot is brought more forcibly to one's attention during these windy days. Muffs have long been used to conserve the warmth of the ears; the cleanliness of their devious passages might be insured by a shield of light gauze fitting snugly over the external appendages and effectively screening out the swirling dusts. Women protect their ears with puffs of hair; they have veils for their faces. Perhaps men would buy ear screens.

Why Sacrifice is Great.
There's a shining power in the sacrifices of men. Others may die through lack of vision, but not the man of sacrifice. He compensates poverty of material things through riches of conviction. Others may give the world dollars. He gives it the vision born of his soul that unites the increase of the dollar possible. In spite of hope he may die in poverty, but through his poverty countless others become rich. It's something to be looked forward to only by great souls, for only the greatest souls can toll on without appreciation or reward save in the fact that they become benefactors to men.

Ohio county, Indiana, is badly worked up over the killing of a good citizen by an assassin and the burning of three barns, all the crimes being laid at the door of a single individual, whose name the people own. These do not hesitate to call it a perfect riot of crime and it is hoped that the guilty party will be apprehended and given the punishment he richly deserves.

WHY Planting of Nut Orchards Would Be of Benefit

A movement has just been started to impress upon the people of the United States the vital part that nut trees of all kinds must have in any sound national or state tree-planting program in this country. Back of it are men who have achieved remarkable results through scientific experimental work in nut culture, and who are now striving to awaken the farmers of the country in particular to opportunity. It is well known that nuts, which are exceedingly rich in protein and fat, have long been disregarded as an item of the staple diet.

Nut trees in great numbers along the national and state highways, nut trees on the barren hillside, nut orchards of varieties especially adapted to climate, prolific in bearing and of good flavorness into the bargain—such a program, scientifically handled, will one day, according to the belief of authorities on the subject, help in a large measure to solve the problem of the nation's vanishing food supply. Such figures as these are cited: "A little nut orchard 200 miles square will supply one-third enough food to feed 100,000,000 citizens. Thus 25,000,000 acres of nut trees would more than supply the whole people of the United States with their two most expensive food products—protein and fat."

COULD NOT AFFORD BREAKAGE

Why Indians of North and South America Were Forced to Become Weavers of Baskets.

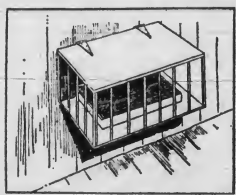

Many of the Indians of North America at the present time are experts in weaving water-tight baskets of reeds and roots. In South America they are woven from the native palm fronds. The Indians of South Africa are skilled basket weavers and are noted among the different tribes for their cunning disposal and adaptability of whatever substance is most convenient. In nomadic Indian races it became an acute necessity to possess unbreakable cooking and dining utensils, so the resourceful housewife instead of burning all of her twisted grass bundles began to find in them the possibilities she craved, for as yet in her nomadic capableness were no pieces of pottery. Basketry predated pottery for ages, but when the two were interlinked a great advance was made in household economics.

You'll be at the fair this week to meet your old friends and make numerous new ones.

PROTECTION FOR WATER PAN

Slatted Cage Attached to Wall is High Enough to Keep Out Fowls' Scratchings.

To protect the water pan in the poultry house or outdoors, make a cage with a hinged top, as shown. The fowls can readily reach inside and get a drink, and as the cage is fastened to the wall, several inches from the floor, there is little danger of having dirt scratched into the pan, writes B. Frank Boyer in Farm Journal. When placed outdoors, the top of the cage protects the water from the rays of the sun.

Water Pan Protected.

COLORADO BEETLE BAD PEST

Insects May Be Killed by Spraying With Strong Solution of Bordeaux Mixture.

The Colorado potato beetle is the worst pest which potato growers have to fight. They may be killed by spraying with a strong arsenic such as paris green, using at the rate of half pound to 50 gallons of bordeaux mixture.

IN MAKING BEET-TOP SILAGE

Same Fundamental Factors Involved as With Corn—Thorough Packing is Required.

The fundamental factors that are involved in making good corn silage also apply in making beet-top silage. Pack the mass thoroughly to exclude the free air and then seal tight. Good silage requires thorough packing.

MOISTURE INJURIOUS TO HAY

It Should Not Be Raked, Bunched or Put Into Stacks While It is Wet With Dew or Rain.

The hay maker must ever keep in mind that hay "goes" more likely to be injured by moisture than it is by heat. It is thus by nature that it is. Therefore it should not be raked, bunched or put into stacks when it is wet with dew or rain.

Goodyear Mileage—and Tires for Small Cars

A well built tire yields much more mileage for each dollar of cost than a tire purposely made to be offered at a sensationally low price; buy the tire, not the price.

Built to deliver exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost, Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3, 30x3½ and 31x4-inch sizes, save inconvenience, disappointment and money.

Their value results from the application of Goodyear experience, expertness and care to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—for the real worth and endurance that Goodyear builds into them.

GOODYEAR

We Are Not Above the Angels.

We are not the wonderful people—the Americans—of the traditions, the songs and the stories we cultivate and revere. Indeed, we are frauds to a greater or lesser extent. Our sham and make-believe qualities are revealed by what we call the little things of life.

Even in this classification our weakness displayed. For example, take blackberries. They have been most plentiful this season. In fact, there has been a glut of all forms of fruit. Yet in the cities, within a few miles of the localities where the surplus is rotting on the bush, anxious householders are denied a pitifully small supply. Prices are prohibitive.

Any community of men and women which cannot secure enough to eat in the midst of plenty is organized faultily. Stray curs and sparrows do not suffer under this reproach. Our means of transportation and communication have wonderfully, even miraculously, developed over the primitive devices of our forefathers. Strength, power and speed are in them, and our avenues of travel are safe and smooth. Yet we suffer for food while food decays.

Modern machinery and multiplied machinery have made it ridiculously easy to construct houses, and yet thousands of people live in kennel-wise fashion. Electric propulsion has rendered the horse obsolete in our cities, and people walk because the rates of fare are too high for the small purse. Where a hundred years ago there was one weaver there are millions of spindles in rapidly driven looms turning out vast quantities of cloth—silk, wool and cotton—and notwithstanding the tremendous increase in volume and a parallel reduction in comparative cost of production, the public goes about wearing patched garments.

The plain, though disagreeable, fact is that we do not function harmoniously. Whether, as charged, this is due to the inordinate love of money and a correspondingly evil disregard of the Golden Rule, or sheer inability properly to comprehend the real business of life, is left as a problem for our statesmen, philosophers and merchant princes to ponder and solve. It is enough to state the inescapable truth—Enquirer.

Home grown peaches were selling at 15¢ the local market last week at 15¢ per bushel.

The last edition of the blackberry crop furnished very much more fruit than the first crop. The late rains did the work.

State News.

Turtle and Dumplings.

Melvin Chapman and his son, John, went turtle hunting at Norton's Bend and captured nine. One of them weighed 17 pounds. They also caught a number of fish, mostly cats with their hands, by wading and feeling under rocks. Five of the turtles were caught in a hollow sycamore log. Mr. Chapman is very fond of turtle meat and says when it is cooked and served with dumplings it far exceeds chicken or turkey as a delicacy.—Harrodsburg Herald Sheep Killed by Lightning.

Clarence LeBus had 25 head of sheep killed at one of his farms near Cyrtiana during an electrical storm. They were lying in a bunch under a small apple tree. The tree was struck and the sheep were found dead as if they had not moved.—Ex.

Champion Tomato.

Mrs. Mollie Trice beat the record this season for growing the finest and largest tomato in her garden that has been reported to this office. The tomato was of the Ponderosa variety. It measured 17 inches in circumference and weighed 1½ pounds.—Pembroke Journal.

Premium Cabbage.

The Herald was honored by a gift of the premium cabbage at the Perryville fair. The head that won the blue ribbon weighed 7½ pounds and was raised by "Uncle Add" Stophor, who also took the blue ribbon on his wheat.—Harrodsburg Herald.

An Old Violin.

John Quincy Cochran, aged 74, a veteran of the civil war, who served as a Lieutenant in Co. A of the 14th Indiana Volunteer Infantry regiment, has a violin which he purchased for some tobacco of a rebel soldier after the surrender of General Robert E. Lee at Appomattox courthouse, which he prizes very highly. In the interior of the instrument in old German type are these words: "Josef Klotz, Mittenwalde in anno 1785, Germany." The ancient violin has that mellowness of tone which only age gives. Mr. Cochran is a fiddler of the old school and plays on his violin for a few minutes every day to keep in practice.

County Judge N. E. Riddell has greatly improved the looks of his residence by having it painted. Jerry Fowler was the artist.

TO THE INSURING PUBLIC.

The thing to do is not to do anything you do not want to do. If an agent sends you something that you didn't order send it back.

If he insists on you keeping it tell him to pack.

Mr. Farmer, I am not a jack of all trades, but I am working hard to have the best on the market in the way of farms to sell or buy. I have all kinds of insurance which goes with the real estate business. If you want more Fire insurance or a tornado policy on your grain, horses, cattle, hay, dwellings, or barns it will give me great pleasure to submit you my terms in advance and not feel offended if you do not want it. If you haven't the money just on the spot I will carry you for a while without interest. Come in when in town and let us reason together. I will have a pleasant surprise for all my customers in September. Join my large Kentucky Family of satisfied customers.

Very truly,

The last session of the Legislature changed the game laws, especially relating to the hunting of doves and squirrels. The open season for hunting doves is from September 1 to December 16, and fifteen doves is as many as may be killed in one day. The squirrel open season remains the same, from November 15 to January 1.

The quail open season remains the same, from November 15th to January 1, but only twelve quails may be killed in each day. Fines upon conviction of violating any provisions of the new law range from $15 to $50.—Pineville Sun.

The largest six weeks old calf probably ever brought to this market was sold this morning by sold this morning by W. W. Patton, of Greenwood vicinity. The calf weighed 315 pounds.—Bullitt County News

The police vouch for the truth of this story. A treasure—a live, genuine one—was found on Broadway late last night. Patrolmen Hill and Sanders discovered the treasure near the jewelry and sporting goods store of M. Manas 223 Broadway, and bagged him. How the treasure got downtown is still a mystery.—Paducah Sun.

Sandy Owens, aged 60 years, a well known Bourbon county negro, the past week married his seventh wife. Owens is the father of 27 children, 21 of them living. It is said that Owens' father had 33 children, and that a sister of Owens is the mother of twenty-one children.—Paris Kentuckian.

Lightning, after striking a tree close to the home of Mrs. Nanie Owens, at Augusta, tore a number of holes in the ground, went under the house, tore a doorstep in two in back part of the house and weatherboarding off in front. The front steps were knocked in the air and torn to pieces. No one was at home at the time.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Red Cross Assists

Disabled Veterans.

The American Red Cross is carrying on a wide program of service for the disabled World War veterans receiving treatment in United States Public Health hospitals, and those being trained through agencies of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

In each of the Public Health Service hospitals Red Cross workers devote their time to the general welfare of the service men from the day they enter the receiving ward until they are discharged. After the soldiers discharge the Red Cross continues its friendly service through the Home Service Section in his own community.

The Red Cross maintains a convalescent house at all of the hospitals, where patients can amuse themselves after they are well enough to be up and around. Parties and picture shows in the wards are also furnished, with occasional excursions when convalescence comes.

Great service has been rendered by the Red Cross in identifying those who have appeared in state hospitals for the insane, and helping them secure compensation due from the Bureau of War Risk Insurance.

In the Federal Board's various district offices the Red Cross worker, acting with the Home Service Section, makes necessary living conditions, helps collect evidence and supply facts to the Board, assists in "appealing cases" and settles various personal difficulties of the men. The workers also follow up and aid all men who discontinue training.

The Red Cross agents find men "lost" to the Board, help clear up delayed cases and aid college counselors in their friendly work with the men. Many Red Cross chapters have set up recreation facilities, and in some instances living clubs, so these victims of war may have attractive surroundings and the fun which go with effective school work.

To the American Red Cross Institute for the Blind near Baltimore, Md., more than half of all the Americans blinded in the World War have come for training. The Institute, thru the Red Cross, long ago conducted an exhaustive industrial survey to determine the vocations for which blind men could be fitted. As a result it is putting forth well trained men equipped to meet the social, civic and economic requirements of their respective communities.

Advice to Farmers.

In listing your farm for sale with a Real Estate firm, select the firms who have proven their salesmanship and their reliability.

The agents who have made business of the sale of Real Estate and are willing to spend their money, time and energy in the sale of your property, should be protected for a reasonable time by an exclusive contract.

All sound business is based in contracts, and the exclusive right contract is best for seller, buyer and agent. The exclusive right need not conflict with tenate, or the re-renting of your farm.

"What is every-body's business is nobody's business." This quotation applies, it seems to us, to the open Real Estate Market.

And the more they insist, the better it will be for us.

But it has done a great deal more than that.

It has brought people closer together, given them new interests, swept away old prejudices.

It's had its effect on the tire business.

FARM BUREAU

What Has Been Done for Its Members Shown By Six Months Report.

We are frequently asked—what is the Farm Bureau doing? The following is from the State Secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation:

Lexington, Ky. Every farmer in Kentucky who is a member of the County Farm Bureau is also a member of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation, and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The dues to the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation and the American Farm Bureau Federation are now being paid in. One half of these dues have been paid in, so every Farm Bureau member is now entitled to a six months report showing him what he received for his dollar.

The following is what his one dollar helped to accomplish:

Passed the Anti Strike Law in the Railroad Bill after it had been rejected by Congress.

After Congress had rejected an appropriation of one and one half million dollars from the Agricultural Appropriation Bill for the purpose of stabilizing the price of cotton, this item to be replaced in the Bill with an additional half million dollars added for the purpose of stabilizing the price of cotton.

Placed several plans in the Republican and Democratic platforms that are of great importance to all farmers.

Started plans for a gigantic grain marketing scheme that will eventually stabilize all grain markets and save farmers from five to ten million dollars annually in commissions.

Assisted in organizing Farm Bureaus in additional States, namely, Maine, Nevada, Wyoming, Florida and North Carolina, making a total of thirty-three states with a total membership of about 1,200,000.

Has assisted in organizing Farm Bureaus in fifteen additional counties in Kentucky, namely Bourbon, Boyd, Breckinridge, Barren, Carroll, Carlisle, Crittenden, Caldwell, Hickman, LaRue, Lawrence, Nelson, Marion, Oldham and Trimble, making a total of 47 counties now organized.

Passed the Farm Bureau Incorporation Law thru the Kentucky Legislature after it had been rejected by the Legislature.

Passed the Limestone Rate Bill giving a low freight rate on limestone for agricultural purposes.

Advised the Kentucky Capper Cooperative Marketing Bill from number 1500 on the Congressional calendar to within three of the top of the list, and later got the bill passed by the House of Representatives after it had remained in Committee for months and by inaction had threatened the extinction of the cooperative movement.

Defeated the Nolan Bill which would have added one billion dollars annually to the taxes of farmers.

Obtained an appropriation of one half million dollars to eradicate the European corn borer.

Arranged for long-time credits for farmers through the Federal Reserve Banks at a time when financial affairs were strained.

Assisted the sugar-beet farmers in the West to get satisfactory contracts from sugar factory concerns for increasing the beet area in the West by 12,000 acres for a million dollars to the growers.

Employed 75 mechanics of Clifford Thorne, the greatest railroad repair expert in the United States, to look after the interests of farmers at the rate hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington.

Assisted County Farm Bureaus in selling 600,000 pounds of wool in Kentucky.

Has obtained the cooperation of county, city and agricultural papers in giving the proper kind of publicity to agricultural matters and in presenting the problems of farmers to the people of the State from the correct viewpoint.

Has given to Mr. George Colvin, State Supervisor in construction, the backing of an effective organization to assist him in his laudable ambitions of giving the people of the State the best educational facilities that the equal of those now being given to children born in towns.

Has given to Mr. W. F. Hann, Commissioner of Agriculture, the support of organized farmers to help him in his ambitious plans for the development of agriculture in the State.

the price of wheat at least fifteen cents per bushel without raising the price of flour.

Further information regarding any of the above statements, can be obtained at Farm Bureau headquarters in your county.

If any member feels that he has not received full value for his dollar he is requested to write this office for further information. Every member, who is satisfied that his dollar has been well spent, is urged to see his neighbors promptly, and persuade them to join their County Farm Bureau, so that by their aid the work of the Bureau can be extended until the business of farming has been made as pleasant and profitable as any other business.

Do not put it off. See your neighbors today.

Yours Very Truly,

GEORGE MORGAN, Secretary.

Since March first through the Boone County Farm Bureau we have handled over $1,000 of feeds, seeds and fertilizers and over $1,000 of local exchange farm products. This means a saving to the members. Cooperative endeavor among farmers brings beneficial results quickly.

The regular meeting of the Directors of the Boone Co. Farm Bureau will be held in the office in Burlington Saturday, Sept. 4, at 1:30 p. m.

Fine Weather

Was Furnished For the Four Days of the Florence Fair Last Week.

The weather last week was all the management of the Florence fair could desire and as a result there was a fairly good attendance each day, and especially on Sunday when the crowds were very large.

The exhibition excepting as to horses was as good as that of any of the fairs of the past, but in the rings where there used to be many entries of fine animals there were only two or three entries of common stock and the exhibition created very little enthusiasm.

The show of milk cattle was unusually large, there being about 120 entries in the Jersey show, among them several as fine Jersey cows as are to be seen in Kentucky. Joseph Scott, the original Jersey breeder in this county, was there with bells on and carried away a number of prize ribbons. He showed one calf that proved to be unbeatable and took every premium for which it contested.

Among the exhibitors were W. G. Kite and S. B. Ryle, of Waterloo, who are engaged in breeding fine Jersey cattle, and they took quite a number of first premiums on their stock.

The show of sheep and hogs was very good and attracted considerable attention and much favorable comment. Of the above stock there were numerous breeds in the pens and the individuals on exhibition were exceedingly fine and showed that the breeders of hogs and sheep in this county are doing all in their power to bring them as near perfection as possible, and for which they deserve great credit.

Florida Hall came up every day with its usual large and attractive display in the way of farm products and art needle work, paintings and pantry and dairy. The ladies of the county contributed their part to the success of the exhibition as they have done every year in the past.

The association provided numerous attractions for those who desired to try their luck in various ways and they all appeared to reap a harvest.

The dancing pavilion was very popular with the young people, and they kept it crowded all times, using the dining hall every night until a late hour.

The artillery drill was worth the price of admission and the soldiers boys were given an enthusiastic reception. The other special attractions in the ring were very amusing to many of the crowd.

Taken as a whole the fair was as much of a success as any of the past.

There was a nice show of Holstein cattle. Theodore Carpenter, of Richmond, taking the greater number of premiums with his noted herd.

Of the 400 members of the boys club clubs in the county 17 had calves on exhibition Jersey cattle day.

Boone County Boy Honored.

Gov. Morrow has appointed J. W. Bradford, of Florence as a member of the State Board of Accountancy. Mr. Bradford has had considerable experience as an accountant, and has had an office in Cincinnati for several years. He has a host of friends who congratulate him on his preferment.

ORGANIZED

Tobacco Growers Meet and Prepare Constitution and By-Laws.

The Burley Tobacco Growers Association of Kentucky met at Lexington to prepare the constitution of the association and by-laws and apply for a charter.

The members of the organization committee, appointed and approved in the convention of tobacco growers of the three states are John W. Newman, chairman, and E. M. Mansfield, of Carrollton executive members; David Prewitt, of Clark county, secretary; and T. B. Hill, of Montgomery county; Martin L. Harris, Rising Sun, Ohio county, and C. Chapman, Clermont county, Ohio.

Harris has notified John W. Newman, of Woodford county, who is chairman of the association, that he probably will be unable to serve as a member of the committee and Newman has empowered him to appoint any prominent and widely known Burley grower to fill the vacancy.

It is possible that Everett McClure, of Dearborn county, Ind., grower of the highest grade of Burley tobacco, may be appointed to represent Indiana. McClure was named as a committee member in the convention, but resigned in favor of Harris.

The committee, according to its chairman and members, intends to rush the perfection of the organization of the association. It is generally realized among growers that unless the association is in full operation with its estimated 9,000 members before snow flies and the loose leaf markets open thousands of growers will be crushed in the latter days of the season as well as during the opening weeks.

A census of the 1920 burley crop and formation of plans for a systematic reduction of tobacco acreage in the country are the first big steps to be taken by the association. In the opinion of leading growers it is absolutely necessary that a census of the 1920 years crop be taken. A banner production of tobacco is looked for and the manufacturers are known to have already overstocked in certain grades.

Unless a census is taken and a plan worked out whereby the 1920 tobacco crop can be placed on the market in a systematic way, the inevitable downward trend in prices, disaster is sure to follow, and thousands of tobacco men say.

For blue seas favored tobacco growers give attention to thoughts to the ups and downs of foreign exchange, yet the ability to get the country's tobacco to secure a peacetime credit in this country is having a noticeable effect on the tobacco trade. Formerly it was about 600,000 pounds of Kentucky tobacco annually. Now it is unable to buy any because its bonds won't be taken in payment at any point near par, according to tobacco men. The same condition applies to Austria.

Macdonald, of Africa, Java and Egypt are flooding the markets of those countries with tobacco. These latter tobacco countries, having unloaded their crop, are planting more tobacco than ever before, and hope to crowd out Kentucky entirely in Europe.

State School System.

If we are to believe the recent announcement of the department of Education of the Russell Sage Foundation, westward the star of education takes its way.

Among the results of a comparative study of state school systems the department finds that Montana ranks first in the list of states graded for their all-around public school system, while New York is thirteenth in the series.

To those who have indulged the belief that Montana still is the home of the long horn and the habitat of the hilarious cowboy, this has a strange, strange sound. The modern moves on in educational warfare with New Jersey, California, and other states.

The director of the department declares the efficiency of the American schools is twice that of 50 years ago and only 52 per cent effective today.

During 30 years the West has been improving educationally, while the East has been going down. Utah has made the greatest gain, while California has the highest average record. Maryland has fallen off most in relative standing, while New Jersey is only Eastern State which has gained.

All the New England States former centers of culture, erudition and general educational efficiency, according to the announcement, have been losing ground while all the far Western States have improved.

Perhaps respect should be accorded the findings of the Sage Department of Education, but the people of Ohio, especially, and of the Middle West generally will be slow to admit such alleged superiority in the case of Montana or any other Western State. Measured by distinguished achievement in no school system in the Union can compare with that of Ohio, and with pardonable local pride, it may be said that it would be difficult to find any state of the Union today a city blessed by schools of such superior excellence as those of Cincinnati. We have yet to be convinced that Western systems and standards of education are of higher value and efficiency than are those of Ohio.

Federal Highway Construction.

The unprecedented stimulus given highway construction in the U. S. in the four years that have passed since the Federal Government entered upon its policy of aiding road building is shown by the fact that road operations under the Federal aid road act thus far initiated, aggregate in length more than the distance from New York to San Francisco, according to Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture.

The participation of the Federal Government's share in this stupendous undertaking is greater than the cost of the Panama Canal. The participation of the National Government in highway improvement marked a departure from a policy which had been followed for nearly a century.

The Federal cooperation with the States on approximately a "50-50" basis has counted more than any other factor, says Mr. MacDonald, in initiating highway construction that is being carried on under adequate supervision, and in accord with a program coordinating local, State and national needs.

That Big Lot Sale.

The Nonpareil lot and baby farm sale next Monday means more to Boone County than any first appearance of the Nonpareil lot in the next few years which they doubtless will be they will add considerably to the taxable wealth of Boone county.

One half of the subdivision is in this county. The subdivision is most desirably located and the lots look like a gold mine to anyone who has capital to invest and it is predicted that they will go like hot cakes. The completion of the Dixie Highway to Florence will make the location the most desirable of any the same distance from the city and it does seem that Boone county people should attend the sale and give it a boom as a matter of civic pride.

Encouraging Reports.

The crop reports from Kentucky are most encouraging. The rains came at exactly the right time, and there is promise of a record-breaking yield. The crop has a late start, but it is doing splendidly, and nothing but an unprecedented early frost can check the growth of the crop.

The pasturage is exceptionally good, and this means a big saving in the feeding of stock. And the oats and hay crops are every where showing sufficient provisions for live stock during the winter. On the whole Kentucky is more prosperous than last year, and the buying power of her people will make business good in all retail lines this fall.

If you fall to get any of the lots and baby farms that are going to be sold on Monday, you had better get them before they are sold.

Tobacco Field

Increasing Rapidly in Kentucky, Report Shows.

Some idea of the magnitude of the tobacco industry in Kentucky this year may be gained from information just made public thru the Department of Commerce at Washington.

According to the report, the total number of tobacco dealers in the state last year was approximately 4100, while the number of manufacturers in Kentucky was 275.

Of the latter 175 were manufacturers of cigars and 100 manufacturers of leaf. These were located in almost every city and town in Kentucky, with a big percentage located in Covington.

The report shows that the industry has grown rapidly during recent years.

Judge Tanner on a Visit.

Judge B. N. Tanner has returned from a visit to Oklahoma and Kentucky. In the west he visited his four sons C. T. R. T. S. H. and G. V. Tanner, and his daughter Mrs. W. M. A. Smith. The crops in Oklahoma are fine, he says.

Leaving Oklahoma, he spent a week at the home of his grand daughter, Mrs. Jesse Bristow, in St. Louis. From there he journeyed to Erlanger, Boone County, Kentucky, and visited in the families of fifteen families. He visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Markberry, where he was born and saw the little window where the sun came creeping in at morn.

Built almost one hundred years ago, Judge Tanner says that his old home looks natural and not a thing has been added or taken from it. He knocked at the door and was greeted by strangers. Mr. and Mrs. Markberry, who were so kind to him while there, that he was too full for utterance when he got ready to say good bye to them. He slept in the room where he had when he was a little boy and had not a faint conception of what this old world was like. None of us ever grew into a man, and none of us could comprehend until we spend many years in the school of experience and then the light only begins to dawn. Nobody can accurately describe the work in all its multitudinous phases, even though books with thousands of pages were written. Something important would be left out, inadvertently.

It is interesting to hear Judge Tanner describe his feelings as he stood in the yard and took a retrospective glance at the work he had done so many years, beyond the allotted time to man.

In all he visited 60 families, two of them his own sisters, Mrs. Ellen T. Smith and Mrs. Rebecca Houston. He never saw as much tobacco as he did in Kentucky and that and all other crops are growing splendidly. The grass probably outstripping them all, as it waves in the golden sunlight—Missouri Exchange.

The Destructive Forest Fire.

Let us consider the forest a little. We have been dealing with it a long time without giving it much consideration. It is time for us to think a bit seriously about it.

For the forest is of more importance to us than we generally think. It is not only our source of supply for timber of all kinds, it is one of the great regulators of rainfall, of streamflow, of agricultural activity. A decrease in the forest area of a country inevitably means longer droughts, and higher floodwaters. This is true because the forest cover absorbs and holds the water, giving it off gradually to the air and the soil. One needs only to compare the water flow from a wooded hill when a hard rain is falling, to realize what the forest cover means in this respect.

The forest cover is something more than the growing trees. It is essentially the floor these trees have laid on the ground about themselves—the dead, the decaying, the decayed leaves and branches and other forest residue. This forest cover of material that has become or is becoming humus is a great sponge that soaks up the water and holds it until the wet spell to release it when needed in dry spells. Dried-up springs and record breaking high waters are found in the wake of any extensive forest clearing.

Now, of course, we had to clear off some of the woodlands to develop any agriculture at all in these countries. We shall have to clear off even more of them as time goes on. But—and this is the point to remember—we do not know how to clear the forest floor, to destroy the forest floor, to destroy the forest floor, to destroy the forest floor.

The decaying matter under the trees is making soil. When it is burned off the soil is robbed of that richness, when it is burned, the value of the forest is lost. The forest floor is greatly reduced, though the forest trees be destroyed.

Thousands and thousands of acres of woodland are being destroyed by forest fires.

Stolen Automobile Recovered.

On the night of the 17th of last July A. W. Corns' six cylinder Buick automobile was stolen from his garage in Erlanger. No track nor trace could be found of the machine although cards containing its description were sent out in every direction. Last Monday Mr. Corn received a telephone message from Lexington, stating that the sender of the message thought he had located his car in that city. The party sending the message is a dealer in second hand cars, and had come into possession of a card describing Mr. Corns' car. Mr. Corn communicated with B. B. Hume in regard to the matter and Monday night they went to Lexington and identified the car which they brought home Tuesday. This also the party, Lewis Rosenbaum, who claimed he bought the car. Rosenbaum was lodged in the Covington jail charged with having stolen property in his possession. Rosenbaum gave information that lead to the arrest of two other parties who he implicated in the theft. The machine had been kept in an out of the way place in Ohio until about two weeks ago when it was taken to Lexington, where it was discovered.

The 1920-1921 session of the Boone County High School will begin Monday, Sept. 6th. The same faculty as last year has been employed with the exception of the principalship, which position will be filled by E. A. Skillman, a teacher of wide experience. From all indications we can look forward to a most successful school year.

Since the Burlington school will not be operated under the Smith-Hughes Act, the High School course will be readjusted. A strong standard course will be offered, which will meet every requirement of the State Department of Education and the different universities of Kentucky and other States. Students will be given the opportunity to pursue either the Scientific, English or Classical course. Mr. Skillman states that thoroughness will be the watchword for the year's work. Thoroughness in the basic or essential subjects seems preferable to superficial departments when sufficient money is not available for the proper conduct of such courses. The courses of study will appear in a later edition.

Notice to Tobacco Buyers.

We wish to announce to Tobacco Buyers and Companies intending to purchase some of the 1920 crop of Tobacco in Boone County and desiring the best of quality, that we have one of the County's leading crops developing now and will soon be ready for the knife. We invite your inspection now while growing and also at various times during curing, as it will be handled with the greatest care, and when shipped and graded, will be given the benefit of years of experience in growing tobacco.

The purchase of a number one crop often saves the reputation of a buyer as it sometimes helps to work off some inferior he may have, and it is all times a pleasure as well as profitable for a buyer to handle a fine crop.

The kind of tobacco—White Holly of course grown on old blue grass soil.

What Will She Do With It?

The courts at Washington having refused to intervene in estoppel of Secretary Colby's issuance of the woman suffrage proclamation, it followed that this step completing the formal ratification of the nineteenth amendment to the federal constitution was taken without further postponement. There is yet to be cleared away the cloud of question as to the contravention of the State constitution of Tennessee. Satisfying their spleen with some rather ugly charges, very much after the manner of the male of the political species, the anti's have folded their tents in the camp of local opposition at Nashville and withdrawn forces for concentration in later court attack. But the fact of woman suffrage as a national institution is to all intents and purposes established beyond the peradventure of reasonable doubt. By figures compiled through our very more or less superficial it is estimated that the Susan B. Anthony amendment adds to the voting strength of the U. S. some 27,000,000, that being the number of women of voting age in America. It is true that since 1919 a large number of women have had a voice in Federal as well as State elections, but the calculation is made on the general application of the amendment. Two questions are asked with interest and curiosity, to wit: How many of these women will vote, and, How will these women vote? The answer to both is a mystery of the ballot box which it may not fully reveal even after the test of the official count. Two partial answers are possible—many of them will not please to vote and most of them who do will vote as they please. As to further light some study of figures may be helpful by way of experimental calculation.

Interested statisticians who have already been consulting the oracle on official returns give us facts and conclusions to the effect that in 1918, the great of woman suffrage in national expression, the total vote, male and female, cast for President was only 15,293,743; that the percentage of voters to population has for years decreased, citing that fewer votes were cast in 1904 than in 1896 and that there were 3,000,000 less cast in 1912 than in 1908. From this conclusion is drawn that it will take a deal of hustling, organization and urging on the part of parties and party workers to get as many as 30,000,000 voters, both male and female, to register choice throughout the States in the 1920 campaign finish.

One of the arguments urged against woman suffrage has been from the beginning that the majority of women are indifferent to exercise and in consequence will not take advantage of their new privilege or discharge their new duty. The calculations cited indicate that if it fall out of these prophecies are justified by developments of womanly indifference to suffrage rights, privileges and obligations, the fact will remain that she is in that respect neither more culpable nor more cowardly than her denominated lord and master, who for many moons has been in large measure leaving the determination of popular election, primary and final, to the place hunters, the office brokers and the bidders for privilege.

JOHNSON LAUDS GOOD ROADS

California Statesman Says Improved Highways Have Helped to Develop His State.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California, in speaking of the necessity of improved highways in the United States recently said:

"We have had a great object lesson of the value of good roads in the paved highways of my own state—California. They have been a great factor in the development of the state, opening up regions which hitherto were inaccessible and adding to the prosperity of all. The improvement of the nation's highways will be of great economic value to the country as a whole, relieving the congestion which now exists on other transportation facilities and making distribution of the nation's commodities easier and cheaper. The good roads movement meets with my warmest approval."

BIG PROGRAM IN MINNESOTA

Construction Plans Call for Expenditure of $11,127,986—Trucks Sold to Farmers.

Minnesota has a road building program calling for the expenditure of $11,127,986. As an illustration of what the farmers of that state think of the motortruck a statement recently issued by a bank in Minneapolis might be cited, in which it is said that "trucks in large numbers, intended for immediate use in marketing grains, are being sold to farmers." Elevator scales in many places are being remodelled to accommodate the growing fleet of farmers' trucks.

BONDS FOR IMPROVED ROADS

Districts, Counties and States Making Big Appropriation for Better Highway Systems.

Bonds running high into millions of dollars are being issued by districts, counties and states for the making of better roads. The national government is aiding by appropriating money also, based on the amounts raised by the states.

CLUB GIRL'S HENS PAY WELL

Valerie Henning of Mississippi is Paying Her Way Through College on Profits From Flock.

"I am a poultry club member, and my records show that this year the net profits from my chickens were $25.35." This is the report of Valerie Henning of Panola county, Mississippi, who at sixteen holds the championship of her state in poultry-club work. She, with six other Mississippi girls and two chaperons, recently visited Washington. The five-day trip was a prize offered by Mississippi bankers and business men to the girl in each district of the state who made the largest profit in her club work.

Miss Henning has been a member for two years of one of the poultry clubs supervised by the United States department of agriculture and the state colleges.

To obtain her start in club work she borrowed $15.50 from a local bank. With this money a pen of Barred Plymouth Rocks, consisting of four hens and one cockerel, was bought. The profits from her chickens last year, her first in poultry work, were $25.35.

For 1919 she had two cockerels and nineteen hens. By the use of trap nests and leg bands the record as a layer of each hen had been observed, and only the good egg producers were kept. From January 1 to October 15 the 19 birds laid 2,341 eggs. Miss Henning sells nearly all the eggs for hatching purposes; but the birds she raises, aside from the culled, bring from $15 to $20 a pen.

The money this club girl has made through her poultry work is being used to pay her way through an agricultural high school.

DESIRABLE HENS TO RETAIN

On Most Farms Size of Flock Could Well Be Increased—Range Is Very Important.

The average farmer might find it desirable to increase the size of the flock of hens. While most farmers have little time to devote to poultry raising, yet their families may attend to the fowls and see that they are well cared for and protected.

The usual "advice" to poultry raisers to begin with a few hens is sound. But on most farms the women and girls have had the responsibility of the flock for years and most of them could afford to increase the number of laying hens.

Range is very important for poultry. But range alone is not enough. The fowls must have feed and shelter when they need them.

When one is about to increase the number of hens it is well to see that those kept are worth keeping. Poor hens are not an asset; they are generally a liability.

POULTRY NOTES

Cull out weak or slow-growing chicks.

Eggs being taken to market should be protected from the sun's rays.

If the hen house is damp, it is safe to say fewer eggs will be laid.

Fertile eggs will withstand market conditions much better than fertile eggs.

A chicken can stand any amount of cold, but very little moisture, when housed.

Rapid growth and no bowel trouble are essential in developing profitable flocks of chicks.

Make hens take exercise by feeding them in the yard, where they will have to scratch for it.

Begin marketing the cockerels as soon as they weigh 1½ pounds or at this a marketable weight.

of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her."

IN FALL CLOTHES

Milady's Garb Must Be Very Tight or Very Loose.

No Happy Medium Is Indicated by Styles Arising in Larger Cities From Paris.

It's time to start altering last year's clothes for next fall, or saving money for new ones, advises a New York fashion correspondent. The female fashions of the larger cities are now receiving the first shipments of Parisian fall styles.

Suits and coats have changed materially from those of the last winter season. In suits, the new features are choker or Robespierre collars, long, hip-reducing coats, lavish fur and pile fabric trimmings, and loose mandarin coat and kimono sleeve.

A typical model for the fall of 1920, much ogled in shop windows, comes in navy blue fur. The jacket is cut like a loose kimono with deep armholes extending into flowing sleeves which fall over tight, long coats of moleskin; a close-fitting choker collar is also used. The kimono jacket is belted at the back, but shorter and fuller than those of yesterday.

Although a majority of the new suits seem to be variations of this mandarin type, a shipment from one leading Parisian house employs the fitted basque jacket with Robespierre collar and tight, fitted sleeves. But there is no happy medium. The autumnal garb of milady of fashion must be either very loose or very tight.

If the general effect is one of tightness, then the long glove fitting coat is used. This is often trimmed with braid or wool embroideries, trailing from the lapel to the end of the coat. Vests or gilets are still used, but are quite eccentric and entirely free from frilly feminine blandishments. Many suits are made with white kid vests embroidered in silk or metallic threads. Vests of the same material quite gay with colored stenciling are also seen.

The strictly tailored suit skirt of the spring suits alternates in favor with the drapy, peg-topped ones that almost billow about the sheepsfoot. Fur bottoms are on many of the skirts, and, in fact, fur is profusely scattered over all the more expensive suits. Plush and fabric imitations abound on the cheaper suits, collars, cuffs and even belts are made of fur alone. Suit materials are velvets, plushes, velours de laine and duvetyne, black, blue, gray and brown are the leading colors.

EGYPTIAN SHADES IN FAVOR

Ancients Had Well-Developed Ideas of Colors and Wonderful Knowledge of Line.

Thousands of years ago Egypt was the center of the world's art and learning; long before the Greeks had achieved civilization this ancient race knew much of astronomy and geometry. It is within their pyramid-like tombs that we find the first known traces of line.

Their sense of color was well developed, and the draped garments of their women showed a wonderful knowledge of line. This summer among the season's popular shades are Egyptian red, blue and yellow, while among the smartest of the frocks and wraps are those which show a decided Egyptian influence.

Flats, too, reveal the same touch, the winged globe that served symbol for the ancient Egyptian deity the sun, often forming the motif for the beaded or embroidered ornaments which decorated them.

The Finest Coatings. The latest coatings are heavy pile velvets and plushes.

Film Shows Treatment of Flock at Culling Time in Fall and on to Selling of Lambs.

A motion picture film dealing with sheep on the farm has recently been completed by the film laboratories of the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with the bureau of animal industry. The film is now available for use by county agents, county or state sheep-breeder's association, agricultural colleges, and other department or co-operative workers or agencies.

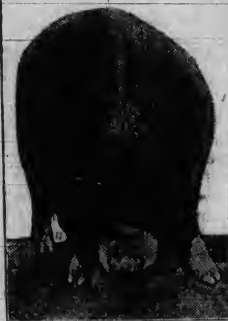

The film is in three sections and four reels. About 45 minutes is required for the showing of the whole production.

The subject treated in the first and second reel is a year with the flock on the farm, beginning in the fall at the time that the ewe flock should be culled prior to breeding, and carrying it on through until the lambs are sold. Each seasonal practice is brought out and educational points are featured. The third reel deals with the co-operative marketing of wool and lambs, and the fourth reel with the slaughtering of a mutton sheep, dressing the carcass, and then cutting it up for meat consumption.

MEAT SUPPLIES FOR FAMILY

Greater Portion of Pork Products Used by Farmers Are Produced on Home Farm.

Nearly two-thirds of the meat eaten on the farm is pork, the average farm consumption of pork being over 500 pounds per family. The greater portion of the pork products used by farmers are produced on the home farm. A small number of pigs can be raised cheaply, says the United States department of agriculture. Kitchen and garden wastes, and sometimes dairy by-products, are available for feed. The farmer usually kills the hogs and dresses them on his own place. The hog furnishes a good variety of meat and also lard. The smoke house, a common improvement on the farm, provides a convenient way for curing pork.

SHEEP BUSINESS PROFITABLE

Study Being Made of Specialized Raising With Complete Reliance on Forage Crops.

Results of a farm sheep experiment reported by the United States department of agriculture show clearly the possibility of a profitable sheep-raising business upon eastern lands. At the government farm, Beltsville, Md., a study is being made of specialized intensive sheep raising with complete reliance upon forage crops for summer pasturage.
